Dr. Gill's address to graduates also dealt with success, expressing that it's different for each person (see page 15 for his complete speech). The departing principal told his last class of students that to him, the most successful people in life are the ones who "treat people kindly and with respect."

When Superintendent Barbara Cataldo, who started working in Cohasset last summer, addressed the audience, she shared that her speech came directly from the mouths of the seniors graduating that day. Cataldo revealed that she surveyed as many seniors as possible, asking them to reflect on two statements: "I'll never forget the time that —," and "The lesson I will take away from my time in Cohasset is —."

"Their responses were surprising, thought-provoking and genuine," said Cataldo. "Their statements were brief, but revealing, and four themes emerged." These themes were, the Supt. said: "Your children recognize the value of hard work… They value the importance of being a leader and not a follower… They desire to be challenged… The students noted that relationships are an integral part of their lives."

Cataldo shared such quotes from seniors as, "Effort makes a difference" and "Nothing is given to you" without revealing who said them. What was most important, said the Supt., was that the class of 2012 has "learned many lessons that will carry them through life, taking in lessons not overtly presented in our classrooms or our homes.

"This is a very special class — my first class to see graduate [in Cohasset] and Dr. Gill's last," Cataldo shared. "It is a happy time for all of us."

The Supt. closed with a quote by Ralph Waldo Emerson: "Do not go where the path may lead; go instead where there is no path and lead a trail."

Salutatorian Kaye Slamp took the stage after Cataldo, sharing with her classmates statistics that show how much more likely high school graduates are to succeed than drop-outs. High school graduates, for instance, are 37 percent less likely to be out of work than non-grads, Slamp shared.

"What we have achieved is anything but small," Slamp added. "It's life-changing… Today is the culmination of four years of big moments."

Like Dr. Gill, the salutatorian acknowledged that "success is different for everyone." Slamp encouraged her fellow grads to "make sure to be who you are, not who someone else wants you to be."

Co-valedictorians Madeline O'Grady and Isabel Robinson gave speeches one after the other. O'Grady opened with an anecdote about her struggles to open her locker over all four years of high school, and how she never got around to asking to have it fixed.

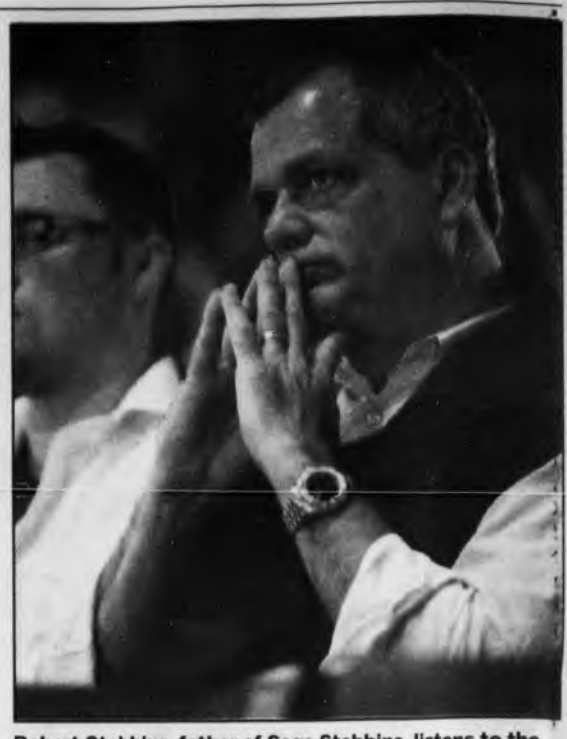
"Some things never change — we will still procrastinate and fret about our futures," said O'Grady. However, she said, she and her fellow seniors "have learned to work hard and to work together to reach our goals."

What is perhaps most impressive about this senior class, according to O'Grady, is the fact that the students donated over 1,000 cumulative hours of volunteer service.

"Our class has been deeply privileged with opportunity," said O'Grady. "It's our responsibility to use the experience we have gained to give back to others who have not been given the same opportunities."

O'Grady announced the formation of the Dr. Michael Gill Scholarship, which will be implemented beginning with the class of 2013.

"Dr. Gill has embodied the 'pal' part of principal," said O'Grady, by showing "genuine concern for each student."



Dr. Gill thanked the class for the honor and said that he'll have to attend next year's graduation ceremony to see the award. But he told the students "this is your day," and deferred to Robinson, who was next in line to address her fellow graduates.

Robinson thanked the CHS faculty for "pushing us to be our best and putting up with us at less-than-perfect moments.

"Cohasset has given so much to every one of us," Robinson added. Graduation day "is so surreal. We should all be proud of ourselves."

Following the National Honors Society awards, the presentation to retirees, and Dr. Gill's address, the class of 2012 crossed the stage to receive their diplomas and step into their next phase of life.

Jaundoo then led his classmates in the big graduation moment: the ceremonious turning of the tassel. The tassels were turned to the other side, caps were tossed triumphantly, and Cohasset's class of 2012 filed out of the Music Circus in a cheerfully jumbled manner. No longer walking single-file, step-touch, step-touch, the CHS graduates were free to run to their loved ones, friends and now-former classmates to celebrate the next big step.

have been done in the middle of the night or early morning, when no one would have seen it.

The culprit "was struggling with the big one," said Barrows. "I could tell, just with all the mangling; it's pretty bad."

The pin oak in particular, the arborist said, was "on its way to becoming a beautiful tree."

Barrows said that he and MCA Andrew Swanson, the town's tree warden, and members of the Central Cemetery committee, are baffled by the act. Barrows, Swanson and committee member Jim Watson all gathered at the site Monday morning to survey the damage.

Perhaps what's most disturbing to Barrows is that he's seen this all before.

"This is ongoing," said the arborist. "It goes back pretty darn far."

It's a long story that dates back to 2004, Barrows explained. The two trees that were originally planted on the island and near the cemetery were cut down, replaced, poisoned, and then replaced again, only to be topped several years later. Why?

"It's town vandalism," Barrows concluded. "It is what it is."

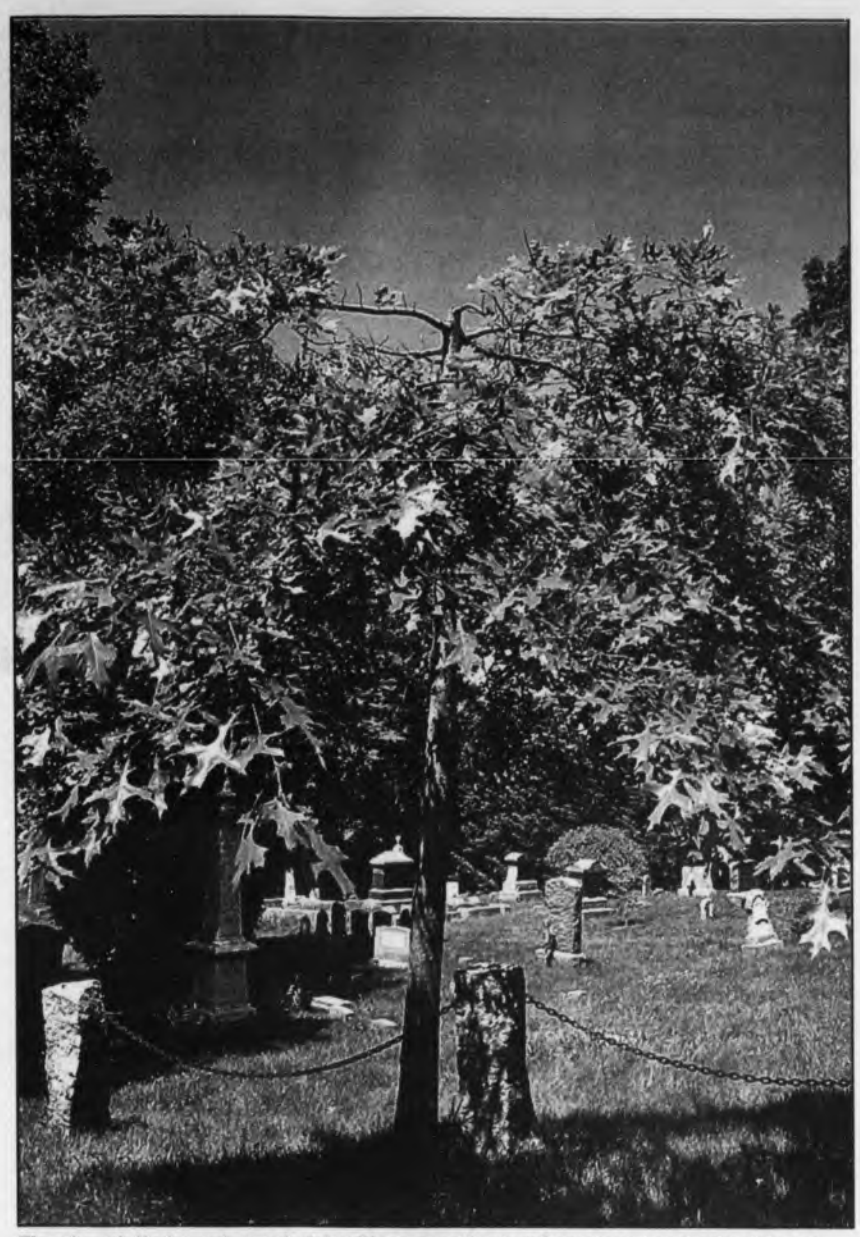
In 2004, then Town Manager Mark Haddad and Rob Kasameyer of 103 N. Main St. took responsibility for two trees that were taken down. The Board of Selectmen at the time had asked members of the community to volunteer through the "Adopt an Island" program in an effort to beautify the town. Volunteers were responsible for general upkeep of the islands, including planting throughout the seasons to enhance their appearance. Kasameyer adopted the Lyons memorial island, located across the street from his house. He said that Haddad gave him permission to cut down the trees, which Kasameyer said would experience impaired health due to their proximity to the street. He planned to consult an arborist and plant something else in their place. Haddad later apologized and said that he should have referred Kasameyer to the tree warden.

The matter stirred up controversy in town at the time, with many residents concerned about the tree on the veterans square; some believed erroneously that the tree was planted in Capt. Lyons' honor. Glenn Pratt, who serves on the Veterans Memorial Committee, said at the time that the tree wasn't planted in memory of Lyons, adding that as far as he knows, the island was turned into a memorial site in 1996. The Mariner reported that Peter Laugelle of the Tree & Park Department said he planted the pin oak in 1982, at the request of Edward Tower, former President of the Central Cemetery Committee, and confirmed it is not a dedicated tree. Any tree in town that has been dedicated to someone has a bronze plaque designating it is a memorial tree, and the original oak on the island was planted only as an ornamental tree.

Still, Watson said that this time, the tree should have been left alone.

"That square the tree is in is dedicated to a guy who gave his life in Vietnam. For somebody to tamper with anything related to that in anyway... I can't imagine doing that," said Watson.

While the tree was not planted for the veteran, Barrows still thinks the local chapter of the American Legion should be notified. Swanson already alerted the police to have them investigate the matter.



If someone confesses to topping the two trees, Barrows admitted that there's little that can be done.

Back in 2004, when Kasameyer was maintaining the island and removed the tree there, he contributed to the cost of replacing the trees he removed, while Haddad took responsibility for failing to notify the tree warden. Kasameyer is no longer in charge of the island at the intersection of Joy Place and N. Main, his wife said in a phone call.

Cohasset residents are not allowed to simply trim trees if they are in their line of sight, according to the tree warden. If a citizen would like to cut down a tree on town property, they must first inform the tree warden. He will make a site visit and determine the condition of the tree and whether it needs to be removed. If removal is necessary, he will be responsible for making those contacts. However, if a resident wants to remove a tree because it's a nuisance and there is no threat if it remains, there must be a shade tree hearing before the selectmen, which is advertised in the newspaper and posted for two weeks, according to Swanson.

Barrows, Swanson and members of the cemetery committee do not know who is responsible this time around. The arborist said that while he has seen the trees at this site get taken down, poisoned, replaced and damaged again, he hopes that this was the last time. "This last time was a no-no," he said.

"These trees were just on their way to becoming something; now they're completely destroyed," Barrows said.

What is topping, and why is it bad for trees?

Topping is the indiscriminate cutting of tree branches to stubs or lateral branches that are not large enough to assume the terminal role. Other names for topping include "heading," "tipping," "hatracking," and "rounding over." The most common reason given for topping is to reduce the size of a tree. Homeowners often feel that their trees have become too large for their property. People fear that tall trees may pose a hazard. Topping, however, is not a viable method of height reduction and certainly does not reduce the hazard. In fact, topping will make a tree more hazardous in the long term.

Topping:

Stresses trees: Topping often removes 50 to 100 percent of the leaf-bearing crown of a tree. The severity of the pruning triggers a sort of survival mechanism. A stressed tree is more vulnerable to insect and disease infestations.

Causes decay: Cuts made along a limb between lateral branches create stubs with wounds that the tree may not be able to close. The exposed wood tissues begin to decay.

Can lead to sunburn: Branches within a tree's crown produce thousands of leaves to absorb sunlight. When the leaves are removed, the remaining branches and trunk are suddenly exposed to high levels of light and heat. The result may be sunburn of the tissues beneath the bark, which can lead to cankers, bark splitting, and death of some branches.

Creates hazards: The survival mechanism that causes a tree to produce multiple shoots below each topping cut comes at great expense to the tree. The new shoots grow quickly, as much as 20 feet in one year, in some species. Unfortunately, the shoots are prone to breaking, especially during windy conditions. The irony is that while the goal was to reduce the tree's height to make it safer, it has been made more hazardous than before.

Diminishes a tree's aesthetic qualities: Trees form a variety of shapes and growth habits, all with the same goal of presenting their leaves to the sun. Topping destroys the natural form of a tree. Without leaves (up to 6 months of the year in temperate climates), a topped tree appears disfigured and mutilated. A tree that has been topped can never fully regain its natural form.

Is expensive: If the tree survives, it will require pruning again within a few years. It will either need to be reduced again or storm damage will have to be cleaned up. If the tree dies, it will have to be removed. Topping is a high-maintenance pruning practice, with some hidden costs. One is the reduction in property value. Another possible cost of topped trees is potential liability. Because topping is considered an unacceptable pruning practice, any damage caused by branch failure of a topped tree may lead to a finding of negligence in a court of law.

OUR VIEW

Class of 2012: We wish you a hero

A pundit once suggested that commencement speakers refrain from frightening graduating seniors by telling them the world was theirs.

The world as we travel through the 12th year of the 21st century is a troublesome place.

War, disease, social injustice, financial woes and poverty still tear our planet apart.

Looking over past years, we sometimes wonder if we have made progress.

The First World War was supposed to be the war that was going to make the world safe for democracy, yet in regions across the globe there are still leaders who value holding power in their own fists above the welfare of their people.

The dawning of the Age of Aquarius in the 1960s was supposed to usher in harmony, understanding, love, and peace. Well.... we're not exactly there yet.

Sometimes we wonder if the world is getting better or worse.

Yet out the mire of the world's despair rise heroes.

The soldiers on the battlefield fighting for freedom.

The doctors, nurses, and scientists who strive to save us from the scourge of disease.

The teachers who open the door to tomorrow to their students.

The technologists who make our lives safer, more interesting, and easier.

These are just some of our heroes.

As you look back on your achievements and look forward to future challenges and successes, consider the heroes who inspired you to do more than you thought you ever could.

You'll probably see that over the years your idea of heroism becomes deeper.

"Superman or Captain Marvel. If someone had asked me what a champion is when I was a child, I probably would have answered by naming these two superheroes of the day. During this time, I didn't realize how the kindness of a few key people could parallel the life-saving feats superheroes regularly performed... instead of muscles of steel, they protected me with the strength of their kindness," journalist Bob Danzig once wrote.

Former US Congressman and Alabama Governor Bob Riley may have put it best: "Hard times don't create heroes. It is during the hard times when the 'hero' within us is revealed."

Class of 2012, we wish you well.

We wish you a hero.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Police Chief under fire déjà vu

When reading the articles, I was getting a strong sense of déjà vu. Didn't we just go through the same problems and issues with our former Town Manager Mike Coughlin with his complaining and threatening the town's Selectmen of ethical, civil or criminal sanctions, where it did get him fired? So now we have Police Chief Mark Deluca who is no different then Mike Coughlin with the same threats. Chief DeLuca's attorney Jack Collins is way out of line with his comments. They want to put their own people in there and have the inmates running the asylum. You talk like our town is a bunch of idiotic, illiterate people.

Mr. Collins your client has more to learn then being politically correct to getting along with people in the town. DeLuca claims he's acting on principles. I don't think so! I'm a citizen of the town and I would say the only thing he's acting on is his ego. From day one, DeLuca had his own agenda and it's all coming apart. It's about time. As the Chief of Police, he was in a position to do what he wanted and nobody questioned his authority until now. His being put on paid leave has nothing to do with his opposing the station going dark, as the police union president Patrick Reardon stated. Mr. Collins you said you talked with DeLuca and made it clear he only has six years left till retirement. I wonder if the people DeLuca hurt were given the same advice. How ironic is that?

I'm quoting one of DeLuca's supporters. "A man's reputation is the only thing he has at the end of the day." How many reputations were ruined because of DeLuca's position of authority? I know a few! It's clear the only conscience that needs to be redeemed is the one that's under fire.

Susan J. Keoseian, 19 Parker Avenue

Our World lease

Your June 1st article about the Library Trustees not wishing that the town renew the lease for Our World Children's Discovery Museum is a matter of concern.

I am dismayed and disappointed to learn of the Library Trustees' plans to expand their space and kick out the Children's Museum. The Museum, at its expense, has transformed that space into a wonderful place to play and learn, especially with the terrific playground outside.

The Trustees might focus instead on improving library services offered in their existing space. For starters, put out a suggestion box, visible and near the front door, to obtain feedback from current users. Adding more meeting space is the least of this library user's concerns.

Brandy Chapman, 104 Pleasant St.

Thank you, Water Commissioners!

I was delighted to read the results of the water RFP in last week's Mariner. The new contract will save the overburdened taxpayer $1.25 million. Rare and good news these days for a cash strapped town and a great example to other boards and public officials of serving in the citizen's best interests.

The benefits we will enjoy are due to the robust RFP process the commissioners chose to follow. The only blemish on this process was the repeated and vitriolic personal attacks the commissioners had to endure from a tiny minority. The concerns raised have been shown to be groundless so it would appear an apology from the tiny minority is in order.

In the meantime, I know I speak for many in congratulating and thanking the water commissioners Peter DeCaprio, Christopher Seebeck and Leonora Jenkins for their good stewardship and representing the town so effectively. Well done!

Seniors appreciate entertaining outing

On Tuesday, June 5th a group of 20-plus seniors attended a showing of "The Movie Queen" at the Historical Society. This movie, which was filmed in 1939 around Cohasset, featured a cast of residents, thereby offering attendees the opportunity to spot old friends and family, and view nostalgia-provoking images of the town from over 70 years ago. After the movie, The Friends of Cohasset Elders sponsored a box lunch.

Cohasset Elder Affairs would like to thank the Historical Society, The Friends of Cohasset Elders and Cohasset Pizza House for combining their resources to provide a delightful and entertaining outing for Cohasset Seniors.

Coral Grande, Director of Cohasset Elder Affairs

Deer Hill Playground renovation

The Cohasset PSO is launching an initiative to look into renovating the Deer Hill Playground and are interested in your feedback. Deer Hill students and parents from both the Deer Hill and Osgood Schools have been asked to fill out surveys. If you have children in the summer Recreation Program or are interested in sharing your thoughts about this project then please fill out the Survey Monkey at the following address: https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/S8BJYMJ. It shouldn't take you any more than one or two minutes. The Survey will run through Tuesday, June 12. If you have any questions, would like to get involved or would like to make a donation please contact Sharon Smith at jssssb@verizon.net.

Many thanks.

PAUL CARLSON

To accuse the selectmen of violating this law is not truthful. To make such a serious allegation without any proof is wrong.

The May 18 issue of the Cohasset Mariner carried an editorial which stated in part that "government by email has become the norm," thereby charging a serious violation of the Open Meeting Law. The editorial did not present any direct evidence. A charge of this magnitude should be buttressed by facts, not guesses.

"Government by email" is a term used to describe email discussions and deliberations about public business in private communications rather in open public meetings. Under the Massachusetts Open Meeting Law, private discussions and deliberations concerning public issues by a quorum of a public body such as the Board of Selectmen are against the law.

While there is a limited amount of email traffic between the selectmen, it is administrative in nature as permitted by the law. In my experience discussion and deliberation of the issues through email or other private communications simply do not occur between and among our members. We take the Open Meeting Law and all other laws seriously. To accuse the selectmen of violating this law is not truthful. To make such a serious allegation without any proof is wrong.

We can do more to make our email traffic accessible to public inspection. I will be working with the town's new Information Technology Officer, Rob Bonnell, to design and implement such a system. I have already met with Mary Ford, Editor of the Mariner, to discuss some of my ideas and to benefit from her input. While Rob has a great deal on his agenda, I hope to have this system available by late summer. In addition, I would appreciate suggestions from anybody.

HEALTH NOTES

Are we prepared?

STEVE BOBO

The recent experience of western Massachusetts as well as Midwestern states has once again prompted discussions and considerable concern about preparedness of facilities and towns in the Greater Boston area as well as suburbs throughout the state. In particular, an example of 4Bs work is the temporary shelters they organized for last year's hurricane in Scituate and Hull. Also, that volunteers for Region 4B were contacted to help with those shelters. For this reason, the centralized Public Health Emergency Preparedness organization for the Greater Boston area known as Region 4B in Cambridge has significant benefits, especially for little Cohasset, staffed by a regional coordinator and others who are funded by state emergency preparedness dollars from Washington. We have made use of this largesse by equipping our emergency personnel with the newest technical gear and practices. Also, the 4B headquarters in Cambridge is able to render day-to-day assistance for all communities in the region including Cohasset. They provide guidance to local and state health officials on serving the needs of all communities and assist local health officials with development of our plans for public health contingencies as well as helping with training and exercises which test these local plans.

In meetings here in Cohasset, the 4B regional staff facilitated the recruitment of qualified volunteers to support public health emergency response. The Region 4B Medical Reserve Corps has recruited more than 2,000 medical and non-medical volunteers from throughout the region. Cohasset has, with other Region 4B communities, participated with the Cambridge Advanced Practice Center in the development of procedures and supplied resources that supplement our very limited capacity to manage the complexities of public health preparedness. These resources have been adopted for use by Region 4B and are shared, through the Mass Department of Public Health with the other Emergency Preparedness Regions in the Commonwealth.

Representatives from Cohasset, and the 26 other Greater Boston communities that make up the 4B network meet monthly to plan, train and conduct exercises for our respective towns to prepare for public health emergencies. Further they provide information to help implement a local emergency notification system that coordinates with MDPH to provide constant notification and communication within the region. They assist in numerous other tasks including: Developing plans for emergency dispensing site setup and operations; coordinating development of a model public health mutual aid agreement; designing a regional model for epidemiology services, including data assessment and communicable disease support for local communities and measuring regional progress toward preparedness. Local volunteers can choose which communities in the region they would like to serve. Volunteers should include: Practicing, retired or otherwise employed health professionals, including physicians, nurses, pharmacists, dentists, nursing assistants, veterinarians, and respiratory therapists.

MRC volunteers can be either active or inactive in their profession, retired or students. Licensed medical professionals must maintain a current license if they are volunteering to provide medical services within the scope of their license. Medical professionals with an inactive license may still volunteer to provide other services to the Medical Reserve Corps. For more information about the program, please contact the Region 4B MRC coordinator at 617-665-3702 or general information is available on the health department's region 4B Medical Reserve Corps web page. United States citizenship is not required to be a Medical Reserve Corps volunteer.

For a review of Region 4B communities, preparedness activities and principles of operation, contact the Board of Health. Disasters have demonstrated the need for an organized group of volunteers who are prepared to help. With this in mind, Region 4B staff works with local health directors to recruit and train volunteers for the region's Medical Reserve Corps. In a disaster situation, volunteers might be called upon to deliver medical care, interpret for individuals who do not speak English or provide administrative support. Volunteers would also have the opportunity to assist local health departments in the region with routine activities, such as flu clinics and health screenings.

Recognizing that many professionals have limited time to volunteer, Region 4B staff health directors encourage Medical Reserve Corps members to choose their level of participation. Members may elect to volunteer only during emergencies and can choose which communities in the region they would like to serve.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

HISTORICAL HAPPENINGS

The Way It Was...

MARY KENNEDY

They weren't the best, nor the worst, but they were good years, the early 1920s. The Great War was over. Business was thriving, stocks were rising – and so were the hemlines! .

In 1921 President Warren Harding signed a resolution declaring peace with Germany. And...in Cohasset, the wardens and vestry of St. Stephen's Church decided to look for funding to buy and install a set of bells in the church tower. All over the United States soldiers who had served in Belgium and Netherlands spoke of bells in towers and churches and town halls and their sounds of beautiful music.

In 1923, Vice-President Calvin Coolidge, a no-nonsense Yankee from Vermont, was sworn in as President after Harding's sudden death in August. And...in Cohasset, Mrs. Hugh (Jane) Bancroft formally offered to fund a carillon in memory of her mother, Mrs. Clarence (Jessie) Barron. Over the winter, in Croydon, England, 23 bells were cast at the works of Gillett and Johnson.

In 1924 Coolidge was formally elected president, helped, perhaps by the popular slogan "Coolidge without chaos." The hit song of the year was "I'll See You in My Dreams." And...in Cohasset, a set of newly-arrived bells was installed in the church tower in June. World-renowned Carillonneur Kamiel Lefevere of Belgium played two dedication recitals on September 23.

A few weeks later, the New York Times ran a front-page photograph of the procession coming down the church steps after the dedication.

In 1925 Charlie Chaplin was a hit in the movie The Gold Rush; Flying Ebony won the Kentucky Derby; the Pittsburgh Pirates won the World Series. The winning song of the year was "Sleepy Time Gal." And...in Cohasset, Mrs. Bancroft's new gift added 20 bells to St. Stephen's Carillon.

On August 28, President Coolidge and his wife Grace arrived in Cohasset at the invitation of his friend Clarence Barron, financier and manager of the Wall Street Journal. The group, surrounded by "townies" and a few local dignitaries, stood on Cohasset Common for the recital. In the interests of historical accuracy, however, it must be reported that the president's main intent may not have been to enjoy just the music of the bells. After listening to the first two pieces "Old Folks at Home" and "Annie Laurie," President Coolidge announced, "I should certainly like to see your cows." They left for Barron's estate, The Oaks, to inspect his cows and a prize bull worth some $25,000.

The carillon recitals were an immediate sensation, popular throughout New England, with recitals played every week during some years from April through September. On September 30, Hugh Bancroft wrote about the audience of "just under 22,000 on the first of the two evenings...In addition, people came by train, as well as the residents of Cohasset and their guests who came on foot." Writing later about the summer concerts, he commented "The afternoon recitals were not so largely attended, the highest figure being on Sunday, when there were 1502 automobiles counted."

And today? The oldest continuing carillon recital series in North America continues to draw enthusiasts – admittedly not in the thousands - to Cohasset Common every summer. For bells are the voice of the church;/They have tones that touch and search/The hearts of young and old. (Henry Wadsworth Longfellow).

Come listen to the music of the bells and fill your hearts with gladness!

SENIOR SCENE

Sharing pictures of our mothers

LOUISE SMULLEN

On May 9, seniors attended a Mother's Day luncheon. We had been asked beforehand to bring in pictures of our mothers. Liza Salerno copied the photos and with the help of John Campbell they were shown on the large screen as we tried to guess who they were. Liza read a short memory that we had written of our mother. At the close of the luncheon each participant received a lovely rose.

The next day Marita Carpenter of the Social Service League and Coral Grande, Director of CEA, displayed large architectural drawings of the proposed Senior Center and explained them. Luncheon goers were invited to ask questions and give their input.

One of the seminar presenters was Atty. Lisa Hamill. She spoke about estate planning and why it is important to make plans and decisions while one is still able. She went into detail about the duties of a durable power of attorney and a health care proxy. Wills and trusts were discussed. Atty. Hamill also explained planning terms, such as probate and living wills, as well as those aforementioned. We were invited to ask questions and make comments.

At another seminar the Rehab staff of the Norwell VNA presented a program titled "Get Up and Move." They stressed the importance of activity as we age. Activity is helpful in preventing osteoporosis. They suggested goal-setting and how to get started. The presenter demonstrated simple exercises one can do while standing at the kitchen sink.

On May 30, Elli O'Neil, caregiver specialist from South Shore Elder Services, covered options for remaining in our own homes with support. This organization can give help with housekeeping, laundry, shopping and more to elders eligible for state-funded services. They also provide respite for caregivers. If you have questions regarding these issues, you may call 781-848-3910.

Seminars for June will include Nutrition and Cardiac Disease, and Safety First. On June 20 we are invited to LifeCare Center in Scituate for a complimentary lunch and entertainment. If you would like to take part, be sure to make a reservation. The van will be available for transport.

Elders are enjoying their monthly complimentary visits to Golden Living where they enjoy lunch and entertainment. The next visit will be on June 26.

At the time of this writing it is the third day of cool, rainy, windy weather, not much like June. I keep a journal of sorts and always record the weather. Last year at this time fans and air conditioners were working full time. Of course, many of us can do without high humidity.

Louise Smullen's column runs monthly in the Cohasset Mariner.

FOR THE RECORD

Survey says local news rules

The survey also concluded that loyal newspaper readers tend to think they can improve their community and actively try to do so.

GREGORY MATHIS

While the newspaper business has most definitely changed over the years, newspaper readers remain very loyal. That is especially true for those who read local, community newspapers.

And I'm not just saying that to butter you up, there's actual proof.

According to a recent report by Pew Research Center's Project for Excellence in Journalism and Internet & American Life Project, almost three-quarters of the newspaper readers surveyed are "quite attached to following local news and information, and local newspapers are by far the source they rely on for much of the local information they need. In fact, local news enthusiasts are substantially more wedded to their local newspapers than others."

Wedded may be a bit of an overstatement, but I would definitely agree there's a strong attachment between a community and its community newspaper.

There's no denying that newspaper circulation, especially for the dailies, has dropped off dramatically over the past 10 to 15 years. While community papers have also seen a steep drop, the Pew project paints a brighter picture for local newspapers despite the exaggerated reports of its imminent demise.

The local news enthusiasts surveyed as part of the project preferred the local newspaper as their source of information for 14 of the 16 topics listed, compared to just four of the 16 from local television sources, with three topics from the internet being the preferred source.

There are people – 32 percent, in fact – who say it would have a major impact on them if their local newspaper no longer existed. We've seen that for ourselves in communities we've had to close newspapers over the last five years. The papers went away because of lack of profitability, not because those in the community didn't read and support the newspaper.

The survey also revealed that 35 percent of local news enthusiasts say that local news sources, like our community newspapers and Wicked Local websites, give them all of the information that matters to them.

The most loyal newspaper readers, according to the report, are age 40 and over. Most have strong connections to the community, which could mean they've lived in town many years or are active in the community either through the schools, local politics, youth sports, their church or place of worship, or their neighborhood. The survey also concluded that loyal newspaper readers tend to think they can improve their community and actively try to do so.

Breaking news, politics and crime are among the topics most closely followed by local news enthusiasts, according to the survey. In the next tier, readers are interested in arts and culture, local businesses, schools and education and community and neighborhood events.

While providing readers with news they can use from their own community, another big reason for the loyalty and trust is the connection between the newspaper staff and the community. Our company just held an in-house webinar for editors and reporters on community involvement to share best practices and to make sure we continue to be part of the communities we cover.

If we can continue to be a reliable and trusted source of local news, and be actively involved in the community, local newspapers will not only survive, but also continue to thrive.

YOUR REP

Budget highlights and other key issues

REP. GARRETT BRADLEY

As we enter the busy summer season, I wanted to take this opportunity to provide this update on recent activity on Beacon Hill with a focus on matters that directly impact residents of Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and N. Scituate. This update provides highlights of the House Budget for the upcoming fiscal year and a snapshot of key issues and legislation, which the Legislature is considering or has recently been adopted or signed into law.

As always please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions or if I can be of assistance to you in any matter. I welcome your thoughts and concerns. You may reach me by calling my State House office at 617-722-2520 or my district office in Hingham at 718-749-3331. My email is Garrett.Bradley@mahouse.gov.

Have a great summer.

House of Representatives FY2013 Budget Highlights

In April, the House of Representatives passed a balanced budget aimed at increasing government efficiency, cutting costs and preserving essential services across the Commonwealth. The budget maximizes the value of every dollar and no new taxes or fees have been implemented. The highlights of the budget include:

Local Aid: $899M in unrestricted local aid.

Chapter 70 Education Aid: $168M increase in Chapter 70 funds ensures that each school district will receive a funding increase of at least $40 per pupil.

• Increases expanded learning time grants for school districts that expand school time by at least 300 hours per year.

• Increases Special Education Circuit Breaker funding by $8.5M, allowing the state to reimburse districts approximately 68 percent of their SPED costs

• Increases grant funding to support community college workforce development programs and partnerships and continued higher education for students.

Elder Affairs: Increases funding for Councils on Aging and elder nutrition programs to support seniors' independence, socialization and health. Creates Elder Protective Services Commission to study how to prevent elder abuse and neglect.

Public Health: Increases funding for Universal Immunization Program to distribute vaccines for children and at-risk adolescents, adults and the elderly.

Environment: Provides additional funding for the larvicide (mosquito) control project in Plymouth County.

Community Preservation Act: Budget diversifies funding sources cities and towns can use to fund local CPA accounts. Increases support for small businesses by allowing municipalities to exempt commercial and industrial properties from a portion of the CPA surcharge.

Reforms and Cost Cutting Measures: In order to maximize investment and eliminate fraud and waste the budget put forth programmatic reforms including tightening the Electronic Benefit Transfer program to serve as a critical safety net only for the neediest people.

Legislative Update: A sample of some of my bills considered during this Legislative session:

H.102 – The Right to Repair bill gives consumers a choice as to where their vehicles are repaired, and is being reviewed by the Committee on Consumer Protection. Although the Senate passed similar language, I continue to work toward finding a compromise that automobile manufacturers and consumer advocates can support, however placing the issue on the ballot for voters to decide is also still an option.

H.2110 – Allows local housing authorities to designate smoke-free buildings or non-smoking units in elderly housing complexes. The bill would phase in non-smoking buildings or floors in elderly housing, a process that would be governed by standardized state regulations to ensure that current tenants are not disrupted.

H.3754 – An Act to Provide Retirement Options for Nonprofit Organizations. This new law (Chapter 60 of the Acts of 2012) will allow nonprofit organizations with fewer than 20 employees to enter into a contributory retirement plan administered by the state through Treasurer Steven Grossman's office.

VALOR Bill for veterans approved – I am proud to report that the Legislature supported and Gov. Patrick has signed into law a bill that will expand job and education opportunities, assist veteran-owned small businesses, give court administrators guidance when dealing with veterans, and increase eligibility for food, housing, utilities and medical services. The program is supported in part through a fund financed by a voluntary contribution check off on income tax returns.

Jobs bill approved – The Legislature on May 23 passed a comprehensive economic development and jobs bill. The bill implements new economic development policies that will make Massachusetts more competitive by improving the Commonwealth's innovation economy, promoting economic prosperity through infrastructure investments and streamlined permitting, facilitating the expansion of new and existing businesses.

Election Reform Bill approved – Last week the House passed legislation that will update our election administration laws and provide additional transparency and accessibility during elections. In an effort to encourage young voters to participate in elections, the bill provides for pre-registration for 16 and 17 year olds. As well, a provision for requiring election audits in certain circumstances and a requirement for training for municipal election works are included in this bill. Accessibility to voter registration forms will improve with these documents being made available for download from the web. Costs for the random audits and election workers training will be paid for by federal funds under the Help America Vote Act.

Other Statewide and Local District Projects and Updates

Health Care Quality and Cost Reduction Act: In early May the Joint Committee on Health Care Financing favorably reported legislation aimed at curbing escalating health care costs and providing new tools to assist consumers in making informed decisions about health care. With health care expenses representing close to half the state budget it is critical that the Legislature address this issue. The bill is currently being reviewed by the House Ways and Means Committee, and the House is on track to debate this legislation the first week in June.

Fort Hill Veteran's Housing: After several years of a cooperative effort with Father Bill's and Main Spring, the MA Department of Housing and Community Development and the Town of Hingham, the new Commander Paul F. Anderson House for Veterans was dedicated on May 17. This home will provide permanent housing for struggling veterans and will support others trying to reintegrate back into the community. Named after Commander Anderson, a decorated veteran Naval Aviator who was raised in Hingham and served in Desert Storm, Kosovo and Kuwait, this $1.4 million project was supported by the Hingham Affordable Housing Trust, the Community Preservation Committee, the Hingham Veterans' Council and Veteran's Agent Keith Jermyn. Additionally, private citizens raised funds toward this important project.

DCR/ Nantasket Beach Reservation: I continue to work with Hull officials and state officials toward redevelopment of the Department of Conservation and Recreation and beach area business district. Recently the town was awarded a $15,000 grant from the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, which will provide professional and technical support as the town seeks to rezone the DCR property to allow for multi-use redevelopment. The Nantasket Beach area has huge potential and I believe this revitalization project will promote economic activity and provide added benefit to residents and 500,000 visitors to the beach community every year.

Fore River Bridge: A vertical lift bridge with a proposed channel width of 250 feet has been selected by MassDOT as the preferred replacement bridge along Route 3A between Weymouth and Quincy. The design was selected by MassDOT based on criteria including minimum acceptable channel width set by the United States Coast Guard, best closed vertical clearance to minimize openings, maintenance costs and input from the community and federal agencies.

Aquarion Water Co.: The state Department of Public Utilities on March 30, 2012, approved a 10 percent water rate increase for residents of Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset who are served by Aquarion. I co-sponsored legislation giving Attorney General Martha Coakley the power to intervene in matters relating to water companies. Hingham Town Meeting also voted to study the possibility of assuming municipal control over the public water system.

MBTA: On the heels of the MBTA Board of Directors approval of a budget, which preserved the Hingham, Hull and Quincy ferries, as well as fare increases and service cuts, the Joint Committee on Transportation approved an MBTA fiscal relief bill. The bill would address the immediate deficit that the MBTA faces in the next fiscal year beginning July 1, with Massport taking over operation of the MBTA ferries, purchasing T parking lots and docks in Hingham and Quincy and contributing $18.5 million as part of the proposal. However, Massport's takeover of ferry operations needs the blessing of the FAA, and Massport officials have indicated they'll await the FAA's response before they weigh in on the legislation. Additionally, the bill proposes using $51 million in surplus auto inspection fees to fund the MBTA deficit but diverts a small portion of these funds to regional transit authorities. It is likely that the House will take up this legislation in June.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and one precinct in Scituate.

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

Volume 38 - Report No. 22 May 28 - June 1, 2012

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on five roll calls from the week of May 28-June 1. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

ALLOW CHILD CARE WORKERS TO FORM UNIONS (H 3986) * Y

House 115-32, approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would allow child care providers who work out of their homes and receive voucher payments from the state to join a union. The proposal does not affect private day care workers or those who work in centers.

Supporters, noting the current payment rate is $28 for a day, said the bill would allow these important low-wage earners to negotiate with the state for better pay and benefits.

Opponents said the bill would make child care quality and standards the subject of politically charged union negotiations and result in steady pay raises that would cost taxpayers more money.

REQUIRE BACKGROUND CHECKS ON GAMING COMMISSION EMPLOYEES (H 4079) * Y

House 153-0, overrode Gov. Deval Patrick's vetoes of a requirement that all employees of the new state Gaming Commission undergo full criminal background checks. The commission is charged with creating a fair and transparent process for implementing the new law that authorizes the construction of three resort casinos and two slot parlors in the state.

Override supporters said background checks on all employees of this important commission makes perfect sense. They noted the recent case of a new employee who quit amid allegations of sexual abuse and argued he would never have been hired if a background check had been conducted.

In his veto message, Patrick said, "The highest levels of background checks and screening may not be necessary nor appropriate for every employee. Under the current law, the Gaming Commission has the discretion to make those decisions."

(A "Yes" vote is for overriding Patrick's veto.)

STUDY AND DELAY REQUIRING VOTERS TO SHOW ID (H 4132) * Y

House 105-43, approved a Democratic leadership-sponsored amendment that would indefinitely delay a proposal requiring all voters to show a picture identification at their polling places in order to be allowed to vote. The Registry of Motor Vehicles would be required to provide free picture IDs to voters who do not have a driver's license. The amendment prohibits the proposal from taking effect until Secretary of State William Galvin and Gov. Patrick's Department of Revenue study its potential impact on the economy of the state and local cities and towns.

Republicans said this "study" is the way Speaker Robert DeLeo and his Democratic leadership team avoid requiring Democratic members, particularly in an election year, from having to vote directly against GOP proposals that might be popular with voters. Under House rules, the amendment to study and delay a proposal is voted upon first. If it passes, which it always does, no other amendments can be introduced and the proposal dies without ever having a direct vote on it. Republicans say studies are a sham because they are never done.

Supporters of the study said the amendment would disenfranchise thousands of voters who do not have a current address because they are in a homeless shelter or domestic violence facility. They argued there have been no widespread reports of voter fraud in Massachusetts and pointed out that free photo IDs cost Indiana and Minnesota between $11 million and $84 million.

Opponents of the study said it is illogical that all voters are not required to show identification prior to voting and noted 24 other states have laws requiring IDs. They argued people cannot cash a check, rent a car, rent a DVD or even enter some government buildings without showing an ID. They argued the cost of the state providing free IDs would be minimal.

LEGALIZE SPARKLERS (H 4132) * Y

House 40-115, rejected a proposal that would legalize the sale and use of sparklers, a popular firework that burns slowly and gives off a shower of sparks.

Supporters said 46 other states allow this. They argued it is time to get out of the Dark Ages and noted Bay State residents simply buy their sparklers in New Hampshire and bring them back to Massachusetts.

Opponents said sparklers are dangerous and can cause serious injury and even death.

(A "Yes" vote is for legalizing sparklers. A "No" vote is against it.) * N

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

WORKPLACE BULLYING (H 2310) - The House gave initial approval to a bill making workplace bullying and harassment illegal. Supporters said between 37 and 59 percent of employees in America directly experience health-endangering workplace bullying, abuse and harassment.

METH TRAFFICKING (H 2220) The House gave initial approval to a bill adding methamphetamines to the current state law criminalizing the trafficking of narcotics.

Supporters said it is important to update current law to help combat the trafficking of this highly addictive and dangerous drug that is becoming more popular.

STUDENTS AND EPINEPHRINE (H 3959) - The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill allowing students with life-threatening allergies to possess and self-administer epinephrine on school grounds. The measure would add epinephrine to the current list of medicines allowed to be carried and self-administered by students including prescription inhalers for asthma sufferers, enzyme supplements for students with cystic fibrosis and insulin for diabetics.

HOW LONG WAS LAST WEEK'S SESSION? Beacon Hill Roll Call tracks the length of time the House and Senate were in session each week. Many legislators say legislative sessions are only one aspect of the Legislature's job and that a lot of important work is done outside of the House and Senate chambers. They note that their jobs also involve committee work, research, constituent work and other matters that are important to their districts. Critics say the Legislature does not meet regularly or long enough to debate and vote in public view on the thousands of pieces of legislation that have been filed. They note that the infrequency and brief length of sessions are misguided and lead to irresponsible late night sessions and a mad rush to act on dozens of bills in the days immediately preceding the end of an annual session.

Your time has come

DR. MICHAEL GILL

Successfully achieving your dreams will require more than just hard work and perseverance. Don't be afraid to try new things. Don't be afraid to fail.

Ms. Cataldo, Mrs. Astino, members of the school committee, distinguished guests, faculty, community officials, parents, friends, and members of the Class of 2012, in a few minutes we will award diplomas to the group of young adults assembled in front of us. As you have heard from our student speakers, the class is well prepared to commence with the next phase of their life.

George Burns once said that the secret to a good speech is to have a good beginning, a good ending, and to have the two as close together as possible. Not likely to happen here today. Once a teacher, always a teacher, I'm one of those teachers who, when asked to say a few words, plans an entire lesson plan.

Today, like a couple of the students before me, I want to talk about success. Back in the late seventies, almost right out of college, before starting as a fulltime teacher here in Cohasset, I had an opportunity to work here as a substitute teacher for a couple of years, filling in for the likes of Evie Dorr, Bob Thompson, Charlie Davis, Ed Sheehan and other legendary teachers at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School, as it was known back then. I came here with some preconceived notions and stereotypes about Cohasset kids that weren't entirely complimentary.

In my first few years in Cohasset, those negative notions and stereotypes were erased by the very first students that I had an opportunity to interact with. Several of those former students sit here in the audience today as your parents. I want to thank those first students for teaching me early on that Cohasset is indeed a special place; a place where success is the norm; a place I would be fortunate to spend almost an entire career.

During my many years at Cohasset Middle-High School, I have been very fortunate to have witnessed a lot of success. Though I had very little to do with most of this success, I am none-the-less very proud to be associated with it. While you have been students at Cohasset Middle-High School, your school has been identified as a top ten school in the State of Massachusetts as well as one of the better public schools in America. You have been accepted into the most selective and most prestigious schools in the world. You have won championships at the debate table, as well as in the athletic arena. You have won individual academic honors, as well as honors in fine arts, music and drama and you have produced what was arguably the best Mr. Skipper Pageant ever created! Our extraordinary faculty and excellent elementary schools have contributed to this success and notoriety. The support our schools receive from the community, the School Committee, the Parent School Organization, the Cohasset Education Foundation, and the taxpayers of Cohasset contribute to the success as well.

However, I believe that the biggest contributing factor to this success is you, the students and parents in the audience. Families in Cohasset, along with our METCO families, tend to place a heavy emphasis on education; they have supported those of us who work in the schools by sending you to us each day since pre-school ready to learn. Your families have instilled in you a strong work ethic, and the knowledge that without hard work and perseverance, very few realize success.

Of course, success means different things to different people. For some, success means getting a high-paying job and buying lots of nice things. For others, success may mean choosing a life of poverty and dedicating their lives to helping others; or it could also mean, as Kyrel said simply, "Finding your personal happiness." For most teachers, like those being honored here today, they measure success by how much of a positive difference they have been able to make in the lives of young people. I am here to assure you that they have been very successful!

Students in the Class of 2012, you will all leave here today to begin chasing your dreams. Successfully achieving your dreams will require more than just hard work and perseverance. Don't be afraid to try new things. Don't be afraid to fail. A few minutes ago, Kaye Slamp quoted Dale Carnegie, who said that discouragement and failure are two of the surest steppingstones to success. Winston Churchill said, "Success is walking from failure to failure with no loss of enthusiasm."

It's been said that successful people are not necessarily the brightest or the most talented. They are people who find a way to maximize their potential. They are committed to life-long learning and are constantly working at educating themselves. They understand the importance of discipline and self-control. They are resilient, able to get back up when knocked down. They are humble and they willingly apologize when they make mistakes. However, the most important one in my mind is that truly successful people tend to be kind and respectful. They are people who recognize that there shouldn't be a whole lot of pleasure in being right, and that being kind is more important than being right.

A number of years ago Bill Gates implored students at a graduation to "Be kind to nerds; chances are you'll end up working for one." Well, I keep that quote on my desk even though I don't like the term "nerds." It's a negative label attached to a minority group of people. However, I use his words to sometimes remind students that they should be kind to each other, not because they might end up working for a nerd someday, but because that is how we should treat people— period. Please remember, students, that character is how you treat those who can do nothing for you.

I am often asked about today's students by friends of mine who are curious about my thoughts on how kids have changed through the several decades of my career. I usually respond that most of today's kids are awesome! They engage in all sorts of voluntary community service; they travel to Appalachia to help others; they work with younger kids in our peer leadership program. They volunteer to do all sorts of positive things in and around the community. I tell these friends that in many ways, today's kids are much better than kids were "back in our day" (as Sean McKenna stated in the Mr. Skipper Pageant).

Though, in general, I do believe that today's kids are deserving of our pride and appreciation for all the great and honorable things they do, as a school administrator I continue to witness too many incidents of mean behavior. On your graduation day I will not focus on negativity, but I need to touch on it briefly to take advantage of a teachable moment, because it ties directly into my talk about success. In my mind, there is likely no greater contributing factor to success than treating people with kindness and respect.

Now some of you might be questioning that as you think about that old expression, "Nice guys finish last." Today, research shows us that nice people often finish first. Leaders who demonstrate sincerity, honesty, and show genuine concern and care for their workers get the most from them.

In a world where bullying among young people is an epidemic, I encourage all of you as you leave here today to continue developing your sense of empathy, compassion and acceptance that I trust your parents began teaching you at a very young age. In order to be truly successful at whatever you choose to do, you will need to treat everyone with kindness and respect.

So, your time has come. You have successfully endured what may have seemed like an abundance of pointless school rules. We haven't made it easy for you. Your parents have challenged you to do your best. I know that I've been tough on you. We hope that you understand that, in addition to teaching reading, writing, and arithmetic, schools have a responsibility to teach character and to prepare you in many different ways to become respectful and productive citizens.

So as you move on, please accept that it's your turn now. It's time for you to take over and stand up for what's right even when you're standing alone. Try to be a better person tomorrow than you are today and success will likely follow. When you inevitably fail or fall, people will be more likely to want to help you up if you have treated others with respect and kindness.

In closing, I am very fortunate to have had the opportunity to spend thirty-three years of a thirty-five year career in Cohasset. I am very confident that I have learned more from Cohasset students like you than Cohasset students have ever learned from me. Thank you for all that you have taught me, and good luck to those of you going off to work or to college, and to those going off to the military, please stand so you can be recognized – come home safely.

At this time, Cohasset School Committee Chair, Mrs. Astino, and Superintendent Cataldo, as Principal of Cohasset High School, I am proud to present the Class of 2012 for graduation, assuring you they have completed all the requirements.

SPORTS NOTES

FIELD HOCKEY

June Clinic

There will be a Field Hockey Clinic open to girls entering grade 6-9 in the fall.

It runs Monday June 11 through June 14 from 3-5 p.m. at Alumni Field (turf field) at Cohasset High School.

Girls can sign up on the Cohasset Recreation web site. The cost is $64.00 for the week and is run by the Cohasset Varsity Field Hockey team.

Girls must bring mouth guard, shin pads, eye protection and stick. We will have a limited number of sticks available.

FIELD HOCKEY

Fall Club program

The Cohasset Fall Field Hockey Club Program will be holding sign-ups for the fall field hockey program on Saturday June 9 from 9-12 at the Cohasset Recreation Center.

There are forms at the Town Hall and will be available at registration as well. The club program is open to all girls entering grades 6-8 in the fall and the cost is $175.00.

For anyone with field hockey experience (who has coached or recently played) we are looking for coaches.

Please call Beth Marsden-Gilman at 383-1811 for more information.

CYBSA COOKOUT

All-Star Weekend

The CYBSA announces its annual CYBSA Family Cookout and All-Star Festivities on Saturday, June 9, from noon util 3 p.m.

Baseball and softball players, coaches, parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, distant relatives you never talk to, they're all invited to this true family event. We are still finalizing some of the details, so check back on our website, (www.cybsa.net) but here's a sampling of what we have planned.

CYBSA family cookout: The burgers, dogs, chips, drinks and good times are on us!

Girls All-Star Softball Games on Freedom Field:

12yr old Skills Competition, and of course at 7:20 p.m., Barnes Field hosts the CYBSA All-Star Game under the lights

As an extra bonus we've got the American League Championship game scheduled for Friday, June 8, 7:30pm. It's Cohasset's very own version of "Friday Night Lights", so kick the weekend off in great style and come down and watch the "future stars" play.

Reign is over

Skippers edged in quarterfinals

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Over the past two years, the Cohasset baseball team has dominated the postseason of Division 4 baseball.

The Skippers won two Div. 4 State Titles with outstanding pitching, solid hitting and excellent fundamental play.

A third title however, won't come this year.

The No. 1 seeded Skippers' quest for a third championship ended abruptly on Wednesday with a 2-1 loss to No. 9 Harwich at Milliken Field.

The loss wasn't about anything Cohasset did wrong as much as what Harwich did right.

"Their pitcher pitched a great game," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "We had

The Cohasset Boys U12 team 2 completed their Coastal Youth Soccer Division undefeated with a record of 9-0-1. The team, all fifth graders, amassed an amazing 40 goals for and only 1 goal against all season. Like most championship caliber teams, this team was based on defense. The defense starts with outstanding goaltending and that is exactly what Cohasset got all season from John Albright and Bradley Albanese. This dynamic duo was outstanding all year making one diving save after the other.

TALKIN' GOLF

Marshfield's Sisk out to make history at State Open

Yes, we're back!

We're ready to walk the fairways and greens; explored the wonderful courses; while we congratulate champions and maybe expose a sandbagger or two..

It is hard to believe it has been 297 days since our last weekly column – and the off-season wasn't quite off with the mild winter we experienced.

Many of our hardcore hackers kept playing and some courses remained opened as well. Some even permitted golf carts when conditions were favorable and that is simply unthinkable.

It was a win, win situation. Golfers had the opportunity to feed their habit without boarding flights to sunny climes and local course generated unexpected revenue. One course collected more than $30,000 in green fees in January.

Let's just hope it continues through the summer and fall.

Opening moves

The State Open is being held at Walpole Country Club this week and there are plenty of local golfers in the field and we could see history being made by Marshfield's Geoff Sisk.

He will be looking to secure a record seventh MGA Open title this year.

Sisk, 47, who won this event in 1995, 1997, 2002, 2004, 2006 and 2007, competed in the 2011 U.S. Open Championship where he was one of only two Bay State golfers to make the cut.

Over the course of his impressive career, Sisk has competed on the Nationwide Tour in 1991, 1998, 2000 and from 2008 through present day. He also spent one season (1999) on the PGA Tour.

His game is on the upswing. Just last week, Sisk captured the 2012 Cape Cod Open – his third such title – and earned a $4,500 winner's check. Sisk fired a record opening-round of 64 and then followed that up with two sub-par rounds.

Among the locals are pros Jeff Martin of Norton, Aaron Ungvarsky of Cohasset GC, Brendon Ray of Norfolk, Andy Morse of Weymouth, Scott Hickey of Foxboro, Mickey Folan of Ponkapoag, Brian McDonough of Braintree, Michael Welch of Furnace Brook GC and Todd Cook of The Milton-Hoosic Club. Also in the field is host pro Tom Giffin.

Among local amateurs entered are Chad Stumpo of Blue Hill CC, Patrick O'Leary of Wollaston GC, John Hadges and Robert Mancini of Thorny Lea GC, Ryan Riley of Pine Oaks GC, Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich GC, Herbie Aikens of Pinehills GC, Creighton Page of Dedham C&PC, Benjamin Spitz of the Harmon Club, Chris Congdon of Foxborough CC, David Pierce of CC Halifax, Mark McCormick of South Shore CC, and Brian O'Leary of Ponkapoag GC.

Most likely, winner will be a mini-tour player, who takes the time off his tournament scheduled to play in the Mass Open because of its $15,000 winner's check. It can sustain their dream of making the PGA Tour for a few more months.

My pick? Have to go with Sisk.

You can bet he'd like No. 7.

"To win one title was tremendous because I had failed a number of times before that," Sisk told reporters. "To win seven, I wouldn't know what to say. It would mean a lot, but I am just going to try and be competitive and be the best that I can"

These two will be missed

The first time I felt old was when years ago when I covered an all-star women's soccer game in Boston. I scanned the rosters and noticed that my son and my daughter were both older than all the players in the game.

Now, I'm feeling old because of the passing of so many great people in the golf community since we last teed it up on these pages.

First and foremost, is the passing of Roger Barry, the former Patriot-Ledger golf editor.

Walpole Country Club will be hosting the 103rd Massachusetts Open this week. It is the first time the club is the venue for the State Open. PHOTO COURTESY OF MASS. GOLF ASSN.

It is the end of an era. He was the man, taking the game forward, not just on the South Shore, but in Massachusetts, New England and the United States.

There were so many summer days he would pontificate at a local qualifying tournament, imparting his wisdom to anyone in listening distance, which usually meant fellow scribes Joe Gordon of the Herald and Frank Stoddard of the Enterprise and Geoff Converse of the Cape Cod Times. I miss those days.

But, what I liked most about Mr. Barry is he had a heart. Whenever he transmitted tournament scores to his paper, it always included a fictitious golfer, who would have the worst score. Why? He did not want the last-place finisher to be ridiculed. Everybody dreads the humiliation of finishing last.

Another golf legend, who passed, largely unnoticed, was Geoffrey Cornish, who build more courses in New England than any other architect.

Mr. Cornish's work would never be mistaken for Pete Dye or Jack Nicklaus, Robert Trent Jones or even his understudy, Brian Silva.

Mr. Cornish had no ego. He wasn't trying to build a monument to himself. He built courses the average hack could enjoy.

It usually went like this: Somebody, an entrepreneur or a community, would want to build a course. They would tell Mr. Cornish, they had only so much money. Say $100,000, budgeted for its construction. He would tell them what $100,000 would get them and he would build it.

He didn't require a $1 million fee to design a course and he wasn't going to build an Augusta National or a Pebble Beach, but he made the game available and affordable to more golfers than anyone will ever realize. He was the Johnny Appleseed of golf.

Among the courses in the region he created include Poquoy Brook in Lakeville, Foxboro Country Club, Allendale in New Bedford, the old Heritage Hill par-3 in Lakeville, which is now called the Back Nine Club, Pine Oaks in Easton, and Wampatuck in Canton

On the Cape, among his designs are Blue Rock, Cranberry Valley and Hyannis and the front nine at Farm Neck on Martha's Vineyard.

He loved to experiment. He built the longest course in the world at International in Bolton, and he was the first to give us first challenging par-3s tracks. He also built Nashawtuc, a Senior PGA Tour stop for many years and the two courses at Stow Acres.

Before Mr. Cornish, most public courses were pedestrian without much imagination. They were easy to play and without much challenge. He took it to a new level.

My favorite memory of Mr. Cornish was when Silva opened The Captains Course in Brewster. There was one especially challenging hole, with a huge earth kettle fronting the green. Mr. Cornish spent the entire opening tournament halfway down the fairway, so he could see how golfers played it.

chances were limited due to an "Iron Curtain" defense anchored by Joe Keneally in the middle. The defense of Ian Dunkelberger, Desmond Herzfelder, Ben Grimes, and Henry Thomas stifled the opponent's chances all season. They quickly transitioned the ball to the offense with deep kicks to the corners and some outstanding ball handling, especially by Henry Thomas. This exceptional group of defenders calmly controlled the game and put the offense in a position to put points on the board.

The offense delivered by scoring 40 goals over 10 games. The midfielders worked extremely well as a team by controlling the ball, taking it around the outside, making perfect crosses and give and goes. The middle was controlled by the smooth footwork of Terence Faherty and Ben Fernando. They both controlled the ball well, passed to the outside middies and when available put the ball on goal. The recipients of these crisp passes on the outside were Nate Thomas, Turner Martell, Aidan Gildea, and George Grech. Nate and Turner's speed around the outside was amazing.

Aidan's cool ball handling thwarted many a defender while George's left foot caught many a goalie by surprise.

The teamwork of this group continually put shots on net and passes on the feet of the attack. Aidan Kearns and Alexander deMurias manned the Cohasset attack. These happy recipients found themselves in prime position to score and score they did. Aidan's adept footwork created space when needed to get the shot off.

Alexander, with his signature hat always on top his locks, used his speed and instincts to create many opportunities. This offensive crew worked as a team and their unselfish play was evident all season.

The Cohasset boys played a home and away series with Hanover, Hingham, Plymouth, Norwell and Kingston. The stiffest competition coming from Plymouth and Kingston. Their next game will be this Saturday in the Coastal Youth Soccer Playoffs. Their teamwork, good sportsmanship and fan/parent support will continue to propel this team forward on and off the field.

was some excitement as Cohasset had two doubles teams on the courts with a 2-1 advantage for Cohasset.

Eventually, one of the two pulled out the victory and Cohasset set up a match against Martha's Vineyard yesterday at home.

runners in scoring position in four of seven innings, but we didn't get the timely hit when we needed it. I felt we were the better team from top to bottom, but baseball is about pitching. We didn't hit the ball and their pitcher pitched a good game."

As for his own pitching, Afanasiw gave Harwich credit for timely hitting against good pitching from Jamie Timothy and Jamie Faber.

"In the fourth they (Harwich) had an infield and a walk," Afanasiw said. "With first and second and no out, they tried to sacrifice bunt. He fouled out. Then there was an infield fly so there were two out. The next kid had a 2-2 count and Jamie Timothy threw a nice pitch, a curveball down in the strike zone. He reached down and hit a line drive to right. Christian Davis played it perfectly. He made a nice throw to the plate. It just wasn't in time."

Harwich scored in similar fashion in the sixth when they connected on a tough slider from Faber to notch a bloop single to knock home what became the winning run.

Cohasset had a chance in the last of the sixth, when they had runners on second and third with one out.

Shane Haggerty scorched a single up the middle, scoring Conor Goetz, but Afanasiw felt Terence Doonan didn't have enough of a jump to score and held him at third.

"It was a hard liner," Afanasiw said. "He had to watch it and didn't get a great jump. I didn't think he'd get home."

The Skippers went down 1-2-3 in the last of the seventh.

Regardless of the outcome, the Skippers can look back at a South Shore League title, a 19-3 record and the seniors have a legacy that includes two state championships.

Even the three losses this year were hotly contested.

"We lost three games by a total of four runs," Afanasiw said. "It shows how close we are. We had practice in the gym the other day and I was talking to Torin Sweeney and looking at the banners.

In 2008 Al Galotta won, but before that, it was 1959.

When this year's seniors started, they were 6-14 their freshman year, then won three league championships in a row and two state championships. Their careers are filled with championships. That's a legacy. They have set the standard so high. They have been tremendous.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 18, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Recently obtained information could open a new opportunity for a career change. But temper that Arian impatience and act on it only when all the facts are made available.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're moving into a more active cycle. So put your ideas back on the table, where they'll be given the attention they deserve. Expect a favorable change in your love life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A friend might ask for a favor that you feel would compromise your values. Best advice: Confront him or her and explain why you must say no. A true friend will understand.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A relationship continues to develop along positive lines. Meanwhile, a brewing job situation could create complications for one of your pet projects. Look into it right away.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your interest in a co-worker's project could lead to a profitable experience for you both. But before you agree to anything, be sure to get all your legal I's dotted and T's crossed.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be careful whose counsel you take about a possible long-distance move. Some advice might not necessarily be in your best interest. Stay focused on your goals.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone might try to complicate efforts in an attempt to work out that confusing job situation. But don't let that keep you from sticking with your decision to push for a resolution.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A disagreement on how to handle a family problem could create more trouble for all concerned. Look for ways to cool things down before they boil over.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An unexpected change in long-standing workplace procedure and policy could provide a new career target for the Archer to aim at. Start making inquires.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're finally able to get back into the swing of things, as those temporary doldrums begin to lift. Expect some surprising disclosures from a new colleague.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Rely on your innate sense of justice to see you through a dilemma involving a family member. Other relatives who've stood back will soon come forward as well.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new friend seems to be pushing you into taking risks — financial or otherwise. Best advice: Don't do it. She or he might have a hidden agenda that hasn't surfaced yet.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

LIFE AT CHS

Countdown to end of school year

WHITNEY MALONE

This week, AP classes met to discuss preparation work for next year and to remind students to purchase textbooks, either new or used, depending on the course.

Hello Cohasset! I cannot believe there is only one more full week of school! I guess it's best to get this gloomy weather out of the way to make room for a warm and sunny summer! Despite the less-than-perfect weather, Graduation last weekend was an enjoyable day had by all. Senior class president, Kyrel Jaundoo, salutatorian Kaye Slamp, and co-valedictorians Maggie O'Grady and Isabel Robinson each shared their thoughts of the past four years, reminiscing on memorable experiences, from the class' eighth grade pool party, to the hilarious Mr. Skipper acts this year. While we juniors were excited to claim our new position in the hierarchy of CHS, the day was overall bittersweet, with seeing our friends move on to new phases in their lives and the retirement of beloved teachers Mrs. Cook and Mr. Marks, and of course, Dr. Gill. Thank you D-Gill for all you have done for us (like making sure we don't roam the halls for too long during class) and Sacred Heart is certainly fortunate to have you!

This was an important week for freshmen, who spent most of Tuesday and Wednesday MCAS testing in the sciences. Don't worry, only one more year!

On Thursday, we had our final advisory meeting of the year with our homeroom classes. Between the chatter of summer plans and excitement for next year, we discussed our class projects that we have been working on throughout the year, some of which include planting trees in the courtyard and maintaining a news bulletin board in the history hallway.

This week, AP classes met to discuss preparation work for next year and to remind students to purchase textbooks, either new or used, depending on the course. In some classes, it is beneficial to buy a new book through your teacher, so that you can highlight and make personal notes; however, if the same textbook is being used next year, buying the used book from a student currently taking the course is much cheaper! (If anyone needs the AP Calculus textbook, I have two!)

As for sports, Baseball and Girls Tennis have made it the farthest through the spring season. Tuesday, the girls won their match against Ursuline Academy, and Thursday, many came out to support the team in their match against Martha's Vineyard. The boys played Harwich Wednesday afternoon.

There are only eight more school days until June 18th, so keep studying for those finals! Next week will be the final column for Life at CHS, but please do not hesitate to send your feedback and ideas for the fall!

Whitney Malone will soon be a senior at CHS. She is the Mariner's new Life at CHS columnist.

Book fair benefits Friends of Library

On Monday, June 11th Buttonwood Books & Toys will be hosting a "Book Fair" from 6-8 p.m. with 20 percent of the evening's profits going directly to the Friends of the Cohasset Library. The 20 percent donation includes all items in the store. It will be the perfect time to buy books on Summer Reading lists, Father's Day gifts, toys and so much more.

The Friends of the Cohasset Library provide funding for many of the programs at the Library including: the Homework Center, Cohasset Reads Together, all Children's Programming, all Adult Programming including author visits, writing classes, genealogy classes as well as funding for all museum passes. There is also an Outreach Program to seniors living in Cohasset and at Sunrise and Golden Living Centers.

For more information about the Friends visit cohassetlibrary.org

Buttonwood Books & Toys is located at 747 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) Cohasset.

GIMME SHELTER

Sylvester wants a forever home

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is hoping to find shelter for Sylvester.

Sylvester is a rather large black-and-white male cat. He can be quite vocal, though we at the shelter feel he is saying, "someone, please take me home." He seems to be rather overwhelmed being in a room with so many other felines. He does get along O.K. but doesn't understand why he was displaced from his former home.

Sylvester is quite the handsome guy and is so looking forward to visitors that just might consider sharing their home with him. He's meticulous about using the scratching post and the litter box. He's neutered and up to date on all his shots.

While you're at the shelter you can meet Sylvester and all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

Sylvester, who is a vocal guy, is also meticulous about using the scratching post and the litter box. COURTESY PHOTO

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org. HSAR sends out a huge thank you goes out to its many supporters.

Gimmie Shelter - Fundraiser for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue – is from 2 to 6 p.m. on Sunday, June 17.

Live Music, Dancing, Food, Silent Auctions, Raffles. HSAR is a non-profit, no-kill cat shelter, serving Hull and surrounding communities for 12 years! Help HSAR to continue its mission and join the party! Tickets $20 at the door or on line @ www.hsar.org

This event will take place at the C-Note and will feature two bands, Closer Than We Appear and Cat Basket.

A local saucy secret

Barbecue team serves at Auntie M's

By Seth Jacobson
sjacobson@wickedlocal.com

"...you can get a taste of our food at Auntie M's Weekend Barbecue in Cohasset."
— Smokin' Hoggz pit boss Bill Gillespie

The Abington-based barbecue team that won the Jack Daniels World Barbecue Championship in Tennessee last year is back on a winning streak.

And with all the recognition, the Abington barbecue team known as Smokin' Hoggz has aligned with a team called Lunch Meat out of Rockland to serve barbecue delicacies at a Cohasset-based eatery called Auntie M's Weekend Barbecue.

The Lunch Meat team consists of husband-and-wife Gary and Michelle Taft.

It was just a matter of time before an area restaurant tapped Smokin' Hoggz for its talent.

Smokin' Hoggz was recently crowned grand champion of the Rock City Rib Fest in Rochester, New York.

"We won this one last year too," said Smokin' Hoggz pit boss Bill Gillespie, an Abington resident. "We wanted to see if we could defend our title."

He added there were 83 teams at last year's Rock City Rib Fest and noted there were about 81 of them this year from all over the country.

"We were judged on the same four categories at this competition that we were at the Jack Daniels Championship: chicken, pork ribs, pork shoulder/butt and beef brisket," Bill said. "We took first place in ribs this year. That was actually one of our goals after last year. We wanted to get a first place in ribs."

And in the end, they were judged highly in all four categories, earning the team its second straight win in the contest.

For the rest of the summer, the team will be taking part in a number of different competitions in order to prepare for its second straight appearance in the Jack Daniel World Barbecue Championship.

"Nobody has ever won The Jack two years back-to-back," Bill said. "It would be pretty cool if we could do that."

Bill said he is thankful he has such a great team, consisting of his wife, Shaune, friend and Weymouth resident Alan Burke and Alan's cousin, Greg Burke.

"The win at the Rock City Rib Fest earned us a trip to the American Royal Invitation barbecue competition in Kansas City (Missouri)," Bill said. "That's the next trip we'll be taking. Then, we have a string of competitions we'll be going to in July."

Taking part in all the competitions will better prepare the Smokin' Hoggz team for its ultimate goal of repeating as champion at the Jack Daniels competition, Bill said.

By winning The Jack last year, we were automatically invited back," Bill said. "For other people, all the competitions all over the country serve as qualifiers for teams."

To compete at The Jack, domestic teams must win a state championship with at least 25 teams or a competition of 50 teams, or win one of the premiere barbecue competitions that qualify a team for an automatic berth, Bill said.

"Not every state championship winner gets to go to The Jack though," Bill said. "You can only have one representative from each state."

If there are multiple champions from certain states, the teams in question are chosen to go to The Jack through a random drawing.

Last year's Jack competition took place Oct. 22 in Lynchburg, Tennessee, where Jack Daniels whiskey was first distilled more than a century ago. Bill said each team in the competition is judged in four categories; chicken, pork ribs, pork shoulder/butt and beef brisket.

Seventy-one championship teams from the U.S. and 18 teams from Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, England, Germany, the Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Puerto Rico and Switzerland fought for the title at this year's Jack Daniels event.

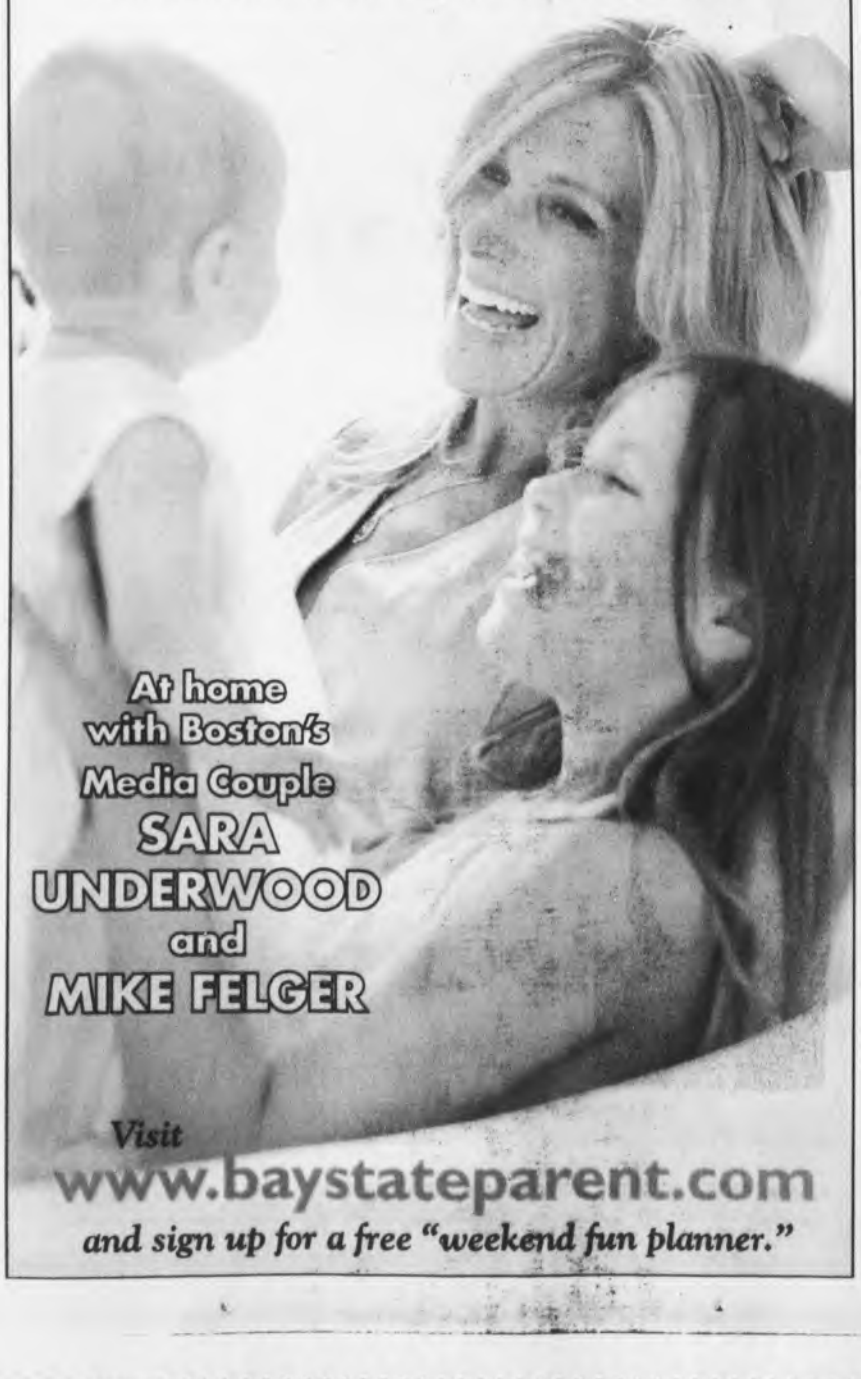
Gillespie said his team, as well as every other team in the competition, was responsible for buying its own meats and bringing its own cooking supplies.

"You have to spend a lot of money at each one of these competitions," Alan said in a past interview. "Plus, you have to travel a lot so any cash reward really helps offset the costs."

The members of Smokin' Hoggz drove to Tennessee for last year's competition, noting it takes a lot of gas money to get to the various events.

During the course of the past year, Bill said word has gotten around about how successful Smokin' Hoggz has been.

"We've been getting calls from people asking where our restaurant is," Bill said. "We don't have one right now, but you can get a taste of our food at Auntie M's Weekend Barbecue in Cohasset."



"Alan will be the main representative of the Smokin' Hoggz team there," Bill added. "Things are going really well," Bill said. "I think people around here are hearing more about us and hopefully that'll lead us to some more opportunities down the road. But right now, we are just focused on taking part in these upcoming competitions and going back to The Jack.

FOCUS ON Teaching and School Counseling Education

SOUTHERN NEW HAMPSHIRE UNIVERSITY

Training to teach the students of tomorrow

A Q&A with outgoing SNHU School of Education Dean Mary Heath and new Dean Mark McQuillan

While dean of Southern New Hampshire University's School of Education, Mary Heath added faculty, shepherded the school through reaccreditation, and added a host of new programs online and on campus, including online Master of Education programs in Curriculum and Instruction and Educational Leadership. She and new Dean Mark McQuillan, former Connecticut education commissioner, recently discussed innovation and the future of education. The following is distilled from that conversation.

How are you training teachers to be prepared for tomorrow's innovations, and what role does technology play?

Heath: Our students are learning how to employ Skype, WebQuest, iPads and interactive whiteboards to help pupils learn — technologies that public school teachers are still trying to grapple with. Then they're using those technologies in the classrooms where they student-teach. So not only our student teachers, but the district teachers are learning as well, and our students and the public school pupils are the winners.

McQuillan: Our graduates must be trained to provide online and face-to-face instruction. They have to master the whole repertoire. Let's say they teach in a rural district or an urban district where there is little or no technology: They'd better be equipped to teach without it.

Apart from state-mandated testing, how do you judge when a student teacher is ready to lead a classroom?

Heath: Our candidates have to go out and do early field experiences, looking at things like the learning environment and lesson planning. The whole time, they're also building an e-portfolio that shows evidence of their ability to teach, assess their students' progress and demonstrate mastery of their subject area. In the portfolio will be a video clip of that student teaching, pictures of the classroom and assignments completed by their pupils. We teach them that every single thing they're learning has to connect with the learning of their pupils, and evidence that their pupils are learning, based on a set of standards.

McQuillan: It's no longer acceptable to talk about preparing a teacher by saying they've taken three credits in mathematics methods or six credits in elementary teaching philosophy. We have to see boots-on-the-ground demonstrations of what they know and are able to do, measured by a set of competencies.

What new programs do you have in the pipeline?

McQuillan: Under No Child Left Behind, the focus for the past 10 years has been on training highly qualified teachers, with limited attention to the administrators who lead them. Principals are an essential part of school reform: principals who can actually supervise, evaluate and lead fledgling young teachers to high levels of expertise. We also need superintendents and curriculum administrators who can help guide the way and support them with resources — and who have a clear sense of urgency. It's the whole enchilada: principals, superintendents, community leaders, parents and support staff.

Fortunately, at SNHU we have the support of the president and provost to experiment, and innovate, and bring our innovations to scale. That's what makes this job so attractive.

Southern New Hampshire University offers more than 15 Master of Education programs online and at its main campus in Manchester, N.H. Programs include Curriculum and Instruction, Special Education, Reading, Technology, Educational Leadership, Elementary Education and more.

CAREERS

The role of a professional school counselor

American School Counselor Association

Professional school counselors are certified/licensed educators with a minimum of a master's degree in school counseling, making them uniquely qualified to address all students' academic, personal/social and career development needs by designing, implementing, evaluating and enhancing a comprehensive school counseling program that promotes and enhances student success. Professional school counselors are employed in elementary, middle/junior high and high schools; in district supervisory positions; and counselor education positions.

Professional school counselors serve a vital role in maximizing student success. Through leadership, advocacy and collaboration, professional school counselors promote equity and access to rigorous educational experiences for all students. They support a safe learning environment and work to safeguard the human rights of all members of the school community and address the needs of all students through culturally relevant prevention and intervention programs that are a part of a comprehensive school counseling program. The American School Counselor Association recommends a school-counselor-to-student ratio of 1:250.

The professional school counselor's role

Professional school counselors have a minimum of a master's degree in school counseling, meet the state certification/licensure standards, and abide by the laws of the states in which they are employed. They uphold the ethical and professional standards of ASCA and other applicable professional counseling associations, and promote the development of the school counseling program based on the following areas of the ASCA National Model: Foundation, delivery, management and accountability.

Foundation

Professional school counselors identify a philosophy based on school counseling theory and research/evidence-based practice that recognizes the need for all students to benefit from the school counseling program. They act on these philosophies to guide the development, implementation and evaluation of a culturally relevant and comprehensive school counseling programs. Professional school counselors create a mission statement supporting the school's mission and collaborate with other individuals and organizations to promote all students' academic, career and personal/social development.

Delivery

Professional school counselors provide culturally competent services to students, parents/guardians, school staff and the community in the following areas:

• School Guidance Curriculum — This curriculum consists of structured lessons designed to help students achieve the desired competencies and to provide all students with the knowledge and skills appropriate for their developmental level. The school guidance curriculum is delivered throughout the school's overall curriculum and is systematically presented by professional school counselors in collaboration with other professional educators in K-12 classroom and group activities.

• Individual Student Planning — Professional school counselors coordinate ongoing systemic activities designed to help students establish personal goals and develop future plans.

• Responsive Services — Responsive services consist of prevention and/or intervention activities to meet students' immediate and future needs. These needs can be necessitated by events and conditions in students' lives and the school climate and culture, and may require any of the following:

Individual or group counseling

Consultation with parents, teachers and other educators

Referrals to other school support services or community resources

Peer helping

Psycho-education

Intervention and advocacy at the systemic level

Professional school counselors develop confidential relationships with students to help them resolve and/or cope with problems and developmental concerns.

• System Support — System support consists of management activities establishing, maintaining, and enhancing the total school counseling program. These activities include professional development, consultation, collaboration, supervision, program management and operations. Professional school counselors are committed to continual personal and professional development and are proactively involved in professional organizations promoting school counseling at the local, state and national levels.

Management

Professional school counselors incorporate organizational processes and tools that are concrete, clearly delineated, and reflective of the school's needs. Processes and tools include:

• Agreements developed with and approved by administrators for each school year addressing how the school counseling program is organized and what goals will be accomplished

• Advisory councils include: students, parents/guardians, teachers, counselors, administrators and community members to review school counseling program goals and results and to make recommendations

• The use of student data to effect systemic change within the school system so every student receives the benefit of the school counseling program

• Action plans for prevention and intervention services defining the desired student competencies and achievement results

• Allotment of the professional school counselor's time in direct service with students as recommended in the ASCA National Model

• The use of annual and weekly calendars to keep students, parents/guardians, teachers, administrators, and community stakeholders informed and to encourage active participation in the school counseling program

Accountability

Professional school counselors develop and implement data/needs-driven, standards-based and research-supported programs, and engage in continuous program evaluation activities. They also create results reports that demonstrate immediate, intermediate, and long-range effectiveness of comprehensive school counseling programs. Professional school counselors analyze outcome data to guide future action and improve future results for all students. The performance of the professional school counselor is evaluated using an instrument based on the School Counselor Performance Standards found in the ASCA National Model and the ASCA School Counselor Competencies. These standards of practice are expected of professional school counselors when implementing a school counseling program.

Summary

Professional school counselors are certified/licensed educators with the minimum of a master's degree in school counseling and are uniquely qualified to address the developmental needs of all students through a comprehensive school counseling program addressing the academic, career and personal/social development of all students.

Holly Hill Farm programs

The following programs will take place at Holly Hill Farm, 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. For more information and to register, visit the website at www.hollyhill-farm.org.

Kids Eat - Ages 9 and 10. This is a new program that will depend on seasonally available produce. Each day, children will immerse themselves in new and familiar locally grown vegetables, fruit, herbs and edible flowers to create snacks ranging from pizza to salad and stir fry to mud oven treats. These healthy products will be harvested, prepped, prepared and enjoyed by all the children for a daily community celebration.

Design and Build - Ages 11 and 12. Projects and plans, structures and creations. There are many tasks to complete for the farmers and the animals both on and off the farm. Learn to make a wide range of finished products that can be used on the farm and around the home. This new program is designed for children who wish to hammer, saw, design and build a variety of items from bird houses to garden beds and toad houses to fairy houses. The instructor will let the children help guide the weekly projects.

Young Farmers Program - Ages 12 through 16. Join the farm team for its 12th season of growing, planting and learning about organic produce and sustainable agricultural practices. This program allows experienced, interested young adults to work with each other and alongside the farm managers, form a sense of accomplishment and gain a behind-the-scenes understanding of the organic movement. In an effort to learn the benefits and obstacles of growing on a small New England farm, children will be able to set up a booth at the Cohasset Farmers Market, sell produce they help cultivate and take home a portion of the proceeds from the sale of vegetables, flowers, herbs and on-the-farm products. Students will need to complete a brief application to show their interest, investment and commitment to the program.

Assistant farm teacher - Ages 13 through 18. Programs rely on energetic, thoughtful teenagers who help in countless ways with teaching, helping children and exciting participants with the wonders of fresh, organic produce. Each assistant teacher learns about responsibility and gains strategies for thoughtful, meaningful teaching. Friends of Holly Hill Farm pays a weekly stipend to these young instructors as compensation for their work. Students will need to complete a brief application to show their interest, investment and commitment to the program.

Farm Pantry - Ages 16 through 18. Holly Hill Farm has an opportunity to grow and provide healthy, organic produce for all. Friends of Holly Hill Farm has a responsibility to provide food and education for those in the community and for communities in need. Many high school students need to complete hours for community service in order to graduate. Students are invited to apply to participate for a 20-hour work week or more than one week. During that week, students will cultivate, harvest, prepare food and deliver produce to Father Bill's Place, a community shelter in Quincy. This new pilot program will occur later in the growing season, as more crops are available, and allow students to exit the program with the documented hours of community service, a letter of recommendation and a sense of accomplishment in helping to make fresh, local produce available to the participants at Father Bill's. Students will need to complete an application and write a letter of interest in order to attend the program.

June programs at Wompatuck

Come to Wompatuck State Park for a fun and educational experience. All programs are free and open to the public. Rain cancels. An adult must accompany children. Reasonable accommodations available upon request. For more information, call the Park Interpreter at 781-749-7160 or visit www.mass.gov/dcr.

Military History of Wompatuck - Thursday, June 7, 9 to 10:15 a.m. Explore on foot the history of Wompatuck State Park including its acquisition by the Navy as an ammunition storage facility and its uses during World War and the Korean War. Meet at the Visitor Center.

NEWS UPDATE

Fees are going up on July 1

Dump/beach sticker price sparks debate

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Soon, Cohasset residents will pay more to toss trash, park at the beach, obtain liquor-serving licenses and more. The Board of Selectmen voted Tuesday to approve the interim town manager's proposed fee increases for fiscal year 2013, which starts July 1, 2012.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski presented the board his list of fees during the June 4 selectmen meeting; the board wanted to wait a week to review the changes and solicit community feedback before voting.

"Part of democracy is we help everybody, whether we use [the same services] or not."
Selectman Martha Gjesteby

In particular, selectman Martha Gjesteby was concerned about the cost increase of the transfer station/beach sticker. The rate per household went from $50 to $65, costing $35 for each additional sticker per household. For seniors, however, the proposed increase was a larger leap, from $15 to $35. The age of seniors was also raised from age 60 to 65.

Selectman Diane Kennedy worried that the increase for a one-day liquor license – from $35 to $50 – would negatively impact organizations and non-profits that put on community fundraiser events. Milanoski said that the selectmen have the right to waive the fees in certain circumstances. The town manager told the board this week that he met with the Council on Elder Affairs, who will offer financial assistance to those who have trouble affording the

THIS WEEKEND

Arts Festival is a family affair

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The tents are up. Food, music, socializing, shopping... and, of course, the art. The South Shore Arts Center (SSAC) celebrates 57 years of bringing fine art exhibits and family fun to Cohasset common. The event takes place over Father's Day weekend, June 15 to 17, and typically sees over 8,000 visitors.

This year's event features a mix of the old and the new: many popular exhibitors are back, but the Arts Center is switching it up with a few new programs and events, including a restaurant-sponsored iPad giveaway and a special exhibit by 15 chosen "arts stars" from 12 local high schools.

Sarah Hannan, executive director of the SSAC, said that her favorite part of the annual festival is the way the community comes together on the common. The three churches located on the common – St. Stephen's, First Parish, and Second Congregational – all pitch in; St. Stephen's plays the carillon, while First Parish and Second Congo provide lobster rolls and strawberry shortcake, respectively.

"It's an important tradition; I just think it's a great community event," said Hannan. "Everyone looks forward to it."

The festival's centerpiece is the main exhibition tent, which houses hundreds of Trees update

Neighbor volunteers to plant new ones

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Last Monday, June 4, in an incident that local arborists called an apparent act of vandalism, two trees were topped at the intersection of Joy Place and North Main Street.

This is also the site of an incident that occurred over eight years ago, when two trees, a pin oak and red oak, were taken down after a misunderstanding over the maintenance of a traffic island. The following year, two replacement trees were mysteriously poisoned with the household plant killer Roundup, but a suspect was never identified. The two trees that were topped on Monday were replacement trees for two that had been destroyed.

The two trees, one of which is a red oak located on the island honoring Vietnam veteran Capt. John Lyons, the other a pin oak located on town property next to Central Cemetery, have had significant portions chopped off the tops.

The pin oak lost about 18 feet off the top, while the red oak on the island is missing six feet, according to Massachusetts Certified Arborist (MCA) Gary Barrows.

When asked about the incident last week, Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski said at the time that he had not heard from anyone about the trees. During the Tuesday, June 12 Board of Selectmen meeting, Milanoski said that he was since contacted by Rob Kasameyer, who lives on North Main. Kasameyer volunteered to donate two new trees at the site; Milanoski said he asked Kasameyer to contact the town's tree warden, but otherwise "gave him the go-ahead."

"He has nothing to do with this, but volunteered at his own costs," said Milanoski.

Kasameyer could not be reached for comment, but the Mariner spoke with his wife in a phone call last week. Back in 2004, Kasameyer volunteered

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Veterans agent contact number

Interim Veterans Agent Garrett Hunt has an office above Sovereign Bank at Cohasset Plaza (380 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Suite F).

The best way to reach Hunt outside of office hours or to make an appointment is by calling 781-635-4407. The number is also listed on the outside of the building, front door at the street level.

Tech wiz comes to town

New CTO splits work between town/schools

By Erin Dale

The town manager, police and fire departments are all singing his praises, and he's only been working in town for two weeks.

Rob Bonnell was recently hired as the town and schools' Chief Technology Officer (CTO), a joint position that interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski and Supt. Barbara Cataldo worked together to create, advertise and hire. The position is shared and jointly managed by the superintendent and town manager, splitting up the tasks "60-40" between the schools and town.

Bonnell is still settling in, but apparently he has already hit the ground running. When asked if Bonnell has an office phone number yet, the Mariner was told that it's a work in progress; also, that the new CTO is constantly running around town, getting the job done.

"He's a ball of energy," Dep. Police Chief William Quigley said in a phone call.

"He's a moving target," Fire Chief Robert Silvia said during a meeting at the Emergency Operations Center. "He's everywhere. We've run him ragged over the past couple days at the police and fire station."

"He's doing a phenomenal job," Milanoski said of Bonnell. "From my perspective, we don't have a CTO right now— we have a wizard."

The Cohasset police department is one part of town that is grateful to have Bonnell around. When the station's server "suffered catastrophic failure" last Thursday, said Quigley, Bonnell was able to bail the police department out.

The police station's server contains over 16 years of police data, including the master name index, reports, files — "everything we do," according to Quigley.

"Thankfully, Rob had started at the beginning of the week and was able to get a good backup of some of our files," Quigley continued. "Four days later, we had this failure. The server we have writes for two hard drives, and both failed. It was sort of the perfect storm."

Bonnell worked on the servers all weekend long, said Quigley, and was able to recover most of the department's information.

The new CTO "resurrected" the data, said Milanoski. "The phoenix rose over the weekend."

Quigley joked that while the department was waiting for the server to be up and running again, working at the station from Thurs. to Mon. afternoon "was like when I first started in 1995... writing reports with pen and paper and filling out index cards for calls that came in."

According to Quigley, hiring Bonnell was "a great move."

"He's been excellent," the deputy chief added. "He's fixed several longstanding issues we've had at the station. He's a pleasure to work with, too."

Bonnell's name came up during a joint meeting Monday night between the Cable Advisory Committee and Cohasset Community TV, held at the Emergency Operations Center in the basement of the Deer Hill School. Silvia said during the meeting that the new CTO "works for the school and the town; he lives in two worlds and everybody benefits."

The Mariner hopes to catch up with Bonnell next week; that is, if he ever slows down.

Look for more in an upcoming issue of the Mariner.

POLICE BEAT

Another accident on 3a near gas station

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

At 6:59 a.m. on Monday (June 4), police responded to a two-car crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near the Gulf Station. Police said a 22-year-old Winchendon woman in a 2011 Mazda 3 was exiting the gas station and attempting to turn left toward Scituate across the northbound lane. As she edged out and the car in the first lane stopped but the car in second lane did not. A 2001 Mercury Marquis, operated by a 46-year-old Scituate man, hit her car. There were no injuries; both cars were towed. The Winchendon woman was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic, police said.

Deer accident

At 5:43 a.m. on Tuesday (June 5), a 50-year-old Scituate man in a 2000 Dodge Caravan that was headed north on Route 3A reported that a deer darted out from Brown's Auto Repair at Pond Street. The Caravan had minor front-end damage. The responding officer reported the deer had a broken leg and had to be put down. MassDOT disposed of the animal, police said.

Fender-bender

At 10:43 a.m. on Tuesday (June 5), police responded to a report of a "fender-bender" on Forest Avenue. The South Shore Elder Services van that was being operated by a 77-year-old Cohasset woman backed up on Forest Ave to access a driveway when it was "rear-ended" by a 2001 Ford Taurus, operated by a 19-year-old Hull woman. Neither vehicle was towed, as there was only minor damage. There were no injuries. Police reported that the driver of the Taurus said she was unable to stop due to the wet road.

Hit gas pedal

At 10:43 a.m. on Tuesday (June 5), an accident was reported on South Main Street involving an 82-year-old woman in a 2005 Honda Accord. Police said she was backing out of a driveway on S. Main and hit the accelerator rather than the brake. The car careened backwards across S. Main, into a stonewall and into the woods. The woman was not injured but her car was towed. Police have asked the Registry of Motor Vehicles to investigate the woman's fitness to drive.

Hit ledge

At 9:39 p.m. on Tuesday (June 5), police responded to a single-car accident involving a 52-year-old Cohasset man in a 2006 BMW, who reported hitting an outcropping of ledge on Jerusalem Road near Deep Run. The ledge caught the right side of the car and the vehicle sustained substantial damage, police said. The car had to be towed. There were no injuries.

Hit and run

A 63-year-old man who is a trustee of the condominium association at 100 Pond Street reported an apparent hit-and-run on Monday (June 4). Police said someone apparently crashed into one of the sewer control units causing about $1,000 in damage. Police said no evidence was left behind and there are no suspects at this time.

Deer put down

A deer that tried to jump over a fence in a yard on Jerusalem Road at about 2:40 p.m. on Tuesday (June 5) broke its leg in the process and had to be put down by police.

Diamond earrings

A 33-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police last Tuesday (June 5) that her $4,000, 1.88 karat Tiffany diamond earrings were missing. The last time she had seen the earrings was sometime this spring; she had left them in her car and just realized they were gone, police said.

K-9 deployed

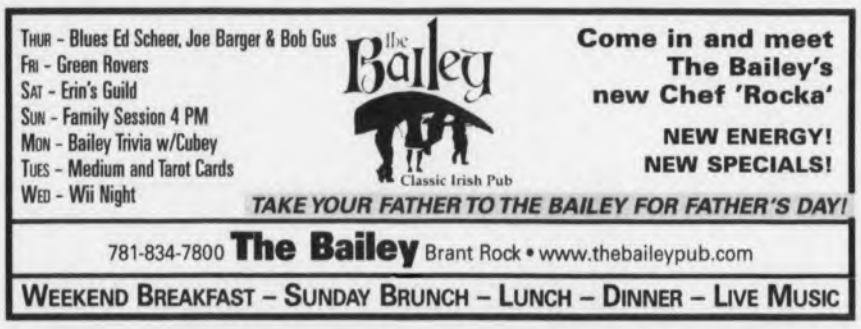
The Cohasset K-9 was called to Scituate for mutual aid last week to help find the suspect in an unarmed robbery, police said. Officer Patrick Reardon and K-9 Erik were able to track the suspect from Greenfield Terrace to Kent Village off the Driftway. The suspect was not located but Scituate police had a good description and later made an arrest. The new Scituate police dog is still in training, police said.

Also last week, Officer Reardon and K-9 Erik, responded to an attempted burglary at JJ's. The suspects were apparently scared off by the alarm and did not steal anything. They were tracked back off Route 3A where they had apparently ditched a getaway car and took off. The Plymouth County K-9 unit was in the area and provided assistance with the search, police said.

Graffiti

Police are investigating vandalism along the ledge in the Whitehead area of Atlantic Avenue. Reports about the graffiti came in last Thursday and Friday. Police said the rocks have been spray painted with crude comments.

Car keyed



The owner of a business at Tedeschi Plaza reported last Saturday that his 2007 BMW had been keyed while he was at work.

Threats

A 20-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Saturday that she had been receiving threatening text messages from an estranged friend. She did not want to file criminal charges but wanted the messages to stop. Police spoke with the friend who said she would stop the behavior.

Truck stolen

A 53-year-old Doane Street woman reported that her black 2004 Chevrolet Silverado pickup truck had been stolen the night before. She had possession of the keys and had not loaned the vehicle to anyone. Police entered the pickup's information into NCIC (National Criminal Information Center) that provides information to police departments nationwide.

PUBLIC RECORDS

Altholtz appealing town's response to request

A resident is challenging the town's approach to public records requests.

On May 2, the Mariner filed a public records request with Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, asking to inspect all emails generated or received by the selectmen's office from April 1 to May 1. Under the Public Records Law, emails and other electronic correspondence are considered to be public records and should be readily available.

On Fri., May 4, Milanoski responded to the Mariner's request with an estimated bill of over $7,000.

Howie Altholtz of Woodland Drive encountered a similar situation when he filed a request for all correspondence and emails generated by the Community Preservation Committee on the proposed grant to restore the windows at First Parish. Altholtz was a critic of the grant proposal, which was approved by Town Meeting last month, on the grounds that it is unconstitutional.

Altholtz received an estimated bill from Milanoski for more than $700 for the emails; he appealed the town's response with the state's Public Records Division. Altholtz heard back from the Supervisor of Public Records on June 1, letting him know that an attorney from that office will review the matter.

TREES

to maintain the Capt. Lyons memorial island at that intersection through the town's "Adopt an Island" program. After then-town manager Mark Haddad gave Kasameyer permission to cut down a tree there and replace it with another plant, without asking Kasameyer to contact the tree warden, Kasameyer contributed to the cost of replacing the tree he removed. Haddad took responsibility for failing to notify the tree warden.

Kasameyer's wife said last week that her husband is no longer in charge of maintaining the island. However, tree warden Andy Swanson said that he spoke with Kasamayer this week and thinks "it's wonderful" that a neighbor has stepped up to replace the trees.

"That's a nice thing to do," said Swanson.

Even though the trees are missing only the top portions, they stand little chance to survive, Swanson explained. Barrows said last week that the trees were effectively destroyed.

"I think replacing them would be the best thing," said Swanson. "When you're topping a deciduous tree, it usually dies a slow death.

"Hopefully," Swanson continued, "they don't get cut again."

FEES

dump/beach sticker. Elder Affairs has the resources to handle the matter confidentially, Milanoski said.

He also amended the increase for the senior dump/beach sticker from $35 to $25 and suggested the town reevaluate the cost next year.

Kennedy suggested establishing criterion to either assist or waive fees for those who cannot afford the sticker.

Barbara Bowman, Elm Street, president of the Tenant's Association at Harbor View, attended the meeting and expressed concern during the public comment period. She told the selectmen that for elderly residents of low-income housing, who do not utilize the dump sticker but purchase it so they can sit down at the beach with their coffees and newspapers, that the increase unfairly targets that group of individuals.

"We have our own trash receptacle at Harbor View," said Bowman. "Raising the rate from 15 to 35 is more than double." She added that many of the seniors in low-income housing are living off of Social Security and have an income of less than $13,000 per year, and also have to pay for rent, food, doctor's bills and prescription drugs. Being able to afford a beach sticker and sit down by the beach is a simple luxury, she said.

"They live in a coastal town, and it allows them to get out," Bowman explained. "A lot of them get together and have ice cream at the beach. To take that away from them... it isn't necessary to be that hurtful."

Bowman added that the inability to afford the sticker makes some "feel like second-class citizens."

Milanoski explained the reason for raising rates is because the transfer station is in deficit, and he would rather "have the users pay the fees" than have "taxpayers pay for all the services."

Gjesteby responded that she was in favor of raising taxes instead of increasing fees. "Part of democracy is we help everybody, whether we use [the same services] or not."

Agnes McCann, Doane Street, told the board that she thought raising the transfer sticker fee was "misguided."

"If you're making the focus on user fees... everyone would have private carriers," said McCann. "That's not a community... I think the town is leaning the less people that use it, the better."

Selectman chair Paul Carlson said the opposite is true. "We're not trying to discourage people from using" the transfer station, he said; "we need their fees."

"We want to encourage recycling," said Milanoski, explaining that this is why Cohasset has a "pay-as-you-throw" program for items that cannot be recycled.

Selectman Fred Koed said that it might be time for the town to consider going back to separate transfer station and beach stickers.

"I know it's a little inconvenient for our volunteers who issue the stickers, but it would eliminate the complaint," said Koed.

He added that separating the dump and beach stickers would allow the town a better way to track and "get a handle on" local receipts.

"You're basically buying a transfer sticker and getting a free beach sticker," said Milanoski. "That's where the costs are."

Koed responded that the only way to be fair "to the guy that just wants to go to the beach" is to separate the stickers. "I think next fall or early winter, we have to have a discussion." Koed added that when the town had separate stickers, the beach stickers "used to have great artwork," and it would be fun to get high school art students involved in the design of a new sticker.

The selectmen voted to approve the new set of fees. The entire list is available for public review in the selectmen's office at Town Hall; the list will also be added to the town website.

Bowman said in a phone call Wednesday that the $25 sticker is more reasonable than the original suggestion of $35. However, she plans to raise the issue to the selectmen and town manager again next year. She said that she hopes the town will issue beach-only stickers, which were available in previous years.

"When I was in my home, I paid for trash and then a beach sticker," said Bowman. "I had one for each car, and it was $10 or so."

Bowman said that in the 34 years she's lived in Cohasset, she's never attended a selectmen meeting before, but she plans to "stay on them for next year."

"I'm going to be there," Bowman said. "You can bet your nose on it."

COHASSET TRIATHLON

Church moves service due to Sunday race

Second Congo will meet at a member's home

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset Triathlon has raced through town on a Sunday in June for the past five years. The event raises money for juvenile diabetes and also helps support the Cohasset Food Pantry and Sandy Beach Association.

This year's race starts off at 8 a.m. on Sunday, June 24; the Board of Selectmen approved the date and time during a Nov. 2011 meeting with the race's organizer, Bill Burnett.

However, selectmen chair Paul Carlson said that it's been a longstanding concern of the board to see the triathlon date moved to a Saturday in order to better accommodate church services in town. Burnett said that he has been working with the clergy from St. Anthony's, St. Stephen's, First Parish and the Second Congregational Church to ensure that people can still get to church that day.

But one church has opted to forego meeting at their usual place and time that Sunday. The Reverend Gary Ritts of Second Congregational plans to hold his service at a member's home in Hull on the 24th.

Second Congo's service begins at 10 a.m. "Bikers are flying by right around 9:30," said Ritts. "It's really difficult for St. Anthony's, whose services start at 9:30."

Carlson brought the matter up during Tuesday night's selectmen meeting, stating that his understanding was that the triathlon's organizers were supposed to work with the church to ensure that services would not be impacted by the race. Carlson was under the impression that Second Congo had been told or asked to move their services.

Ritts confirmed in a phone call on Wednesday that that was not the case: "Nobody told us to do that; we made the choice ourselves," he said.

During Tuesday's selectmen meeting, selectman Leland Jenkins wondered how churches have dealt with the Sunday event in the past, nothing that this year's triathlon "is no different... it's always on a Sunday."

Ritts explained his decision to move the service that day. "For the last couple years, it has been so difficult for people coming to church. Attendance has dropped way off." The reverend hopes to remedy that "by moving off-site," he said.

Ritts added that he and his fellow clergy in town have "been trying to leverage against having [the triathlon] on Sunday morning... since that didn't change [this year], we thought we'd change venues."

Burnett, too, said that the notion the triathlon's organizers asked churches to move their services is "completely false," adding that the roads are open for all traffic that day.

"I've met extensively with the police team to make sure people can get to church," said Burnett. "I met with the different church leaders throughout the year... We are working hard with all parties involved to ensure it all works and everyone can get where they need to go."

Burnett added, "I appreciate the flexibility the churches have."

The triathlon will post and publish the race's chart sometime next week (look for it in the Fri., June 22 Mariner). Burnett said that Deputy Police Chief William Quigley "has put together a good safety plan for racers and everyone in town." He added that the event will have between 35 and 40 police details paid for by the triathlon.

Ritts noted that while he believes Burnett's "intentions are good," he still plans to lobby for a date change for next year's race.

Carlson said in a phone call Wednesday that he "over spoke" during Tuesday's meeting and had since learned that Ritts made his own decision to move the church service that day. The selectmen chair added that he hopes "to be fair to the churches and the triathlon."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski reminded the selectmen during Tuesday's meeting that they planned to hold a mandatory meeting later this summer for organizers of road races that come through town. This meeting will discuss the best methods for holding such races moving forward.

Triathlon needs volunteers

The Cohasset Triathlon is seeking volunteers for the Sunday, June 24th race.
The sixth annual event starts off with a swim at Sandy Beach, followed by a fast bike course that winds through historic Cohasset, and concludes with a scenic run along the waterfront on Jerusalem Road. This year's event will feature 850 to 900 athletes racing their way through town.
Organizer Bill Burnett encourages would-be volunteers to "come join a great community event on Sandy Beach, and be part of a great event that showcases Cohasset. You're going to feel great because you're part of an inspirational athletic event."
Anyone age 12 and up can volunteer.
All registered volunteers on race day will get a single priority race entry in the year following the race in which they volunteer. This priority entry is transferable to a direct family member for one year.
To volunteer, fill out the form on the Cohasset Tri website: http://www.cohassettri.com/volunteer.php or email trivolunteers@gmail.com.

Gjesteby asks for Town Manager RFP

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Newly elected selectman Martha Gjesteby (who previously served nine years on the board in the 80s-90s) is seeking to clarify the Town Manager hiring process. Gjesteby asked during a recent board of selectmen's meeting for the board to advertise a request for proposals (RFP) for a "qualified town manager as soon as possible."

"I think the process should start now, because it takes a while; the acting town manager's contract is up in June [next year]," said Gjesteby.

Selectman chair Paul Carlson said in a phone call that he thinks "it's premature to issue an RFP at this stage."

Cohasset resident Michael Milanoski, an economic development consultant, has been serving as acting town manager since February, after the board suspended then-town manager Michael Coughlin. Following Coughlin's removal without cause in March, Milanoski was appointed interim town manager and will serve in this role until June 30, 2013. Milanoski was an unpaid volunteer during his first two weeks as town manager; after that, the selectmen voted to keep him on for another month, during which he received a weekly stipend of $2,000. On March 20, the selectmen voted to extend him as interim for another 15 months; according to his contract, he is being paid a salary of $112,500 for the remainder of the current fiscal year (which ends June 30, 2012) and will receive $132,500 for fiscal year 2013.

When the board voted to extend him as interim, Milanoski suggested the board give him a six-month performance review "to determine whether this is working or not working." The review is included in Milanoski's employment contract. While Milanoski has earned praise from members of the selectmen and other committees, including Advisory and Capital Budget, Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said that anyone who serves as interim is exempt from serving as a permanent town manager. Milanoski's position could, however, be extended; according to his contract, his position will terminate on June 30 next year, unless the board decides to extend or renew his contract on or before Dec. 31, 2012.

Town Counsel said that Milanoski could serve as interim for up to five years.

The selectmen said in March that retaining Milanoski over the next year will allow them time to "bring stability back to Cohasset government" before conducting a new town manager search.

Then-chairman Ted Carr said at the time that keeping Milanoski onboard as interim will help the town "get through this annual budget and this Town Meeting, next year's annual budget and the next Town Meeting" and "allow enough time to get back on track to search for a new town manager one year from now."

Since then, Carr was unseated by Gjesteby during the May 19 election; selectman Paul Carlson is now serving as chair. Gjesteby brought up the matter of the new town manager search during last week's selectmen meeting, her third as a member of the current board.

"According to the town manager contract, the board will review his performance this September. Three months later by Dec. 31, 2012, the board must notify the acting town manager if it has no plan to renew his contract that ends June 30, 2013," Gjesteby said at the meeting. In light this timeline, she asked the board to issue a town manager RFP "as soon as possible."

Carlson explained that the town must get through the current investigation of union allegations brought against Police Chief Mark DeLuca, who was recently suspended with pay, as well as Milanoksi's performance review in September before making a decision to conduct a new town manager search.

Cohasset's BC High graduates earn honors

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Warm wishes

Hello Cohasset and Happy Fathers Day Weekend to all the proud Fathers, Uncles, Grandpas and father-like figures out there...you are special and looked up to by all the kiddos who are shorter than you (for know) and who will continue to look to you as they grow for advice, life lessons, love and acceptance. Happy Fathers Day Dads...

I wanted to wish Daniel Piepenbrink a very happy birthday today as he turns 22, have a super day Dan and a great year! We all love you lots!

I also wanted to wish all of those who celebrated their last days of school this past week and for Cohasset students, this coming Monday, a wonderful, happy and very safe Summer! Schools out for the summer...

Habitat ride

Wow, huge congratulations on a personal accomplishment to Dr. Lisa Lewis. On Saturday, June 9th she participated in the 6th annual Ride for Habitat which is a 50 or 25 mile bike ride to raise money for South Shore Habitat for Humanity. Dr. Lewis did the 25-mile route and raised $435. It was a gorgeous day and she had a fabulous ride! You should be so proud of yourself as I know that the community around you is, thank you so much for sharing this news, NICE JOB!

BC High graduate, William Brown.

BC High awards

William Brown, Taylor Golz, Jay Salerno and Matthew Swanborg of Cohasset, graduates of Boston College High School, recently won special awards at Senior Class Assembly, a time set aside to celebrate and reward its seniors.

William and Taylor won Kairos Leader awards, Jay won a Key Society Director's award and a Sports Debate Club award, Matthew won a Kairos Leader award and a Senior Kitchen award.

Fairfield University

Hats off to Erika J. Gjesteby, who graduated, cum laude, from Fairfield University in Fairfield, Conn., with a bachelor of arts degree in politics with minors in communication and peace and justice studies on May 20, 2012 She is a member of the National Political Science Honor Society, Pi Sigma Alpha. She is the daughter of Rolf Gjesteby of Cohasset and Pamela Gjesteby of Stow, and granddaughter of Arne and Martha Gjesteby of Cohasset and Charles and Theresa Gargaly of Wallingford, Conn.

BC High graduate, Taylor Golz.

Graduate

The 2012 South Shore Educational Collaborative's South Shore High School Graduation was held on Wednesday June 6th and Cohasset's own Letra Kimla graduated from South Shore High School and was presented with her High School Diploma by Stephanie Moriarty. Congratulations Letra!

Dean's list

Alyssa Mullin has been named to Seton Hall University's spring, 2012 Dean's List. Alyssa, who is majoring in Diplomacy and International Relations, will be participating in an international program at the Sorbonne in Paris this summer. Congratulations Alyssa!

Relay coming

Coming up very soon is the American Cancer Society Relay For Life on June 22 and June 23rd at the Cohasset High School. This yearly event is a wonderful way for family and friends to come together and raise money in a fun, caring and special way with walking, activities for all ages, the Luminaria walk, Survivors Tent, Children's Lap and so much more. The schedule is as follows. 3 pm-Relay For Life begins with team registration open, Children's Activities begin, Yoga, bouncy house, dunk tank, pizza and fun for all...5 p.m.-Survivor Registration begins...5:30 p.m. - Children's lap...6 p.m.-Opening Ceremony with opening remarks from Harry St. Onge, Fred Hussey, Board of Relay For Life and Survivor, Bryan Hudson's story...6:30 p.m., Survivors and Caregivers Lap with a song by Lily Sestito...6:40 p.m., Team Lap...6:45 p.m., Rusty Skippers Band...9 p.m., Luminaria Ceremony...9:30 p.m., Games...Saturday from 8- to 10 am DJ-Ray Papile with the Relay closing at 10 am.

Luminaria bags are available at the Our World Children's Museum, 100 Sohier St. and you can speak with Julie Laugelle when you get there or call Jacqui Goyette-Vitello at 781-383-2668. The bags can be decorated with the name(s) of those who have battled and lost their lives to this terrible disease, those who continue the fight, survivors and caregivers and donations all go to the cause. The Relay For Life is all about raising not only funds but also, about raising awareness in ways to help prevent, find cures and stomp out this horrible, terrible disease.

BC High graduate, Jay Salerno.

Swim Center

Schools out and the pools are ready....The Cohasset Swim Center would like to welcome all members and non-members alike...to join them for their Open House this Saturday, June 16 from 12-6. They will have free family swim all day and free hot dogs and chips from 12-2. They welcome residents of Cohasset and neighboring towns to splash into summer with 3 pools....toddler, 3-foot training, and lap pool. The Cohasset Swim Center is open weekends in June from 12-6. The pool will open full time on June 23rd. Please see www.cohassetswimcenter.com for more information.

BC High graduate, Matthew Swanborg.

Rusty Skippers

Here is a wonderful event that just sounds like a fantastic way to spend an evening! The South Shore's Rusty Skippers Concert Band has kicked off their summer season and will be appearing at The South Shore Conservatory's Carr Amphitheater on Saturday evening, June 23rd. Admission is Free. Festivities kick off at 6 p.m. with hot dogs, drinks and ice cream offered to all at no charge by the event's generous sponsors, Janna Oddleifson and Jane Carr. The concert will commence at 7:00 p.m. If you haven't experienced a musical event at the Carr Amphitheater, you are in for a real treat. It is an acoustic joy for concert-goers. So grab a hot dog or a picnic basket of your own, come for the music, the tranquil setting nestled among the trees on the SSC campus, or stroll around the beautiful grounds. It is a concert event not to missed!

Library programs

Coming up soon at the library are a few events that you may be interested in. The first is a coffee and discussion of the book The Kitchen House by Kathleen Grissom on Wednesday, June 27 at 10 am.

Next, enjoy a free movie matinee on Friday, July 6 at 11 am. This month's feature is Steven Spielberg's "War Horse." Free admission and light refreshments will be served courtesy of the Friends of the Cohasset Library. Finally, come and learn how to search the internet at this Basic Internet Skills Workshop for novices at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Wednesday, July 11 at 10:30 am. Remember that seating is limited so call the library to reserve your seat at 781-383-1348.

DVDs offered

DVD's of the CHS Senior Pre Prom Red Carpet Gala from May 25th are available to purchase for $20 each. Also DVD's of the CHS Graduation from June 2nd are available to purchase for $20 each. FESTIVAL artists in a juried exhibition and members' show. Over 400 pieces of artwork will be on display. According to festival coordinator Tim Waite, who also teaches photography at the SSAC, nearly half of this year's exhibitors are new to the festival. "We went out of our way" to highlight new talent this year, said Waite.

"It's good to keep it fresh," added Hannan.

There is also a kids' tent showcasing a young artists' exhibition and creative activities for young festival patrons. If all the artwork isn't enough, there are also 90 exhibitor tents spread throughout the common, featuring artisans selling their wares: jewelry, ceramics, photography, clothing, even home and garden products.

The festival stage will feature continuous musical performances by local acts all weekend long, including the Rusty Skippers, The South Shore Bay Band, The Infractions, Dogtown and Closer Than We Appear.

For those wanting to get even closer to the music, there's the Saturday evening jazz reception at the Arts Center, also featuring a silent auction. Guests can follow the music to eight different private homes that will host private dinner parties featuring different local artists. The jazz reception by itself costs $35; the reception and dinner costs $85. Many of the home dinner parties are already sold out.

Hannan said that the jazz reception is a highlight each year. "People come and go to private homes for dinner; it's a really nice event. Then on Sunday, everyone gets together and says, 'What did you have? Where did you go?'"

Adding to the event's excitement is the new-this-year "Festival Arts Stars" program, coordinated with 12 local high schools. The program is also sponsored by grants from each town's cultural council and a grant from Entergy-Pilgrim Station. Fifteen students were selected by their art teachers to participate on a special sculpture project; the theme is "Energy Matters," and the young artists were encouraged to explore the concepts of natural and manmade energy, movement, organic and inorganic life and recycling. The chosen students spent four Saturdays between February and April working in groups to create their sculptures. Four different masterpieces will be unveiled during the festival.

Also new this year? A chance to win an iPad. All attendees have to do is pick up a flier for the festival at one of 17 local participating restaurants, including Bia Bistro and 5 South Main in Cohasset (see the SSAC website for complete list). Contestants fill out the flier, bring it to the festival and enter it in the drawing to win the iPad. Whichever restaurant is listed on the chosen flier will win a $1000 Visa gift card. The iPad and the gift card were both donated by Bill Houser, a Norwell resident and SSAC member. The drawing will take place at 4 p.m. on Sunday in the arts festival sponsor tent; the winner does not need to be present in order to receive the prize.

The director added that one thing she is asked at the festival every year is whether the artwork is for sale. The answer? A resounding "yes." The event functions as a fundraiser for the arts center, and most of the artwork is for sale (look for the price tags).

"It's an affordable way to bring art into your home, and it helps artists and the community," Hannan said.

"We have a saying here: 'Buy what you love.' We're conscious of that. A lot of young families like the Pottery Barn, Crate and Barrel look – not that there's anything wrong with that – but original art is more warm, inviting and unique."

This year marks the festival's 57th in Cohasset; it's also Waite's first year as festival coordinator. Last year, he worked as assistant coordinator alongside Diane Kennedy, who was elected last spring to Cohasset's Board of Selectmen. Waite said that he's enjoyed volunteering his time to make sure this weekend's event goes perfectly.

"This is my kind of thing," said Waite. "I enjoy this; it's a lot of fun."

Strawberry Festival part of weekend fun

This Father's Day Weekend will feature Strawberry Shortcake desserts for your favorite Dad, to be celebrated either Friday, Saturday, or Sunday...or all three days, when the Second Congregational Church, located next to the Town Hall on Cohasset Common, will celebrate this special weekend along with the South Shore Arts Center's "Festival on the Common."

There will be food and beverages, and a place to rest under a big tent, so you can enjoy your Strawberry Shortcake with family or friends away from the hot sun. They stroll the common and visit the many find crafters with the creations for sale. Then visit the artwork under the tent, and perhaps buy one of the beautiful paintings and photographs to give to Dad or enjoy yourself.

Organizers and expecting just the right weather to sell their 2,000 shortcakes and hundreds of hot dogs and hamburgers to a hungry crowd, expected in the thousands during the three-day event. Hot dogs this year will be sold by members of the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project (ASP), right from the Church's food tent, and on the Common on Saturday as well. Look for them and enjoy a hot dog for only $2.50. All proceeds for the hot dogs will go directly to the ASP fund. ASP will also have a raffle for several Red Sox games coming up. Look for that and select the game you would like to win tickets for.

It all starts at noon for the Strawberry Shortcakes, when scores of local businesses will receive theirs from a team of delivery persons right at their office. If you haven't ordered yet, there may still be time if you call the Church Friday morning at 383-0345, or come by and pick up your shortcakes to go, anytime from noon on. Guaranteed to be filled with fresh strawberries picked Thursday morning, 650 quarts, sliced and ready to go for Friday, to smother the two Pillsbury biscuits in the bowl, and then topped with real whipped cream...no substitutes used here. All for only $6 each. A dessert fit for a King! Or anyone else. Join the celebration, and bring your friends.

All proceeds from the Church's Strawberry Festival benefit local charities. Festival on the Common hours are Friday from 4 to 7 p.m., Saturday 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday noon to 5 p.m.

'My dad is the best'

The following Father's Day essays are from Mrs. Cook's second grade class at Osgood.

With Father's Day coming up, Mrs. Cook's second grade class at Osgood put pen to paper and wrote about their dads. COURTESY PHOTO

My dad is the best. He has black hair like mine and his eyes are as blue as a blue shirt. My dad is as funny as a clown and he is as caring as a mother bat. If someone needs help my dad will help them. For work he makes floors and cabinets in different colors. At home my dad made me an ice skating rink in my backyard. My dad helps me with hockey and takes me to my games. If I get hurt he takes care of me. I like to play hockey with him and I like when he's proud of me. I feel loved when he hugs me. I love my dad!

Joe Bennett

My dad is smart, caring and fun. My dad is a teacher. He is as smart as the President. My dad's eyes are as blue as the sky. He has brown hair and he is as tall as a giraffe. At home he sometimes helps with the dishes and he takes care of our bees. He helped me build my beehive and he helped me get ready for my tomato plant sale. It's really fun when he plays baseball with me and I like when we play my X-Box Connect. I like when my dad kisses me goodnight and says, 'Hi' when he gets home from work. When he calls me Buddy, I feel special.

My dad tells me that he loves me a lot! I LOVE MY DAD.

Cosmus Craig

I love my dad because he's nice and funny. My dad looks like a football fan because he wears football clothes. He looks like a very nice and loving guy. He has blue eyes and he's tall. In the front his hair is gray and the rest is brown. My dad works at the Bullfinch Group. He goes to lots of meetings so we only get to see him in the morning and a little bit after he gets home. At home my dad plays with us all the time and he is so helpful. My dad helps me by getting down things I can't reach. He also lets me play 'Angry Birds' on his new phone. My dad helps me in other ways too...Like he helps me practice softball so when I go to my games it helps me to do good. I really like playing outside with him and I love when we go to JJ's together-ALONE. My dad makes me feel loved because he says nice things to me and he hugs me. My dad is the best dad in the whole world and nobody can beat him.

He loves me and I love him. That's why I love him more than anything!

Nora Cunningham

My dad is awesome! He is as beautiful as our dog Bernie and his smile is as big as the world. He is as funny as the squirrels in my backyard and he's as strong as Hulk. He is as cool as Ray Allen. When he's home he is helpful because he helps my mom keep us quiet. Sometimes he is strict and he yells at my brothers and me because we're out of control or we're annoying him. Most of the time he is so-so nice. My dad helps me fix things when they break. I love to work in the basement with him. I also like when he plays football with me and it's fun when we skate together. He makes me happy when he tackles me. My dad loves to sail and he's teaching me how.

I love to go out on our boat with him. When I fall overboard my dad helps me. He is always watching me and my brothers to keep us safe. He makes me feel special when I get to be with him all by myself. I feel loved when he calls me Ber-Ber and when he gives me big hugs. He's the best dad I could ever have. I love you Daddy.

Jay Fox

My dad is very tall. He has blond curly hair and he has a very big smile. He is as handsome as Larry Bird. He is as smart as Albert Einstein. He is sooooo funny and nice. My dad works for insurance. He has to go to Boston to get to work. At home my dad mows the lawn and sometimes he helps by cleaning the kitchen. He has to take out the stinky trash. My dad helps me reach things and he taught me how to play basketball. I enjoy going on rides with him and watching T.V. with him. I feel loved when my dad gives me hugs and when he tells me that he loves me. That is why my dad is the BEST!

Ava Curry

My dad is as funny as a clown. He has dark brown hair and his eyes are as brown as a tree branch. My dad is funny and kindhearted. His laugh is as lovely as a bird's song. My dad works in Boston at a company called JP Morgan. At home my dad sometimes makes dinner. My dad helps me get better in sports and spelling. When we go on vacations I love going on the theme park rides with him. My dad makes me feel loved because he gives me hugs. My dad is special to me and my family!

Nobody has a dad like mine. My dad has blackish-grayish hair, green eyes and one dimple. My dad is as funny as a clown, as nice as a puppy and he's super cool. My dad works for Evan's Home Improvement. At home he helps by doing the laundry and sometimes he does yard work. He helps me by helping with my homework every night. My dad taught me how to play soccer and we enjoy playing Wheel of Fortune. I really like it when we go out on our boat. My dad makes me feel loved when he hugs me and calls me 'Muffin.' That's why nobody has a better dad than me!

Brooke Evans

My dad is the best dad in the world. He makes me laugh. My dad gives me candy and he buys me stuff. He is the coolest dad. He buys me games including Harry Potter. My dad is really-really-really nice and he really loves me so-so-so much. He is thoughtful and he's really good at helping. He helps me on the computer and he helps me on my bike and he helps me on the piano. Sometimes he helps me find money. I enjoy playing Battleship with my dad. When he hugs me and helps me I feel loved and special. My dad is the BEST dad in the world!

Nate Fever

My dad is the best 'Buster Brown' in the world. He has deep blue eyes just like mine and everyone tells me my eyes are beautiful. I think he is funny but he thinks I am the funniest. For work my dad is an architect. At home he helps me get better at hockey and he buys me my hockey equipment. I like when my dad plays outside with me. He plays basketball and football with me. Sometimes we play football so hard that once, by mistake- he gave me a bloody nose. My dad built us an ice rink in our yard- It's awesome! I know my dad loves me and I'm special... because he likes me.

Jacob Gifford

My dad is the best dad in the world and no one can beat it. Dad's smile is as big as the moon. He is not tall, not short, he is in the middle. My dad's personality is kind, caring, loving, and fun! My dad goes to work in Boston. He works at Fidelity Investments. At home my dad does the laundry and the dishes in a special daddy way. My dad helps me clean my room, helps me play soccer and helps me get my bike out of the garage. I enjoy reading with him. I also enjoy watching Alvin and the Chipmunks with him. My dad makes me feel loved when I curl up with him. My dad is the best and everyone knows that!

Mary Claire Griffin

My dad looks like a busy work man. His hair is as gray as an elephant and he's very tall. My dad's personality is funny and he's friendly and he's kind. My dad is in charge of the Buzzard's Bay offices. At home my dad helps me with my homework and he reminds me not to wear my skirt when I bike. When I was five my dad helped me learn to ride a bike and he helped me learn math. I love when my dad takes me to JJs after soccer. I love when he hugs me. I love you Dad-"V"

Viola Henry

My papa is the coolest in the world! My papa is tall and looks like me. He is nice to our neighbors. He is as cool as a soccer star. My papa works at Harvard and he solves problems there. When he helps at home he fixes things that are broken and sometimes he washes the dishes and sometimes he makes us breakfast. My papa helps me with my homework and he helps me remember German words. I like to talk in German with him and I like making franzbrotchen with him. I feel loved and special when he hugs me and tells me "You are great!" My papa is the funniest and nicest in the world.

Liam Heinlein

My dad is the nicest in the world. My dad is as tall as the Great Wall of China. When my dad was in college he had an Afro. He is very handsome. My dad is as nice as a puppy. He's as funny as a laughing hyena and he is as protective and caring as a lion. My dad works at home on the computer for Harvard. At home he sometimes does the dishes and he makes really good tacos. My dad helped me set up my computer and Wii. He helps me with math. I love playing sports outside with my dad. When my mom is gone we like to watch scary movies. My dad makes me feel special when he says, "Great job!" I feel loved when he hugs me before I go to school and when I go to bed. I know he loves me when he calls me Boo Boo, I call him Yogi. Even though I said my dad is the nicest dad in the world, he's really the nicest dad in the universe!

Hilton Hudson

My dad is the best dad in the whole world. My dad has light brown hair and his eyes are blue like the sky. His smile is as bright as the sun. My dad laughs a lot and he cuddles with me when we watch football and soccer together. My dad works for the Cohasset High School. He is a history teacher. At home my dad does the dishes with me and helps me clean my room. My dad is good at math so he helps me with my math homework. What I enjoy doing with him is going to a baseball game together. My dad makes me feel loved because he's so nice to me. I'm so lucky to have him for a dad!

Julia Kerr

I like to call my dad, Daddy D Dog. My dad is as tall as the Empire State Building. He has black and gray hair and his smile is as nice as a rainbow. He is kind because he helps me reach stuff. He is thoughtful when he brings my mom flowers and he makes people laugh. My dad is a businessman and he works in Boston. At home he mows the lawn and sometimes he cleans the house. My dad taught me how to play basketball and baseball. He helps me with my homework. I like to play football with him and I like when he takes me to lacrosse games. Best of all I like it when he takes me to get ice cream. I love when my dad buys me toys and he gives me hugs and says "Good job!" Thank you for taking care of me. I love you dad.

Ryan Lynch

My dad is so-so amazing. He has prickly fuzzy hair and he has beautiful blue eyes like the sky. He wears a suit to work. My dad is so funny and he tells the best jokes, he's like a joker. My dad is an accountant and he goes to Braintree. He has the best office and there's even candy in the front. At home he helps by soothing my little sister when she cries. He also gets up early and makes breakfast and he helps by folding the laundry. When I was in the first grade my dad taught me how to play ice hockey and now I play on a team! I've played the piano since I was three and my dad encouraged me. If I have a problem my dad will help me figure it out. I enjoy playing Jeopardy with him in the car. I feel loved when he gives me big hugs and kisses. He also kisses me goodnight. I love him and he loves me.

Sarafina Madden

I have the best dad. My daddy is a big guy like Abe Lincoln. My daddy's hair is black like the TV. He is kind and nice to everyone but sometimes he is serious. My daddy works at UNUM selling things. At home he does the dishes and he takes care of us. My daddy helps me with sports. I enjoy playing with my dad like having running races with him.

My dad makes me feel special when he cheers me on at sport's games and tells me he's proud of me and when he says, good job! I feel loved when he tucks me in and says, I love you. My daddy is AWESOME and I love him a lot.

Jack Pyne

My daddy is the best! He has black hair and his eyes are green like a turtle. He is big and strong like 'The Rock.' He is as kind and caring as a lion. My dad is serious about his work. He is the boss of Food Masters, in Whitman. My dad loves to watch sports and he likes to play sports with me. He likes to do chores and I don't. At home he builds stuff and he helps me with my math homework. I like to play basketball in my room with him and I love when he takes me to a movie and out for ice cream. My dad makes me feel loved and special when he sleeps with me and when he calls me Drama Queen. My dad loves me a lot. I love you, Daddy.

Will Molloy

My dad is the best! My dad has greenish blue eyes. His hair is blond and gray. He looks like a hockey player because he was one. My dad is as loving as my guinea pig is when she purrs at me. He has good manners and he is a gentleman. His job is planning cruises for people. He works all week and he has one day off. At home he works on the computer so we can move to a new house. He helps by giving the flowers water. If I fall he rushes to pick me up. My dad taught me how to play street hockey. He is a really good hockey player. Some Sundays we have a family meeting time and my dad helps me solve problems. I like spending time with my dad. I like to go to the movies with him and I like when he pets my guinea pig with me. I really like it when he helps me hit baseballs. I feel special when my dad calls me Lukie and when he hugs me. No one has a dad like mine. I love you dad!

Lucas Najjar

My dad is so awesome. He has brown hair and blue eyes and he looks exactly like me. My dad is very kind. It's like he has a machine inside his body that makes him be nice. He is as loving as a 1,000,000 inches tall heart. For work he has a painting company. At home he mows the lawn and rakes in the fall. My dad tells me stories of when he was a kid and he would be outside all day. The only thing that would get him inside is breakfast, lunch and dinner. My dad has played hockey since he was my age. He is one of my coaches and he spends a lot of time helping me get better. I like when my dad and I go out early in the morning and get a bagel and hot chocolate. I love when he takes me out on his boat and we go fishing. I love practicing hockey with him. My dad makes me feel special when I score some goals and he says, "Great job Peter!" and gives me high-fives. I feel loved when he hugs and kisses me before he goes to work.

My dad is GOLDEN! COOL!

Peter Vitello

My dad has dark brown hair and he has the same color eyes as me. His smile is as big and bright as a star. My dad is so so so kind. He is so loving and caring. He's as nice as an ice cream cone on a hot day. My dad works at a bank in Boston. At home my dad takes care of the lawn. Sometimes he helps me with my homework and reading. He also helps me get ready for bed. I like going to soccer with him. He makes me feel loved when he gives me a kiss before I go to bed. He makes me feel special when he calls me Rachie.

Dad...You're the best dad on the planet! I love you!

Rachael Webster

My dad is the best. My dad is great. He has black hair and brown eyes. He is as tall as a tree. My dad talks a lot. When my dad sleeps he's really annoying because he snores really loud! My dad is a lawyer and he works at Ropes and Gray. He goes to work a lot and I really don't like it. We just finished remodeling our house and we had to live in a rental until it was done. My dad helped my mom move stuff. My dad helps me by playing catch with me and I like when he helps me build really big lego sets. I like when we watch baseball together. I feel loved when I get home and my dad asks me how my day was and when he calls me Buddy. My dad is as nice as chocolate cake.

I really love my dad!

Cohasset Farmers' Market season returns

Opens on Thursday, June 21

By Erin Dale

"Vendors will be offering locally grown produce, fresh fish and lobster, homemade specialty and prepared foods such as breads, jellies, pies, cookies and snacks, handmade jewelry and crafts and more."
Pat Hague, organizer

A summer mainstay is coming back to Cohasset. Next Thursday, June 21, on the second official day of summer, the 21st annual Cohasset Farmers' Market will bring back fresh, local produce, tasty treats, handmade crafts, and live entertainment to the town common.

While many summertime favorites will be back, organizer Pat Hague said that there are plenty of new things to look forward to this year.

"We have some new vendors, and many of our popular vendors are back," she said. "Vendors will be offering locally grown produce, fresh fish and lobster, homemade specialty and prepared foods such as breads, jellies, pies, cookies and snacks, handmade jewelry and crafts and more."

As always, kids can enjoy pony rides and cold treats from the Nona's homemade ice cream truck. Baked goods and other treats will be available, along with farm-fresh vegetables from nearby Holly Hill Farm, Cohasset's own organic farm. Other farms will be a fixture at the market as well, including Hornstra Farms of Norwell, which will sample chocolate milk.

New to the market this year is a barbecue-to-go truck so market patrons can grab lunch while they browse artistic wares, enjoy the live music and shop the vegetable stands to snap up ingredients for a healthful, colorful summer supper. Another new vendor will also offer fresh lobster and lobster rolls.

Another new feature of the market is a table for the Cohasset food pantry; so while you stock up on in-season goodies, you can also donate canned goods and other items to the pantry.

Hague said that the format and the layout of the market could change this year as well. "We may be closing up the space a little, just to make it cozier," she said.

While the market will see some new vendors and new faces, another old favorite that was gone for a while is returning this year — Hague said to look out for the return of the dog parade. "That was a big deal," she said with a laugh.

Mary Sease, one of the farmers' market's longtime organizers, shared that the market is ready to kick off the new season. "Our music is ready, our farmers are ready, we just need the crowd!" she said, adding that this year, "I'm looking forward to having no rain – 'cause we were rained out quite a bit last year – and beautiful days on the common with family."

Cohasset's farmers' market is held each Thursday afternoon from 2 to 6 p.m., from mid-June to mid-October. Check for updates in each week's Mariner for news on farmers' market vendors, contests and special events.

REAL ESTATE

Own a piece of 'Independence'

Historic town property for sale

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A piece of Cohasset's history is on the market.

The house at 24 South Main Street, known as the "Independence" building, is up for sale. The building is so named because it once housed Cohasset's fire engine, a horse-drawn handpumper, of the same name.

The building is located in downtown Cohasset, across the street from Coldwell Banker and next to the steps of St. Stephen's.

"It's truly the town's oldest municipal building," said listing agent Lillian Sestito of Coldwell Banker. "It has a neat history."

According to the town's Historical Society, a committee was formed to get the town a hand-pumper back in 1848; the building was erected in 1850 and served as the fire station. The handpumper was used until 1886.

The "Independence" building has also served as the town's police station, including during Prohibition in the 1920s and '30s. The fire department moved to the Cove in 1913; the police department moved in and called the building home for the next 50 years. The original jail cell doors are still intact, according to Sestito.

After the police station moved to its current location on at 62 Elm St., the town reevaluated the "Independence" property; its current zoning allows for mixed use. According to the Historical Society, the building once housed a gown museum for early wedding gowns and textiles; now, the building is used for both residential and retail purposes.

The building's first floor houses the flower shop, Bumble Bee Landing; the second and third floors function as an apartment. The retail portion has 421 square feet while the residential part has 800 square feet and overlooks downtown. The list price for the building is $399,900.

Those interested in checking out the property can attend an open house on Sunday, June 24 from noon to 2 p.m.

The Independence Building has had quite a history. This undated photo shows how it looked long ago. COURTESY PHOTOS

Cohasset Carillon concerts to start

The 88th annual Summer Recital Series will begin at 6 p.m., on Sunday June 24, and continue each Sunday until Aug. 12.

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of bells (23), President Calvin Coolidge and his wife, Grace, stood on Cohasset Common listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

Cohasset Common, in the center of town, is one of the best listening places. Parking is ample and free. Bring lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while the bells are ringing. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

The Carillon Concert Series is sponsored by St. Stephen's Church. This year's series is also supported in part by a donation from Alicia and John Seavey of Cohasset, and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local branch of the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Rusty Skippers at Conservatory

South Shore's Rusty Skippers Concert Band has kicked off its summer season and will appear at South Shore Conservatory's Carr Amphitheater, One Conservatory Drive, Hingham, on Saturday, June 23. Admission is free. Festivities will kick off at 6 p.m. with hot dogs, drinks and ice cream offered to all at no charge by the event's sponsors, Janna Oddleifson and Jane Carr. The concert will commence at 7 p.m.

Those who haven't experienced a musical event at the Carr Amphitheater are in for a treat. It is an acoustic joy for concertgoers. So grab a hot dog or picnic basket of one's own, come for the music, the setting nestled among the trees on the SSC campus or stroll around the grounds.

Fireworks are June 30

The Hingham Lions will host the annual, classic American tradition, the July 4th Community Celebration, which includes family activities, music, food and a wonderful fireworks extravaganza on Saturday, June 30 at Hingham Harbor. Join them to commemorate the founding of our country and have fun along side generations of families enjoying America's holiday.

Although the festivities have benefited from widespread public support in the past, many still may not realize that the fireworks are privately funded - solely by donations. Help make 2012 a success!

BENEFITS DANA-FARBER

Matt Deveney Memorial Concert is Saturday

By Elizabeth Deveny
Special to the Mariner

While Matty is missed by all, we are taking this night to celebrate his life, enjoy the music he loved, and donate to a worthy cause.

Playin' Dead - Boston's Grateful Dead Tribute Band presents The Matt Deveney Memorial Concert to Benefit the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute at 8 p.m. Saturday, June 16, at Showcase Live, 23 Patriot Place, Foxboro.

*Ticket prices are based on the amount you would like to donate. There will be plenty of seating and it is on a first come, first serve basis.

$25 Dancing Bear - General Admission*

$50 Sugar Magnolia - General Admission*

$75 Casey Jones - General Admission*

$100 Uncle John - VIP Seating (Only sold in groups of four)

Playin' Dead brings together amazing talent to pay tribute to Grateful Dead music. Rife with passion and spirit, the band brings the Dead's music to life with dedication and style.

Matt Deveney, Playin' Dead's former keyboard player, passed away in June 2007 after a five-month battle with a rare form of cancer called GIST (Gastro Intestinal Stromal Tumors). He was 35 years old. Matt was a kind soul who was known for playing with his eyes half-closed and a big grin on his face. While Matty is missed by all, we are taking this night to celebrate his life, enjoy the music he loved, and donate to a worthy cause.

Since its founding in 1947, Dana-Farber has been committed to providing adults and children with cancer the best treatment available today while developing tomorrow's cures through cutting-edge research. 100 percent of the proceeds from ticket sales to this event will be donated directly to the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

And...well, well, well, you can never tell. You might go home with a few prizes as well. Make sure to enter our "I Need A Miracle" raffle and "Shakedown Street" silent auction when you arrive. Auction items include, among others, Red Sox and Patriots tickets, autographed items, a private acoustic performance by Playin' Dead in your home, free beer for a year from Sam Adams, autographed Phish poster, concert tickets, a Legal Seafood Clambake dinner delivered to your door, vintage wine, restaurant gift certificates, beauty products and so much more.

To purchase tickets to this event, visit www.showcaselive.com. If you are unable to attend, but would like to make a donation, a check payable to the Matt Deveney Memorial Fund, may be sent to 664 Gallivan Blvd, Dorchester, MA 02124.

Tall ships in Boston Harbor

Cohasset Historical Society is planning an afternoon at sea to view the tall ships that will again visit Boston Harbor over the 4th of July holiday weekend. On Sunday, July 1, attendees will sailing the harbor aboard the yacht Marika admiring sailing vessels from all over the world. The group will leave Rowes Wharf at 2 p.m. for a 3-hour sail, returning at 5 p.m. Cost of the trip is $80 per person, which includes the narrated tour, stationery and passed hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar. This is a rain or shine event, but the yachts panoramic windows provide excellent viewing from inside its casually elegant cabin. The Historical Society extends an open invitation for this marine adventure. This seagoing afternoon would make a lovely family outing or special gift.

Since this is a fun and popular activity, it is suggested that reservations be made early by calling the Historical Society at 781-383-1434 and sending a check, made out to Cohasset Historical Society to The Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025.

OUR VIEW

Learning together

We like to think of ourselves as technologically savvy – but that is not always the case. The fact is that we are a lot like you. We are learning as we go.

The pace of change in our industry and just about everyplace else is mind-boggling.

We raise this issue because we are receiving more and more information from you via email and through our wickedlocal website.

One thing is for sure: the amount of information coming via email and through the web is going to increase not decrease.

We appreciate your patience when we cannot open an attachment or a link that you send to us. We endeavor to get back to you right away by hitting reply to let you know our predicament.

However, the size of our "inbox" in our email (which we share with the Hingham Journal) is limited. Sometimes we cannot reply (although we are able to continue to receive email) because our inbox is full. That means we need to delete items and download photos in order to free up some space. That may sound like a "no-brainer" but believe it or not, the downloading and deleting also takes time.

Here at the Hingham Journal and the Cohasset Mariner we receive anywhere from 500 to 1,000 emails a day (editor Mary Ford oversees both papers).

A lot of the email is "junk" or emails from places way beyond our borders that we have no interest in – so we delete those right away. But they keep on coming!

Photos are the biggest issue both figuratively and literally. Small photos are a problem because they cannot be made larger without losing resolution. Really large photos are a problem because they fill up our mailbox. (Our regular contributors understand this and their photos are fine!)

Recently, we received upwards of 100 megabytes of photos from just two people (they were both Hinghamites)!

At the moment, there is no "final answer" to our dilemma. We do not want to deter you from submitting your news and photos. That is why we are here. We are your community newspaper.

But if for some reason, you do not receive a reply via email or do not see your news item in the Cohasset Mariner – please pick up the phone and give us a call! (781-741-2933) We would love to hear from you and touch bases. We can also let you know if somehow your item "fell through the cracks" in our imperfect system.

We also still love to receive the occasional engagement, letter or news item — the old fashioned way —via US Mail or at our office at 73 South St. in downtown Hingham (above the Upper Crust). It is always nice to see a face (in person) in this high-tech world of texting, emails and cell phones.

If the Garden Club had their spring wildflower field trip in Beechwood

The Blackeyed Susans are just over there if we can get through these dreadful weeds!

Fodder for a reality show?

I must confess that the behavior of our elected officials is the equal of anything that is put out by the Ringling Brothers. Starting with the mess over the Water Department and moving forward to the "revolving door" approach to hiring and terminating the various functionaries the Village requires, our officials have displayed a relentless fumbling boobery equaled only by something out of the U.S. State Department.

However, all may not be lost. Given the recent trend of television viewers to accept and enthusiastically embrace any kind of reality drivel, why not get a big time producer and package the bumblings and fumblings of Village officials as a game show? Title? How about "The Great Race to Complete Incompetence?" We might earn enough in royalties to pay off our water debt — Naaah.

Weighing in on public records system

Given the recent editorial as well as Paul Carlson's response, I would like to throw my two cents worth in. As you all know, all email that pertains to Town business must be saved as it is part of the public record. Currently most people are using their personal email for committee business. I have previously requested that the Town provide email addresses to individual members for use on Town business. To have these emails on people's personal computers could put the Town in a precarious position. It is in the Town's best interest to have control of emails sent by members of the various committees. In the event of a hard drive crash, which I recently had, or in the event that someone should inadvertently, or worse purposely erase emails, the Town would be hard pressed to produce emails that may be requested as part of a public records request.

The CPC recently was asked to produce emails concerning the 1st Parish window request. In my case alone, there were over 250 emails on that one project. Compiling those into a folder took me the better part of three hours. Fortunately, my emails reside on the server of my IP provider. Had that not been the case, I could very well have lost all my emails when my computer crashed. The thought that my personal computer and emails could potentially be subpoenaed was not a pleasant one from my perspective as well. The other members of the CPC were none too happy at this prospect either.

There should likewise be a centralized repository in Town Hall for all minutes, and correspondence for all the committees in town. Currently each committee takes care of keeping this information on their own. This also leaves the town open to liability problems should there be a public records request and documents cannot be provided in a timely manner.

The vast majority of committees are made up of people who are volunteering a great deal of time already. To place the burden of retaining, and potentially having to gather information adds unnecessarily to the time these people have given, to say nothing of the liability the Town is exposed to.

I would be glad to work with the Town to rectify this problem, or to discuss my concerns more fully with the BOS.

Library trustees explain interest in Our World space

AGNES MCCANN

The trustees believe that this sharing arrangement can continue but respectfully request priority use of the top floor of the Discover Center's space, which is adjacent to the library's Children's Room.

After the May 29th Board of Selectmen's meeting and some misrepresentations in a letter to the Mariner last week, the library trustees thought it appropriate to outline the reasons for their interest in acquiring a more active role in the second floor of the town-owned space currently leased to the Children's Discovery Center (DC) for $1 per year. As publicly elected officials, we believe that it is our fiduciary responsibility to the library and to the town to voice the needs and desires of the library so that the Board of Selectman can make an informed decision when considering a lease renewal for town real estate.

The trustees and the DC have worked together since the DC's inception and have enjoyed a largely cooperative relationship for 10 years. The trustees believe that this sharing arrangement can continue but respectfully request priority use of the top floor of the DC's space, which is adjacent to the library's Children's Room. Importantly, the library does NOT seek to "kick out" the DC.

The trustees and the library serve the entire town of Cohasset, from the youngest children to the oldest seniors. Consistent with library trends nationwide, the number of visitors to the library has grown every year since the new building opened, with almost 135,000 visitors in FY2011. Our circulation of materials, some of which are electronic, grows year after year; nearly 150,000 items were checked out in FY2011. Library computer usage by both adults and children continues to increase, and many people take advantage of the research services we offer.

In addition, the library provides meeting room space to the community. The rooms are reserved in advance, with at least 125 bookings per month. The largest room can accommodate only 60 people; it is reserved for library and other town events about 25 times per month. Total room bookings have grown from 356 in FY2005 to 1,682 in FY2011.

In 2011, the trustees undertook a strategic planning exercise to update its long-range vision. The committee interviewed library patrons, volunteers and staff to determine needs and desires of the community. Additional programming and meeting space were identified as top priorities.

The library already provides many programs that attract more interest than its largest meeting room can accommodate. These include:

- Sunday Author Talks, for all ages (once a month throughout the school year); over 150 people attended several of the Talks this year
- the Homework Center (every Tuesday evening during the school year); National Honor Society students voluntarily tutor other students who need help
- Mama Steph, a musical performer for pre-schoolers (every Monday morning throughout the school year) who attracts over 200 weekly visitors at the Scituate Library where space allows
- Weekly summer evening programs for children

More programs serving the greater needs of the community could be developed if the trustees were confident space would be available.

The DC has allowed library use of the second floor for Sunday Author Talks and for the Homework Center (though the latter recently was trumped without notice for a revenue-producing birthday party). The DC denies use by Mama Steph because of a per-

HEALTH NOTES

Taking control of medications

STEVE BOBO

Now that we've spent considerable space and no little energy in trying to get a substantial fraction of the population to sign up for a drug plan, it seems only reasonable to provide a bit of guidance on the use of drugs. In Philadelphia, there is a medical activist who wrote a handbook on medications. It's beneficial reading if medicines take up a goodly part of your time and energy. Actually, the handbook points out a number of rules for dealing with medicines. Medications may adjust your body functions in subtle ways, which can provide a net improvement in your health, but also which may come with a price, and diligence, discipline, vigilance, and a requirement to manage your life in a manner that may not be necessary were you to consume fewer medications. Many of us lead rather unstructured lives and the discipline required to manage a drug program properly is, at minimum, painstaking, and sometimes quite strenuous.

There follows, a brief summary of the rules generally considered to be necessary to avoid serious consequences if you are taking medications regularly – or even occasionally, if they contain warnings.

• RULE ONE. Recognize that all drugs have adverse effects, that all drugs are dangerous, and that in a real sense all chemical compounds which pass into your body in inappropriate amounts are poisons.

• RULE TWO. Make sure your doctor and pharmacist know everything about your medical conditions and everything you're taking so they can properly advise on possible drug adverse reactions, drug interactions, and other potential drug-related problems.

• RULE THREE Carry a listing of medications you take.

• RULE FOUR. If you agree to take a drug, make sure you understand exactly why, how and how long you are to take the drug. Understand both the risks and the benefits of any drug you decide to take.

• RULE FIVE. Watch out for adverse reactions to drugs and other drug-related problems.

• RULE SIX. Don't be pushed into taking a drug by doctors, pharmacists, drug ads or anyone or anything else. And similarly, don't push the doctor into prescribing.

• RULE SEVEN. Once you're on a drug, keep checking with your doctor whether you can stop taking it.

• RULE EIGHT. When you get the prescription filled at your pharmacy, double-check your understanding with the pharmacist.

• RULE NINE. Do some checking on your own. Don't just depend on the package insert that comes with the drug, a document prepared by the drug manufacturer and then approved by the FDA. These documents only give the maker's side of the story. Important sources for more balanced information are: Graedon's People's Pharmacy and the Health Research Group's Worst Pills, Best Pills. For example, the latter catalogs 160 pills and other medications you should not use and 296 safer alternatives. Another excellent critical source is The Medical Letter, an independent, non-profit publication that offers unbiased critical evaluations of drugs to health care professionals. Seek other authoritative sources of information are on the Internet. For example, the Food and Drug Administration maintains a site at http://www.fda.gov which provides information on drugs, drug recalls, and other developments. Online and local pharmacies also provide information on drugs.

• RULE TEN. Don't forget these rules when you're in the hospital, a nursing home or other institutional setting. All of these places are required to tell you what you are taking and why, and should do it without question.

• RULE ELEVEN. Be on the look out for ways to save money. Often, the generics are made by the same companies that make brand-name products. Consult with your doctor and pharmacist to be sure the generic is the equivalent. However, some equivalents may not be covered under your insurance. Perhaps the best way to save money is to avoid drugs if possible, and to get off of them as soon as appropriate.

• RULE TWELVE. Throw away old drugs when they are no longer necessary or when their shelf life expires.

Remember that we're not talking about some doctor's decision, some nurse's decision, or some pharmacist's decision It's your decisions. Select your doctor and pharmacist so you have professionals who will treat you as the decision maker and who will act and explain accordingly.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

FOR THE RECORD

Leadership can take grads far

GREGORY MATHIS

Graduation generally comes with a lot of emotions, whether you're graduating from high school or college.

While we usually associate graduation with accomplishment, elation and excitement, it can be a time of fear and trepidation for those unsure of their next step.

For many high school students, college is that next step. Even the most confident high school student has some concerns about what college has in store – both academically and socially. For those not going to college, there's likely anxiety over getting a job in this difficult employment climate.

The college graduate probably shares that same concern about landing a good job that will help to pay off the college debt that has piled up over the years. Graduating from college does not guarantee a sure path to success in this day and age.

But cynicism and negativity is never a sure path to success either. While there are certainly challenges, concerns and a tough road ahead for many, there is also great promise and potential.

Graduation may signal an end to a period of time at a high school or place of higher learning, but it really should be looked at as a beginning... hence the term I prefer, "commencement."

As the many high schools and colleges/universities in the area wrap up commencement exercises for the Class of 2012, there will undoubtedly be time to reflect on past accomplishments and a chance to look forward to new endeavors and opportunities.

Various graduation speakers have encouraged the Class of 2012 to reach for your dreams, to do the best you can, and to strive for excellence. All good messages, for sure, but one piece of advice I will offer is what we really need now in our ever-changing world is leaders.

I'm not talking about President of the United States (although that's always a possibility for those who have that aspiration) or even world or corporate leaders, but leaders at the local level – in the community in which you live and in the local workforce.

Leadership at all levels of society is what's needed to pull us through these trying times, or any times for that matter. Every generation needs leaders.

So search within yourself to see if you have what it takes to be a leader — to stand out from the rest of the crowd as you head into college or the workforce.

No matter what path you take from this beginning point, leadership is a quality that can take you far in your future.

Setting record straight on Jacob's Meadow project

TOM GRUBER

Editor's note Mr. Gruber provided Mariner with a copy of the following.

Dear Board of Selectmen,

I watched the televised Capital Budget Committee (CBC) presentation to the Board of Selectmen (BOS) last week regarding their analysis of the Jacobs Meadow Project. A good deal of their effort was spent criticizing the Greenbush Guys in our supervision of this project. I do believe the CBC tried to do their due diligence after the fact in analyzing why this project ended up costing in excess of the budget. However, the CBC had no first-hand knowledge of the project details. They were correct that the contractor portion came in much closer to budget than the engineering activities. And, there are clearly some lessons learned for the Town going forward.

The Town appropriated $450,000 at Town Meeting for the project and subsequently, the Town also received a grant from the Commonwealth for $450,000. Had the project met its $450,000 budget, the second $450,000 could have been available for the CBC to re-purpose, with the approval of Town Meeting.

Early in the project, when it became evident that the $450,000 grant budget would be exceeded, we reviewed the situation with Bill Griffin, Town Manager. He said it was permissible to use part of the extra $450,000 Town Meeting appropriation to cover the shortfall. This action was also supported by two subsequent Town Managers, Steve Lombard and Mike Coughlin. In fact in their presentation, the CBC mentioned that is was customary for various departments to apply grant monies to projects without the CBC involvement. The Conservation Commission and Water Department rain gardens were cited as examples of this practice. I don't disagree that CBC should be involved in the application of grant monies, as well as the determination of ongoing maintenance costs, but that was not the Town's practice at that time.

Let's review the project. Jacobs Meadow is a salt marsh that was environmentally deteriorating. More salt water was needed in the marsh to reverse this trend. But there is also a large safety component. The meadow is a storm water storage basin, collecting the storm water from about 20 percent of the Town's area. From the meadow, storm water can be released to the harbor whenever tides will permit. Otherwise, storm water will stay in the meadow and, in the past, has caused extensive damage the surrounding properties. The goal of this project was to restore the salt marsh by allowing a controlled amount of salt water to flow into the marsh and to allow storm water to flow to the harbor as quickly as possible. Further, the channel next to the Legion building, which is the only pathway for water to be exchanged with the harbor, had partially collapsed, slowing the rate at which water can pass through it in either direction.

Keep in mind that the job site for this project is a dynamic part of the Town storm water system. It was paramount that the residents be protected from flooding and property damage.

The project consisted of rebuilding the channel next to the Legion and adding a controllable tide gate in the harbor. Thus, water flow both in and out could be automatically adjusted and the rate of exchange significantly improved.

When the construction bids were received, the low bidder was substantially lower than the next low bidder, who was substantially below the third low bidder. We were advised by our design engineers that they had first hand knowledge of problems with the second low bidder. So we accepted the low bidder to proceed with construction. (Under State law, if there is no adverse information about the low bidder, that bidder's proposal must be accepted. And, we had a favorable experience with the low bidder on a very small drainage project as a part of the Forest Avenue sidewalk/paving project.) Once, the project began, it was evident that the low bidder lacked planning and organizational skills for a project of this scope. The lack of these skills snowballed in this project causing extraordinarily large oversight and engineering expenses, which substantially increased the Town's costs.

So, what did happen on the project to cause engineering and oversight costs to increase? I'll cite a few examples. Keep in mind that the job site for this project is a dynamic part of the Town storm water system. It was paramount that the residents be protected from flooding and property damage. In our opinion it was not acceptable to stop the project and potentially sustain property damage and then try to recover the costs via the courts, after the fact. Once the worksite was opened up to the harbor, the objective was to complete the project as quickly as possible to protect the residents' properties. (In Public Contracting, a customer cannot tell a contractor specifically how to do the work, only what the end product needs to be. Otherwise, the Town becomes the "owner" of that work, which increases our liability enormously.) This project spanned a total of four years when you consider the required permitting from both Federal and State agencies as well as tasks such as coordination with a sewer line repair in our work zone and obtaining temporary construction easements from all of the abutters. The construction actually started in December 2010 and completed in December 2011, taking longer than the planned nine months.

Here are a few examples of project contractor issues we faced:

• The pre-cast concrete channel sections adjacent to the Legion did not meet specifications. Engineering and oversight time was required to determine whether these components could be used, and under what conditions.

• The concrete for the floor of the gate chamber did not meet the specifications. Because of the contractor's representations, we were forced to use this concrete to complete the incomplete chamber floor before the tides rose. Engineering and oversight hours were consumed to determine whether part of the floor should be removed and replaced. (In the end a contractor cost reduction was accepted.)

• The contractor had to mount and remount the tide gate three times due to incorrect installation procedures. Each of these required additional engineering and oversight time and costs and significantly extended the project time.

• The motor operator on the tide gate (this makes the gate go up or down) failed two times. During these failures, the gate crashed through its own structure destroying mechanical safety stops and bending the gate. Time was spent in oversight of the corrective actions and additional gate testing to assure the town that the gate would still function properly, as well as troubleshooting the cause of failure between our contractor, the gate manufacturer and the operator manufacturer. (Eventually, the whole gate control system was replaced.) Without this additional engineering and oversight time, we would not have confidence to rely on this new equipment to properly serve the Town.

• Keep in mind, all while this project was underway the meadow residents are continually being subjected to potentially damaging storm rain events and ultra high tide events. Many times during the periods of equipment malfunction, we received a call from the police that an automated tide gate high water alarm had occurred and we went to the harbor to attempt manual operation of the gate to avoid flooding, often in the middle of the night in support of the residents' safety. During most of these events the contractor was non-responsive.

In private contracting situations, when projects began to exceed the budget, often the projects can be stopped, or reduced in scope, or renegotiated without major impact. When public safety is at risk, with the concurrence of the Town Manager, we felt it was best to protect the safety of the public and spend the necessary engineering and oversight resources to assure as well as we could that the completed project will perform properly for Cohasset.

I am proud of the quality of the work that was done on this project on behalf of the Town and its residents.

Thomas L. Gruber lives at 100 Pond St. #10.

Donations may also be left at any Cohasset church on Sunday mornings. There are several Cohasset donation boxes located throughout the town, including St. Anthony Parish Hall, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Cohasset Police Station, Shaw's and Stop & Shop Supermarkets.

HEDLUND REPORT

40B, CPA, Melanie's Law and more

BOB HEDLUND

Recently, the Massachusetts Senate undertook its version of the state budget, using the Governor's and House of Representatives' versions of the budget as a template while creating our own spending plan for the Commonwealth for fiscal year 2013.

Going into budget debate, advocating for sufficient local aid for towns in my district was my first priority. I am happy to announce that the Senate funded local aid at a figure greater than both the Governor and the House of Representatives, and I will fight to keep the higher Senate figure when a final budget is worked out with the House in conference committee.

While maximizing the money that cities and towns receive is of utmost importance, it also essential that Massachusetts remain fiscally responsible in these lean economic years.

During budget debate I offered several amendments aimed at reforming a number of state programs. I was pleased that several (although not all) of my amendments were adopted during debate, including:

40B reform

The good news first: My 40B Cost Recovery Amendment was adopted by a unanimous vote of 38-0. This amendment would allow the Inspector General to hire a third party to conduct an audit of all 40B projects that submitted cost certifications under M.G.L. c. 40B after Jan. 1, 2004.

Five years ago, the Inspector General audited the cost certifications of ten 40B developers and found that six of them owed more than $7 million to host cities and towns, by having manipulated the law's profit cap. This amendment will cost the state nothing, and could result in millions being returned to the cities and towns impacted by 40B.

Metropolitan Beaches Commission

During the budget process, the Senate adopted an amendment that I co-sponsored that would fund the Metropolitan Beaches Commission at $125,000. In 2006, I helped to create the Metropolitan Beaches Commission to examine the current conditions of the regions beaches and identify, and recommend, the best management practices and actions that would bring our beaches to their fullest potential. Nantasket Beach in Hull is one of several metropolitan beaches that are serviced by the Commission, and it was recently named the cleanest beach in the area in a recent study.

CPA changes

A provision I had authored was included in the Community Preservation Act reform amendment that was included in the Senate Budget. This amendment allows a community to update existing athletic fields and playgrounds using CPA funds. Currently, communities can build new fields and playgrounds with CPA money, but cannot rehabilitate existing fields and facilities. This amendment will give municipalities more flexibility with the CPA funds, and provides a common-sense solution to a problem that has affected several in my district towns.

Melanie's Law loophole

I was pleased that the Senate voted to unanimously adopt my amendment to close a loophole in Melanie's Law, an important drunk-driving law that I was honored to sponsor in 2006. The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court recently ruled that the Registry of Motor Vehicles could not count cases that are "continued without a finding" as convictions in determining what sanctions to bring against repeat drunk drivers. This amendment closed that loophole. Treating incidents of drunk driving appropriately will insure that recidivists receive the appropriate sanctions, such as license suspensions, to protect the safety of those traveling on the roadways of the Commonwealth

Illegal immigration

I sponsored several amendments relating to a subject that I have advocated for years: Sensible illegal immigration reform. It is time that the Commonwealth gets serious about the illegal immigration problems that we are facing in this state. My package of amendments sent a strong message that the state is no longer going to encourage illegal immigration by providing in-state tuition, subsidized housing, drivers licenses and other benefits to those who are here illegally. While not all of my amendments were adopted by the Senate, several were, and these amendments would:

- Require companies that do business with the state to use the federal E-Verify system to authenticate the immigration status of their employees.
- Provides additional checks to determine immigration status for those that apply for public housing and driving licenses.
- Increases the penalties for those that use false identification to obtain employment and increases fines for employers that knowingly hire illegal immigrants who have used false documents to obtain drivers licenses.

Water rates

Earlier this year I filed Senate Bill 2040, which would give the Attorney General the same powers of intervention in water rate cases that it currently has in all other utility rate hike cases. This bill has received the endorsement of the Attorney General, and when enacted, it will save municipalities thousands of dollars in legal fees by allowing any municipality facing a rate hike request to access the resources of the Attorney General's Office of Ratepayer Advocacy. This legislation will cost taxpayers nothing and save municipalities thousands in legal fees.

EBT reform

Recently, I served on the Electronic Benefit Transfer (EBT) Commission, which was appointed to investigate ways to prevent the fraudulent uses of EBT cards. Unfortunately, many of the reforms that I proposed while serving on the Commission were left out of the final report in an effort by members of the commission to maintain the status quo when it came to the EBT/Welfare system.

Currently, a recipient of cash assistance on an EBT card can access 100 percent of his or her benefit by simply withdrawing the cash from an ATM. This cash is then untraceable, and there is no way to limit the ways in which it is spent. $400M per year in taxpayer funds are dispensed in untraceable cash benefits, and greater regulation is required.

Disappointed in the final EBT Commission report, I decided to file legislation, along with a bi-partisan group of 17 other lawmakers, that would end the types of abuses the commission was set up to investigate.

While this piece of legislation has failed to gain traction in the Democrat-controlled Legislature, I was able to pass an EBT reform amendment in the Senate Budget. While the amendment did not go as far as I would've preferred, it represents an important step in permanently curbing EBT abuse and reforming a broken system. The EBT reform amendment passed by the Senate would:

- Ban EBT cash withdrawals from ATMs at bars, liquor stores, adult entertainment facilities.
- Establish a crime of food stamp trafficking.
- Create a new unit in the State Police to investigate EBT fraud.
- Add a fee for lost cards.
- Require the state to work toward a direct vendor system to pay rent and utilities directly for beneficiaries.

Tax reform

While the Republican Caucus was able to accomplish several important reforms in this budget, we would have been able to do even more if not for a suspect ruling at the beginning of debate. All amendments that pertained to tax issues were ruled out of order before they could be debated. The budget, according to the ruling party, is not a "money bill." Because of this ruling, we were deprived of the chance to advocate for amendments relating to the sales tax; a plan to return the income tax to its traditional 5.0 percent rate and creating a $3,500 tax credit for anyone that supported an elderly relative while making less than $60,000 per year.

Volume 38 - Report No. 23 June 4-8, 2012

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on four roll calls and local senators on two roll calls from the week of June 4-8. Also included is a fifth House roll call from a recent session that considered proposed changes to the state's election laws.

HOUSE APPROVES HEALTH CARE CHANGES (H 4127)

House 148-7, approved a complicated 188-page bill making changes in the state's health care system. A key provision establishes a statewide health care cost growth goal for the health care industry tied to the growth in the economy. The measure also implements new technology for expansion and maintenance of the electronic medical records system so that all patients' medical records are accessible by all providers.

Other provisions impose a $190 million, one-time assessment on large providers and insurers to be distributed to community hospitals and a new surcharge on hospitals that charge 20 percent or more than the average price paid for the same service at other hospitals.

Supporters said this landmark bill would save the state $150 billion over the next 15 years while also saving billions of dollars for consumers and small businesses. They noted it would improve the quality of care and increase the transparency and accountability of the state's entire health care system.

Opponents said price caps and rate regulation like the ones in the bill have often failed. They questioned the projected cost savings of the bill and the complicated government-run bureaucracy that it establishes to oversee the new system.

A conference committee will likely be appointed to hammer out a version of the measure agreeable to both chambers.

MORATORIUM ON FURTHER STATE MANDATES (H 4127)

House 34-120, rejected an amendment that would prohibit the Legislature, until December 31, 2015, from mandating any new benefits that health care plans must cover.

Amendment supporters said new mandates for health care coverage would drive up the costs of health care plans and increase costs for small businesses. They noted more than 40 new mandated benefits have been added in the past seven years.

Amendment opponents said a moratorium goes too far and is too restrictive. They argued that some mandates actually lower health care costs.

(A "Yes" vote is for the moratorium. A "No" vote is against it.)

INVESTIGATE SALARIES OF HEALTH CARE EXECUTIVES (H 4127)

House 7-148, rejected an amendment that would establish a 12-member health care executive compensation task force to conduct a 20-year comprehensive analysis of health care executives' salaries, stock options and other benefits, and compare them to the wages of health care workers paid by the hour.

Amendment supporters said these executives' salaries are excessive and out of control.

Amendment opponents said the state should not interfere with the compensation packages of private executives.

ALLOW INSURERS TO OFFER "MANDATE LITE" POLICIES (S 2260)

House 34-119, rejected an amendment allowing health insurance companies to offer basic plans that include fewer state mandates. The "mandate lite" policies would still be required to cover hospital and surgical expenses; health care for pregnant women, infants and children; prenatal care, childbirth and postpartum care; mammograms; diabetes-related services and medication; early intervention services; and mental health services.

Amendment supporters said mandates have helped increase the cost of health insurance premiums and put the cost of all plans out of the reach of many people. They noted that flexible low-cost options would reduce health care costs by 25 percent and are important to offer those who simply want preventive and catastrophic coverage.

Amendment opponents said mandates have been added over the years to ensure that the consumer is buying a quality plan with comprehensive coverage. They argued allowing these basic policies will result in inadequate coverage for many people and expensive trips to the emergency room.

CHANGES TO ELECTIONS LAWS (H 4120)

House 112-36, approved and sent to the Senate a bill making some changes to the state's election laws. A controversial section would allow 16- and 17-year-olds to "pre-register" to vote and automatically be qualified to vote upon turning 18.

Other provisions would require additional training for poll workers, random audits of election precincts to ensure accuracy of voting equipment and the posting of a printable voter registration form on the state's website that eligible voters could fill out and send to the town or city clerk.

Supporters said these reforms would result in more young people voting. They noted the random precinct audits would ensure that voting equipment and vote counting are accurate.

Opponents said the registration of 16- and 17-year-olds is an unnecessary and unworkable idea that is opposed by many understaffed city and town clerks. They said many teenagers who pre-register will go away to college and find out they can't vote in their college town because they are already registered in their home town.

MEDIATION PROGRAMS PRIOR TO FORECLOSURE (S 2287)

Senate 31-3, approved an amendment that would give homeowners who are in default and facing foreclosure the option to enter a foreclosure mediation program in which a mediator tries to help the bank and the borrower work out an alternative to foreclosure.

Amendment supporters said this would help prevent some foreclosures by crafting an agreement that is acceptable and fair to both parties.

Amendment opponents said the amendment is unfair because it would make the lender responsible for anywhere from 85 percent to 100 percent of the mediation costs.

REQUIRE BACKGROUND CHECKS ON GAMING COMMISSION EMPLOYEES (H 4079)

Senate 36-1, overrode Gov. Deval Patrick's veto of a requirement that all employees of the new state Gaming Commission undergo full criminal background checks. The commission is the state entity that is implementing the new law authorizing the construction of three resort casinos and one slot parlor in the state.

Override supporters said background checks on all employees of this important commission are essential and would ensure transparency. They argued if a background check had been conducted on a recent employee who eventually quit amid allegations of sexual abuse there he would never have been hired in the first place.

In his veto message, Patrick said, "The highest levels of background checks and screening may not be necessary nor appropriate for every employee. Under the current law, the Gaming Commission has the discretion to make those decisions."

The House already overrode the veto and the background check requirement is now a state law.

(A "Yes" vote is for overriding Patrick's veto. A "No" vote is against overriding it.)

MARY MCGOLDRICK

At the beginning of the school year Technology instructor Jeffrey Knight gave each of the students in grades 6, 7 and 8 a questionnaire asking what they would most like to learn or build in the class. The overwhelming response was, "to build a rocket." That led Mr. Knight to write a grant request to the Cohasset Education Foundation for rocketry modules to be used in the Engineering Lab at the Cohasset Middle School. The request was funded this Fall.

The unit on Rocketry and Space Exploration began just after April vacation and concluded this past week with the much anticipated rocket launch. During the design and building phase of the unit students in each grade were divided into four groups. Each class period they either built their rocket body or sanded their bottle, created, cut and sanded their fins, or constructed a parachute, deflecting shroud and engine mount. The fourth group worked on their research paper or PowerPoint presentation on space exploration.

A combination of water and air pressure, provided by a bicycle pump, were used to safely launch the rockets in the air behind the Middle School. Said Mr. Knight, "To observe the anticipation and excitement in every students' eyes just before lift off was well worth all of the planning and organizing that went into this unit. It drives me to make this educational experience even better next year!"

ceived conflict of interest. The manager of the DC has been quite responsive and reasonable, but sometimes she is required to seek approval from others for the library's use of the second floor, and the time required to go through this process has proved problematic. As a result, the trustees have respectfully requested to have priority use of the second floor and have no issue with the DC using it when such use does not interfere with pre-reserved Library programming.

Tigers win American League Championship

Tigers win weather tested series under the lights

Tigers Head Coach Alan Vater is proud to announce the Tigers won the American League Championship Sunday night "under the lights" following a doubleheader on Barnes Field. The team committed at the start of the season to schedule more practices than games - their hard work paid off.

Game one against the Rangers was highlighted by Andrew McSheffrey pitching the entire game with 86 pitches / 12 strikeouts. Matty Grimes started a third inning rally, followed by Joey Klier and Ben Grimes each with a single. Tory Vater hit a double that brought in three runs resulting in a 4-1 win over a tough team.

Game two included Tory Vater shutting down the Orioles to one run through four innings with 10 smoking strikeouts. Ben Grimes hit three singles. Jack Elliott's triple drove in two runs. Ryan Leahy and Matty Grimes did an outstanding job at second base throwing out a couple of batters. Carlton Ritz got on base three times and Jamie Fox's single drove in a run.

Finally, Michael Milanoski after catching nine innings in a row during the doubleheader took over the pitching and closed out the last two

GIRLS TENNIS

Cohasset edged in State Semifinal

Girls win South Sectionals

By Bill Griffin
For the Patriot Ledger

It was a tennis match worthy of a state semifinal. There was striking talent, power, touch, and a firm determination to play each point to its fullest.

In the end, it was Bedford's day. The North Sectional champion Buccaneers won No. 2 and 3 singles and first doubles to edge South Sectional winner Cohasset, 3-2, in a Division 3 showdown Monday at Newton North High.

"I couldn't be prouder of the way my kids played or the season we had," said Skippers coach Gigi Meehan, whose club finished 19-3. "The matches were evenly contested, and to end your season losing 3-2 in the state semifinals is not bad. It was fitting tennis for a state semifinal."

Cohasset won its points at first singles and second doubles. At No. 1 singles, undefeated freshman Emma Davis, who won the South Sectional individual crown and will play for the state title this weekend, overwhelmed Sydney Arsenault, 6-0, 6-1, in an eye-popping exhibition of tennis.

Cohasset captains Erika Botts, Caitlin DeAngelis, Hannah Rawson, and Meredith Spofford are all smiles after winning the Division 3 South tournament with their 4-1 win over Norwell in the Final in Scituate on Saturday. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

"She's amazing. She has a great all-court game, and she can beat you from anywhere," said Meehan.

There appear to be no weaknesses to Davis' game. Her serve yields aces, winners, or easy setups. She closes quickly and commands the net. She has high-kicking topspin from her forehand side, and her most formidable weapon is the two-fisted backhand which launches rockets. And she is 14 years old.

"That backhand is a howitzer," said Meehan.

"I was happy with my play and that I could get a point for my team," said Davis.

Cohasset's Kate Sookiasian and Meredith Spofford took second doubles for Cohasset, 7-6 (7-5), 6-3. The pair rallied from down 4-2 in the first set to force the tiebreaker. Spofford had two put-away volleys

Sixth graders combine for 23 wins

The Cohasset 6A lacrosse team won two games on Friday night and another three games on Saturday capping off a perfect 2012 season. By beating both rivals Duxbury by six goals and Norwell by 10 on Friday under the lights, the 6A team ran the tables in just its second year in the Town Pride League.

The season began in early April with a five-goal win against Hingham at home. From there, 6A beat Winchester, Needham, Dover-Sherborn, Wellesley, Medfield and Lincoln Sudbury most by double digits and on the road.

Highlights of the season included an 18-4 Friday night win over Hingham on their own field. Both squads showed great sportsmanship with Hingham hosting a cookout for Cohasset following the game and committing to six more years of great competition.

The season ended at Concord-Carlisle with the League

ACES, ETC.

Golf news from around the region . . .

All the way with MacKay, veteran golfer nets 11th hole-in-one

Leigh MacKay scored the shot of his life. The Plymouth resident last Saturday scored a hole-in-one on the 12th hole at Squirrel Run GC in Plymouth.

It's nothing new for MacKay. It was the 11th career ace, but it's been nine years since he scored his last one in 2003.

MacKay has been on a hot streak.

He preserved through two days of rain and cold conditions last week, shooting a 73 and an 80 for a 153 aggregate to successfully defend his title in the New England Senior Golfer Association's Jarboe Bowl played at Brae Burn CC and Woodland GC in Newton.

While it was MacKay's 11th ace, octogenarian Warren Nylan of Easton finally got his first hole-in-one. Nylan, 84, did it at Pine Oaks. Playing with Jack Gear, Ed Labelle and Bernie Laferriere, he got a one on the 135-yard fourth hole.

Eighteen golfers participated in the May 3 tournament of the Women's Nine Hole Golf Association of Scituate Country Club.

Mary Lamrock won low gross with a gross score of 48.

Eileen West won low net with a net score of 33.

In second place with a low net of 39 was Peg Lynch. There was a card off for 3rd and 4th place as Beverly McCafferty and Eleanore Smith each had a score of 40 net. In fifth place was Barbara Spence with a low net of 41.

Isabel Southard of Sharon shot 75 to win the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association Individual Girls golf championship at The Bay Club in Mattapoisett.

Mary Mulcahy of Scituate was her nearest competitor, five strokes back.

Former Charles River CC champion James Driscoll came one stroke away from qualifying for the US Open last week in Columbus, Ohio. Driscoll will play in a major. Earlier he qualified for the British Open. One golfer to keep an eye on at this year's US Open is Casey Martin who earned medalist honors at the sectional in Creswell, Ore. Martin played in the US Open the last time it was held at the Olympic Club. He tied for 23d in 1998, using a golf cart because of a congenital circulatory disorder in his right leg. Martin, because of his disorder, won a court case against the PGA Tour for the right to use a cart.

Herbie Aikens of Pinehills in Plymouth and Ryan Riley of Pine Oaks in Easton repeated as champions of the Walter Cosgrove Four-Ball tournament on Sunday at Green Hill Golf Course in Worcester.

The Mutt and Jeff pair (Aikens is 6-foot-5 and Riley is 5-foot-7) fashioned back-to-back 63s to win the champion. Their nearest competitors were three shots back.

Aikens and Riley, who is the defending State Amateur champion, have been playing partner golf since 2006 and won three State Four-Ball championships.

TALKIN' GOLF

Welch's marathon journey pays dividends

PAUL HARBER

South Shore native Michael Welch, who plays out of Furnace Brook in Quincy, captured the 103rd Massachusetts Open Championship last week, but if he had his druthers, he'd rather tee it up this week at San Francisco's Olympic Club, site of the US Open.

Welch gave it a good try for a berth in the US Open, and if he had succeeded, he might have withdrawn from the State Open last week and wouldn't be its new champion.

Go back to early May. The 30-year-old Welch, who turned professional in 2005 after winning back-to-back New England Amateur titles, was one of five qualifiers in a US Open local qualifying tournament at Pinehills Country Club in Plymouth.

That earned him a berth in the June 10 sectional qualifier at the Canoe Brook Club in Summit, N.J., where he teed it up the day before the Massachusetts Open began.

At Canoe Brook Welch fashioned rounds of even par 72 and 1-over 73 for a 145, which was good enough to finish in the top 25, but it wasn't good enough to play with the big dogs in California this week.

Only the top four advanced to the US Open, and they all shot 4-under 138s or better.

So Welch played a grueling 36 holes on Monday in New Jersey, drove home to Quincy and teed it up on Tuesday in Walpole.

Fortunately, Mass. Golf Association officials gave Welch the final tee time of the day, 1:48 p.m.; so he could get some rest.

It didn't help much. Tuesday's round wasn't his best, a 1-over par 72.

But on Wednesday Welch started playing his game, carding a 2-under 69.

He was five strokes behind heading into the final round and fashioned the best round of the tournament, a 4-under 67 for a three-round total of 5-under par 208.

It marks his first career MGA Championship title. As a result of his victory on Thursday, he earned a winner's check of $15,000. Not a bad consolation prize.

"This is up there pretty high," Welch told reporters after his round. "It is home, and I am around friends and family. They see me travel the world and play online, but it's good to come into my backyard and get a good result."

It means a lot to Welch.

"I got a little choked up walking on 18 because I knew that the hard part was over," said Welch.

A year ago, heading into the final round, Welch led the State Open, but fell back to finish tied for ninth.

"I've gotten a lot better and I grew up," Welch told reporters. "I let my emotions get a little out of check, and I have gotten a lot better at that and that has helped me be a lot more consistent. My game is as good as it has ever been, but I am thinking better. I am not beating myself anymore where I used to do that all of the time. Now I hit a couple of bad shots and try to go from there."

Where was he on Friday? He was playing golf with his buddies at Furnace Brook, a respite from those pressure-packed rounds on the mini-tours.

Khang takes second

Somebody local who will be playing in a US Open is Rockland's Megan Khang, who will tee it up in the US Women's Open July 5-8 at Wolf Run in Kohler, Wisc.

But last week at the Massachusetts Women's Open, the 14-year-old Khang carded a 5-under-par 143 at Mount Pleasant Country Club in Boylston, to earn second place. Shrewsbury's Brittany Altomare, who grew up on Mount Pleasant's fairways and now competes for the University of Virginia, won with a 141.

Last year Khang suffered a playoff loss to Ellie Dutch in this tournament.

This year Khang and Altomare were tied after the first round with matching 4-under 70s.

However, Khang had three-putted bogeys on the sixth and ninth holes, dropping her out of the lead.

Khang told reporters after the tournament, "I three-putted too many holes both days."

This week she will try to qualify for her fourth consecutive U.S. Girls Junior championship at Foxborough Country Club on June 12.

The U.S. Girls' Junior Championship is in New England this summer. It will be played July 16-21 at The Golf Club of New England in Stratham, N.H.

State Am qualifiers

This week begins a qualifying for the State Amateur, which will be held July 9-13 at Tedesco Country Club in Marblehead. It began on Monday at The Captains Course in Brewster. Among locals hoping to qualify on Cape Cod were Colin Andrade of LeBaron Hills, Michael Arter and Connor Hayes of MGA Links, Steven Auerbach of Blue Hill, Jack Ball, Cameron Daley, Andy Falcone and Joe Fitzsimmons of Marshfield CC, Jason Clary and Christopher Tarallo of Thorny Lea, Rick Cunha and Timothy Newman of Pinehills, John Wynn and Matt Czarnecki of Granite Links, Nick Drago of Plymouth, John Gratton of Dedham C&PC, Mark McCormick of South Shore CC, Richard Monaghan of Black Rock, Joseph Pimental of Pine Oaks, William E Taylor of Segregansett, Mike Wedge of Waverly Oaks and Jonathan Woods of Duxbury YC.

Several local golfers, including defending champion Ryan Riley of Easton, are exempt right into the championship. Others include Aikens, Bill Drohen of Brookmeadow CC, John Hadges of Thorny Lea, and Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich GC. It might seem like you have to be from Easton to win the State Amateur. The sleepy town that borders Brockton is the home of the last four State Amateur winners: Riley, Drohen and Hadges. They all live in Easton. So does Steve Tasho of Thorny Lea, who won the tournament twice. "A lot of people probably don't realize it," Hadges told Bob DiCesare of the Brockton Enterprise. "But that's quite an accomplishment so many Easton residents have won the Mass. Amateur, one of the toughest amateur tournaments in the state, if not New England, in the last four years." . . . If you are looking for a place where your youngster can learn golf, you can't do better that Rockland Golf Course. Its program has been one of the best for years. Charlie Lanzetta, director of golf, was named a Top 50 Teacher this year by U.S. Kids Golf. The organization recognizes 50 elite golf professionals annually who have focused their careers on developing youth golf in their communities and are known for their overall excellence and commitment to serving youth.

Brennan battles bad weather to win Hornblower

The final round of the 2012 Hornblower Memorial Tournament in its 48th year was played under adverse conditions last Saturday and only one golfer was able to break par.

Colin Brennan of Indian Ridge CC in Andover penciled his card at 66, three under par and thus put on the blue jacket as the winner. He is a junior at Johnson and Wales University in Florida majoring in Sports Management. Played in wind and rain, Brennan was able to overcome a nine-stroke deficit to secure the Henry Hornblower Trophy.

Greg Fisk of Longmeadow Country Club finished second at 143. Philip Smith of Vesper Country Club, Sean Fitzpatrick of George Wright Golf Course and Brian Higgins of Franklin Country Club shared third place at 144.

Spofford named head coach at Emmanuel

Former Skipper coach to lead Saints

Emmanuel College is pleased to announce the hiring of Rob Spofford as the new head coach for the Saints Softball program. Spofford comes to Emmanuel after three years as an Assistant Coach at local Great Northeast Athletic Conference (GNAC) rival Emerson College. Coach Spofford will take over the reigns of a program, which will return twelve veterans for the 2013 season.

During his three-year coaching stint at Emerson, Spofford helped the Lions to two first place finishes during the GNAC regular season with impressive back-to-back 22-2 conference campaigns in 2011 and 2012. While at Emerson, Spofford and the Lions made two trips to the GNAC Finals and held a three-year conference record of 66-8.

Prior to coaching at Emerson, Spofford spent two years as the head varsity coach at Cohasset High School, where he led his squad to a South Sectional Championship and a trip to the Massachusetts Division 111 State Finals.

That was a special time for him.

"The 2009 high school team is a team I'll never forget," Spofford said. "You have to enjoy moments like these when you get them. As adults, we can appreciate it knowing it may not happen again."

In addition to his collegiate and high school coaching experience, Spofford is the founder and director of the Bay State Thunder, a highly successful girls' junior Olympic fastpitch softball program. Within the program, Spofford is the current coach and manager of the 18 and under Elite College Showcase Team, featuring some of the finest high school softball players from Southeastern Massachusetts and Cape Cod.

Coach Spofford brings a wealth of experience to his new position with the Saints. Additionally, he spent five years as a coach within the South Shore Stealers junior Olympic program, where he worked with the 16U, 14U and 12U teams. Spofford was also a Softball Youth Coordinator, Board Member and Coach for the Cohasset Youth Baseball Softball Association from 1999-2009. He has been a member of the National Fastpitch Coaches Association (NFCA) since 2007.

"Coach Spofford is going to be exactly the type of leader our Saints softball program needs," commented Director of Athletics Pam Roecker. "He is extremely passionate about the sport. He is a talented motivator and teacher. He has a track record of success on and off the field and most importantly, he is one of the most enthusiastic and high-energy individuals I have ever been around."

Off the field, Spofford is the founder, owner and President of The Spofford Group Insurance Brokerage. He and his wife, Susan, reside in Cohasset and have four daughters, including two in college and two in high school.

Daughter, Meredith Spofford played doubles and was a captain for the Cohasset girls tennis team that won the Div. 3 South Sectional Tennis Championship last weekend.

With the team undergoing a rebuilding year in 2012, Spofford is excited about taking over the helm of the emerging Emmanuel program. He will look to build upon the team's veteran experience with the hopes of taking the program to the next level.

"I am thrilled and excited to be appointed the next Head Coach of the Saints. I look forward to working with the solid foundation of returning players and terrific incoming recruits. With my background and successful experience within the GNAC I am confident that we will be able to quickly return the Saints program to a highly competitive level on a consistent basis."

Roecker also feels that Spofford is a great fit at Emmanuel and he is expected to thrive within the Saints athletic program.

"I expect Coach Spofford to make an immediate impact on our program and I know our veteran and incoming student-athletes are going to enjoy and benefit from the experience of playing for him. He is a great addition to our Saints Athletic Staff."

Spofford and the Saints will play a full NCAA schedule in 2013, maxing out with 40 regular season games, including 24 GNAC contests, 10 games over spring training and 6 non-conference rivalries.

Spofford felt the time was right to make the move.

"When the opportunity at Emmanuel presented itself I felt it was the right time," he said. "Opportunities like this don't open up all the time. I'm familiar with the school. I competed against them as an assistant at Emerson."

Spofford said he has wanted to be a head coach in the college game for a while, but also wanted to make sure he's ready.

"Cohasset was a very helpful experience," he said. "I wanted to get into the collegiate game, but I felt that being an assistant coach was important in my development."

His year at Emerson were helpful in recruiting and getting acclimated to the atmosphere.

"I'm confident in my ability to recruit," Spofford said. "I have a college showcase team, so I see it from the flip side, helping players be recruited. I also think having daughters in the same age group is a benefit as a coach. I have an understanding the pressures a student athlete are under."

Most importantly, Spofford had a message for Cohasset.

"I couldn't have done this without the support and help from the Youth Program," he said. "And the athletes and parents who have supported me along the way.

Revolution Academy tryouts

The New England Revolution will hold tryouts for its newly-created Revolution Academy Under-14 team, as well as its existing Under-16 and Under-18 teams, at Gillette Stadium on Monday, July 2.

Players born in the following years are eligible to try out: 1995, 1996, 1997, 1998 and 1999. There is no fee to try out, but all prospective players must register for the tryout no later than Sunday, July 1.

Players who have not already registered will not be allowed to tryout on July 2.

Open Tryout Schedule:

Monday, July 2

Gillette Stadium (Foxborough, Mass.)

Birth Years: 1995, 1996 and 1997

Time: 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

Birth Years: 1998 and 1998

Time: 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Important Tryout Information

Registration information is available at www.revolutionsoccer.net/academy/2012-open-tryouts

All players who plan to attend a Revolution Academy tryout session are required to have consent and liability release forms with them, signed by a parent or legal guardian. Players without the necessary signed forms will not be allowed to try out.

All players should arrive at the respective locations 30 minutes before their age-group tryout begins to ensure all required paperwork is in order

Selected players will be called back for a final round of tryouts later in the week

The Revolution Academy's youth teams - which U.S. Soccer rated among the nation's top eight youth programs last year - is the only fully-funded youth soccer program in New England and competes in the prestigious U.S. Soccer Development Academy at the U16 and U18 age levels. The U14 team will compete in U.S. Club Soccer's Northeast Pre-Academy League in 2012-13.

Qualified and talented players are accepted into the program without regard to their financial situation. All players' needs and expenses related to soccer activities – training, facilities, equipment, uniforms, travel associated with competitions – are provided by the Revolution at no cost to the players or their families.

Players who are chosen to represent the Revolution on its youth teams will be required to forgo their high school soccer seasons as now required by U.S. Soccer.

For more information about tryouts or to download the required forms, visit revolutionsoccer.net and click on "Academy" in the blue navigation bar. The Revolution Academy can also be reached by emailing revolutionacademy@revolutionsoccer.net.

HALL OF FAME

Inductees announced

Two nominees voted in for 2012 class

The Cohasset High School Athletic Hall of Fame Committee is excited to announce that two team nominees have been voted into the CHS Athletic Hall of Fame Class of 2012 to be inducted on November 22 and 23, 2012. The individual members of the Second CHS Hall of Fame Class will be voted on June 19. Individual nominees may consist of athletes, coaches, school administrators, and boosters. For nominees who do not fall under the aforementioned categories, a "special nominee" category is available.

1986-1988 Boys Soccer Team

Over a four year period, the Cohasset High School boys Soccer Team amassed a record of 71-12-8. They won four consecutive South Shore League Championships, four consecutive South Sectional Championships, and made it to the State Finals three times.

1985, 1986, 1988 Boys Basketball Teams

During an exciting five year span, the Cohasset Boys basketball team won three South Shore League Championships, an Eastern Mass Championship and two State Championships, including an amazing 25-0 unbeaten season in 1985.

Individual Nominations

The CHS Hall of Fame Committee is still accepting nominations for individuals until June 19. In order for a candidate or team to be considered a nomination packet must be completed on their behalf. Packets will be available at the following locations:

innings with five strikeouts after scoring two runs and driving in two others for a 6-1 win over the Orioles.

However, even with winning the Championship the highlight for the team was when Alex Grossman made contact in the Championship game for the first time all season and fouled off two balls, resulting in the team and fans going wild celebrating his successful growth as a player this season thanks to the batting practice taught by Coach Barrows.

Also, special thanks to Alec Thielen and his commitment to cheering the team on after an early season knee injury at third base.

Mother Nature tried her best to crown herself champion, for these playoffs, but the kids, coaches would have none of it. After a washout on Monday, the reorganized schedule kicked off last Wednesday with the fifth seeded Orioles defeating the 4th seeded Angels and in the most thrilling game of playoffs the sixth seeded Rangers and the third seeded Yankees were knotted at 1-1 for 11 innings over two days until the Rangers scored a 4-2 upset in the 12th.

League officials were forced to schedule both the second round and the championship game for Sunday; while not ideal it made for an exciting day of baseball. The sixth seeded Rangers were looking to pull off another upset, and behind a complete game pitched by Thatcher Stone they held their own, but with a masterful 13 strikeout performance by Andrew McSheffrey the Tigers won 4-1.

The A's fell 4-2 as the Orioles again successfully called upon the pitching tandem of William Grudinskas and Eric Berndt for the second time in the playoffs.

And then (finally) it was the Championship game. Under the lights at Barnes Field,it was the Tigers vs. the Orioles. In front of an enthusiastic crowd, Thomas Guinee's pitching kept the Orioles close for four tense innings before the Tigers were able to pull away and secure the game. With gloves flying into the air and parents cheering the Tigers celebrated the win and closed out a week of great baseball.

Jamboree on Saturday where everyone was gunning to take down the perfect Cohasset squad. But by the end of the weekend, Cohasset had held off Wellesley, Lincoln Sudbury and Norwell capping off a perfect 15-0 season.

The 6A team was anchored by goalie Deven Varney and defenseman Will Schwartz, Danny Durkin and Jake Koncius who held the best goals against average in the league. The attack was led by Ryan Donovan, Sam Sullivan, Chase Bomiesler, and James Krumsiek who owned the highest average goals for in the league. The depth of a three line midfield allowed a four quarter pace that proved impossible to stop. Middies Will Thomas, Charlie Pyne, Cal Osten, Jackson Roberts, David Burke, Will Bowen, Tommy Carrabas, Jay Fredrick, Henry Snyder, and Kyle McFetridge, drove a transition game known for its aggressive play and well executed face breaks.

In addition to the success of the 6A team, our community continues to show depth and excitement for lacrosse. The sixth grade B team enjoyed great success as well. From their remarkable 3 -0 start in the season opening Jamboree at Lincoln Sudbury, to outstanding wins against perennial powerhouses Medfield, Dover-Sherborn and Winchester and finishing off with an excellent 8-3 record.

The play of James Mensching in goal, Josh Rosen, Spencer Reid, Sullivan Mulhern, Matthew Dickey, Nick Slamp, Joe Wellmann, Jack Macmillan, Hank Waters, Patrick Hagearty, Sam Braun, and Nathaniel Purdy contributed to the team effort and determination that produced such great results. They were able to mesh together, learn and play different positions all to gain greater proficiency and enjoyment of the game.

All of us that have been a part of the 6th grade program, either as a spectator or coach, would like to congratulate everyone on a truly fantastic season.

Cohasset U12-2 has turnaround season

The Cohasset Girls U12-2 soccer team had a very successful season and finished the spring Coastal League regular season as the league leader in scoring. Their 50 goals amassed were the highest total among the 76 GU12 teams in the league. This was a great turnaround from the fall season when they were only 1-7 (and were shut out in three games) and improving to 8-2 record this spring.

The team was made up of a combination of fifth and sixth graders. The team played a 3-3-1 configuration for most of the season. The offense began with the play of the midfielders. Sophie Swartwood and Sophia Yerardi played the center midfield position pressuring the teams in the center section of the field with their aggressive play.

As the opposition tried to collapse the middle, the team utilized the speeds of the middle field flankers, Margaret Norton, Kaitlyn Patterson, Maddy Kerr, and Rachel Regan to take the ball deep into the corners to draw the defense away from the goal to set up crossing scoring opportunities. The team's forwards were Lilly Patso and Emily Moy who were always in front of the goal ready to capitalize on scoring chances.

Not to be overlooked, the defense played solid throughout the spring, giving up only 14 goals. Mary Tarpey, Ryder Sullivan, and Jane Greenip played tenaciously as outside defenders. The team also benefited from the solid plays of Courtney Shanley and Annie Toomey as the team's sweepers providing the last line of defense in front of starting goalie, Emma Loft.

The team needed to win their final two games against Hull and Plymouth and made the Coastal League playoffs. Last Saturday, the team won its first round game against Middleboro by a score of 4-1. Unfortunately, they lost a 2-1 heartbreaker in the second round on Sunday to a tough Scituate team which had played two divisions higher during the season.

At the end, the girls played as a close-knit group and really came together as a team. They should be proud of their hard work and significant improvement in their performance from the fall to the spring.

Sectional champions

Cohasset beats Norwell in Sectional Final

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Just a day after finishing off a marathon battle against Martha's Vineyard that included three locations and two days, the Cohasset girls tennis team won the Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament with a well contested 4-1 win over Norwell on Saturday morning at Gates Middle School in Scituate.

In first singles, freshman Emma Davis beat Darci Vierra 6-1, 6-0, while Emma Smith was a 6-3, 6-0 winner at second singles.

In third singles action, senior Hannah Rawson lost 6-7, 8-10, but by the time her match was finished, the Skippers were already winners of a trip to Newton North on Monday to face Bedford.

Both Cohasset doubles teams, first doubles, Caitlin Deangelis and Gabrielle LeMoine and second doubles Kate Sookiasian and Meredith Spofford were winners as well.

Rawson, however, was a huge reason Cohasset had the chance to play Norwell.

In a marathon match against Martha's Vineyard on Thursday that began indoor at the Weymouth Club due to weather, Rawson was among the second group to begin play. After the teams ran out of time at Weymouth, the match was moved to Scituate under the lights.

More than an hour later, the visitors from the island had to leave to make the last boat home.

That left Rawson as the lone player to decide it all on Friday at Cohasset, and then indoor at Scituate Racquet and Fitness Club when thunderstorms set in. She won all eight games she played on Friday.

"It was dragged out so long," Rawson said after Cohasset's Sectional championship had been wrapped up Saturday. "It was stressful, but very rewarding when I won. It was difficult being the only one still playing. When I started here (Thursday) at 7 p.m., it had already been five hours."

Rawson may have been on the court on her own, but she wasn't alone.

"The support from my teammates was great," she said. "This feels amazing, but we really haven't won anything yet."

Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan knew Rawson would come through.

"Some people crumble when they're in a fight," Meehan said. "I knew Hannah would come through. She's got a lot of experience."

As for the Sectional Final win, Meehan was pleased.

Norwell has been a traditional rival for Cohasset.

This year, in two previous meetings Cohasset had come out on top.

"Norwell is a very deep team and they are extremely well coached," Meehan said. "We couldn't take them lightly."

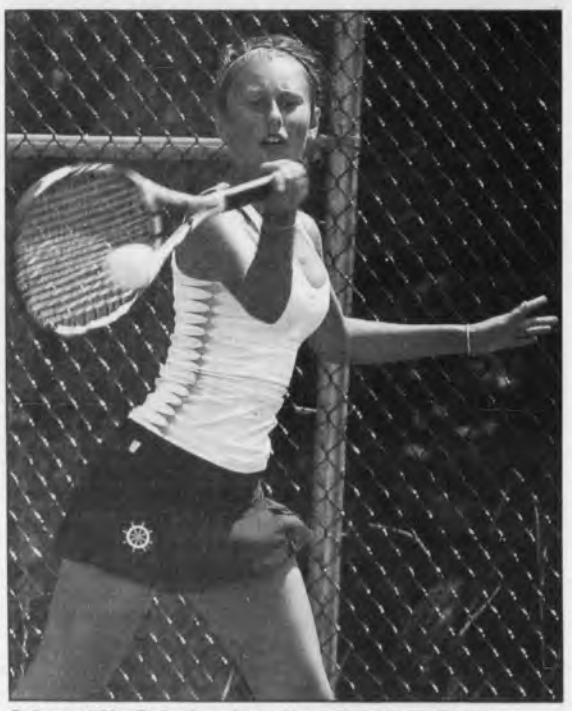
at the net, and Sookiasian drilled a beautiful forehand down the line for key points in the tiebreak.

"We always start a little loose, and then we find our stride," said Spofford. "We cut down on our unforced errors and got to the net. In the tiebreak, we concentrated and took it one point at a time."

Their ride continued in the second set. Simply put, the pair belted the label off the tennis ball. Spofford served it out with two overpowering offerings for the straight-set win. "We wanted to bring it to them, and just hit the ball hard in the second set," said Sookiasian.

Bedford's Sarita Biswas defeated Emma Smith, 6-2, 6-2, in second singles. The Bucs' Hannah Mardini stopped senior Hannah Rawson, hero of the Martha's Vineyard odyssey, in No. 3 singles, 6-2, 6-4.



I honestly felt the two matches were closer than the scores indicated," said Meehan. "I'm proud of both Emma and Hannah. The points were long and close. Hannah never gives in, and Emma must have kept the ball in the air for 50 shots on the final point of her match. It's the state semis. They ran into good players."

Bedford's Maya Biswas and Sarah Cowles contributed the other team point by stopping Caitlin DeAngelis and Gabrielle LeMoine, 6-0, 6-2, in first doubles.

"Doubles were our strength all year," said Bedford (14-7) coach Monica Drabkova, whose team will face Central champ Bromfield (19-3) in Wednesday's state final (3:30 p.m., at St. John-Shrewsbury). "Both (of our) teams were close to undefeated for the season."

For Cohasset it was a fine season for a close team. There was a South Shore League title, three victories over Norwell, and a terrific tournament run highlighted by a South semifinal win over Martha's Vineyard which took longer than a trip to Mars to finish (two days, spread over four venues) and will not soon be forgotten.

"It was a great year," Meehan said. "We didn't have Emma (Davis) for all our matches, so we built depth by using several players at No. 1. We have a good nucleus coming back. We did a lot of bonding on and off the court. I'm happy for my team."

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 25, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Information you need might be coming in sporadically, but at least what you're getting is valuable. Continue to wait until more is available before acting on that career move.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You continue on an upbeat cycle, and with that strong Taurean energy you should see favorable results from your hard work. A pleasant surprise awaits you in your private life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A misunderstanding needs more time to be worked out. Don't give up on it just yet. Remain open to providing explanations, if called for. Another friend offers good advice.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Fast action can correct a seemingly minor problem that has taken on some unexpectedly difficult aspects. Stay with it until it's resolved. News on a more positive note is due soon.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some snags could cause delays in those plans you're eager to see put into operation. But be patient. The Clever Cat will soon have good reason to celebrate a job well done.

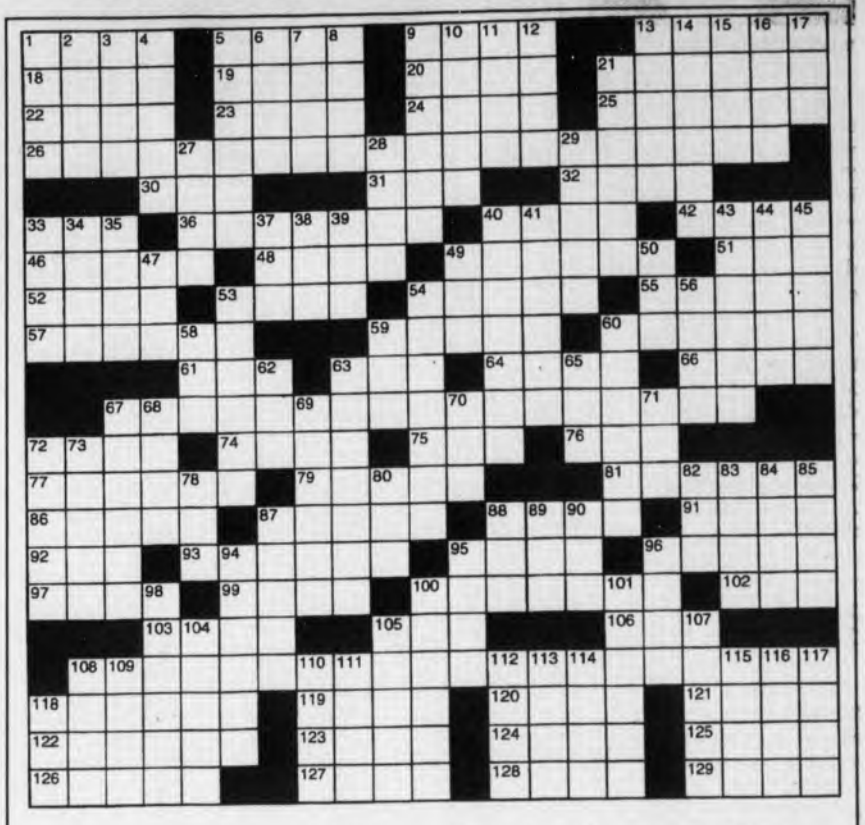
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be careful not to let that Virgan sensitivity dissuade you from being the hardheaded realist you should be at this time. Your goals are in sight. Stay focused on them.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A more positive aspect opens up, allowing you to make some important changes in a personal situation. Remember to seek balance and avoid extremes as you proceed.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good week to get out and enjoy the fine times you missed while you were so deep in those workaday projects. Be sure to share it with that special person.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Work and play are in balance this week. However, expect news that could tip things toward the workplace for quite a while. But all to a good end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're more productive on the job than you have been in some time. That's good. But be careful not to overlook some situations developing in your private life.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You've been doing a lot for others (as usual). But now it's time to focus on your needs, including finally going on that long-delayed trip you've been hoping to make.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It's all smoothly going on 'twixt you and that very special person in your life. But a colleague causes some disruption on the job that you might be called on to help settle.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are sensitive to the needs of others. But you're no pushover. You would make a fine teacher, psychologist or minister.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

LIFE AT CHS

See you in September!

WHITNEY MALONE

I'd like to recognize Girls Tennis for being South Section Champions! Beating Martha's Vineyard last Friday in a nail-biting 3-2 match...

Hi everyone! I'm sure you are all excited for summer, which officially begins June 20th. This last week has been a busy one at CHS with papers and finals and we are all eagerly counting down the seconds until the end of last period Monday!

I'd like to recognize Girls Tennis for being South Section Champions! Beating Martha's Vineyard last Friday in a nail-biting 3-2 match, the girls carried on to play Norwell Saturday, knocking out their biggest rival in a 4-1 match to claim the title. Congrats girls on an amazing season!

Tuesday, the National Honor Society met at lunch to remind members to continue their community service and maintain their grades next year. The officers also discussed plans for next fall, which include a group field trip, a school spirit committee, and an updated drafting of the NHS constitution. NHS will continue to run Tuesday night homework club at the library next year.

This week was the annual Field Hockey Summer Clinic organized and run by the CHS varsity team for the upcoming sixth graders and the current middle school players. The clinic is one of the team's fundraisers for new equipment and team gear. The team captains, myself included, planned various drills and games for the middle school girls that helped to improve their skills and allowed them to meet the high school players.

Being that there's only one more day of school left, this is my last article for Life at CHS. I hope everyone has a fun "and safe" summer! See you in September!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High and the new Life at CHS columnist. Look for her columns to resume when school starts in September.

Hoops for Heart a success!

Students at Deer Hill School in Cohasset jumped all over heart disease and stroke by participating in Hoops for Heart event on May 25. Students raised more than $5,000 this year for the American Heart Association, which funds research, programs and education to fight heart disease and stroke, the nation's number one and number 4 killers.

"I'm so pleased with the success of this year's event," said Mike Weydt, Hoops For Heart coordinator and PE teacher. "We all had a lot of fun, and the kids enjoyed learning about the importance of physical activity and how they can play a role in saving lives."

Deer Hill students have been shooting hoops to fight heart disease since 2006, raising more than $20,600 for the American Heart Association.

Hoops For Heart is a program that promotes physical activity and heart health through playing basketball. It is co-sponsored by the American Heart Association and the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

To make a donation or to find out more about Hoops for Heart, call the American Heart Association at 508-620-1700 or 800-242-8721, or online at heart.org/hoops.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Setting national standard

LORNA JANE NORRIS

I'm told you really shouldn't wish your time away, but I just can't wait for our fall semester to begin! South Shore Conservatory (SSC) has become a founding member of The Carnegie Hall Royal Conservatory Achievement Program, or TAP. This 2-year-old collaboration between Carnegie Hall and The Royal Conservatory of Canada provides a recognized national standard of musical success through an effectively sequenced course of study from beginner to advanced levels.

One of the reasons I'm so excited about bringing this to SSC is that I used a very similar system to learn piano and flute in England. In fact, music students in Europe, Canada and many other parts of the world all grew up using a progressive graded system of assessments. It's a common musical language from country to country. If I say to our violin teacher from South Africa that I have my Grade 8 in flute she knows exactly at what level I play. In fact, in order to study music at university in England you must have your Grade 8 in your primary instrument.

Carnegie Hall really wanted America to be part of this global conversation so it searched the world for what it saw as being the best curriculum and chose to partner with the Canadian system founded at The Royal Conservatory in Toronto. After our presentation at the National Guild for Community Arts Education meeting last fall, Carnegie Hall approached us to be a pilot program for them. It's exciting to be one of the key partners and founding schools for this fast growing program, which celebrates an individual's musical accomplishments on a national level. Imagine being connected to music students across the country!

For each TAP level, repertoire lists are provided, along with exercises in ear-training, sight-reading, harmony and more. Assessments available in most instruments and voice, evaluate four main components: repertoire, technique, musicianship and musical literacy, and are held twice yearly. Students only take the exams when they feel ready. Adjudicators from all over the country come to SSC to hear our students. Wow!

TAP isn't for every student. People take music lessons for many reasons, and we celebrate and encourage that. Our faculty members are already considering who among their students would enjoy the challenge of measuring their progress and working hard to meet a deadline. Bassoonist Janet Underhill is already preparing some of her students for the first assessment period in December. A Canada native, Janet participated in the TAP program as a young music student herself.

When asked what she liked about the TAP program, here's what Janet told me. "I feel TAP gave me a solid musical foundation that I carry with me every day that I am teaching and performing. I incorporate TAP method books and primers in my teaching. Especially when it comes to approaching and learning how to sight read TAP methodology is unequalled."

To learn more about this program, visit www.theachievementprogram.com. To learn more about South Shore Conservatory's programs, visit www.sscmusic.org.

Derby Day is a long-time tradition

On Friday, June 8, 2012, Derby Academy in Hingham celebrated its 221st Derby Day Exercises. The 205th Derby Lecture from the pulpit of New North Church was given to students, faculty, trustees, parents and guests by the Reverend Dr. Nancy S. Taylor, senior minister and CEO of Old South Church in Boston. During the Derby Day ceremonies, 45 members of the Class of 2012 were honored for their time at Derby Academy. Head of School Andrea Archer and President of the Board of Trustees Walter Sullivan '79 awarded and presented, respectively, diplomas to the members of the graduating class:

Charlotte Brine Allard of Cohasset, Emily Grace Barron of Braintree, Charlotte Louisa Bosworth of Pembroke, Brendan William Carroll of Hingham, William Edward Chave of Milton, Alyse Jessica Clinton of Hull, Rebecca Jean Collins of Hingham, Bridgett Anna Condon of Cohasset, Jardel Pires Costa of Dorchester, Caroline Crimmins Daley of Hingham, Avery Edward Devlin of Scituate, Madeline Elizabeth Dewire of Hingham, Margaret Therese Di Pesa of Hingham, James David Dietrich of Cohasset, Caley Elizabeth Drooff of Marshfield, Michael James Durkin of Cohasset, Kelsey Grace Farden of Hingham, Carolyn Ann Giuggio of Cohasset, Kyle John Heffernan of Kingston, Brian Thomas Humphreys of Norwell, Shauna M. Kennedy of Norwell, Amy Elizabeth Kirk of Hingham, Karlee Johnna Koswick of Cohasset, Daniel Eric Kylander of Hingham, Zachary Hale Lowe of Norwell, Abigail Lillian Frances McLean of Cohasset, Grace Sarah McMeekin of Cohasset, Grace Pierson McNichols of Hingham, Graham Richards McOsker of Norwell, Andrea Joy Minicus of Hingham, Reese Christian Moehlenkamp of Hingham, Madeline Martignetti Murphy of Hingham, Grace Clare Nedeau of Hull, John Philip Noonan of Hingham, Regan Mahoney O'Donnell of Cohasset, Dakorite Jenmina Dennis Ojuka of Randolph, Ellora Nimbkar Rich of Hanover, Samantha G Rowell of Hingham, Robert Joseph Durand Scheerer of Duxbury, Graham Robert Schwandt of Cohasset, Catherine Lane Schwartz of Cohasset, Eric Francis Seewald of Duxbury, Matthew Rocha Tracy of Quincy, Cassidy Katrina Warwick of Hingham and Maura Evelyn Woods of Duxbury.

Last Chapel is held on campus each June as part of the end of year celebrations. On Thursday, June 7, students were honored for their academic achievements. This year's eighth grade address was given by Kelsey Grace Farden of Hingham, and the Faculty Address was given by French Teacher Alison Armour and English Teacher Richard Andriole. The spirit team captains and assistant captains for 2011-2012 were honored, including Abigail McLean of Cohasset, Madeline Murphy of Hingham, Avery Devlin of Scituate and Eric Seewald of Duxbury. Academic awards were presented to the following students:

Grace McMeekin of Cohasset received the Wheelwright Family Prize in English

Ellora Rich of Hanover received the Francis J. Ranieri Prize in English, and was recognized as one of the top two academically ranked students of the eighth grade, earning her the honor of serving as Parade Marshal for the Derby Day Parade.

Fourth-grader Max Murphy of Cohasset sports aviator sunglasses during Derby Day on Friday.

Abigail McLean of Cohasset and Grace McNichols of Hingham embrace in the back of the church after receiving their diplomas at New North Church on Friday.

Caley Drooff of Marshfield received the History Prize

Kelsey Farden of Hingham received the Susan Feins Award in Science, and was recognized as one of the top two academically ranked students of the eighth grade, earning her the honor of serving as Parade Marshal for the Derby Day Parade.

Alyse Clinton of Hull received the Martignetti Prize in Modern Languages

Matthew Tracy of Quincy received the Latin Prize

Bridgett Condon of Cohasset received the Coyle-Driscoll Art Prize

Andy Scheerer of Duxbury received the Zildjian Music Prize

In addition to the eighth grade department awards, each year a seventh grade student is honored for his or her citizenship. Established in 2007 by a Derby parent and student, The Edward R. Foley Citizenship Prize is named in honor of Headmaster Edward R. Foley who led Derby Academy from 1992-2007. "It is awarded each year at Last Chapel to a seventh grade boy or girl who has exhibited the principles of respect, acceptance and kindness towards others, consistent with the school's two centuries old motto to to Improve Both Mind and Heart, and in keeping with the values of Mr. Foley himself. The Prize is accompanied by a monetary award, which the recipient will direct toward a charitable cause during the 8th grade academic year, with the oversight and advice of a selection committee." The winner of the 2012 Foley Prize is Camden Vassallo of Norwell.

On Derby Day, several students were honored with Book Awards for academic achievements, having earned an A- or above in all academic subjects for the entire year. The eighth grade recipients were: Alyse Clinton of Hull, Bridgett Condon of Cohasset, Caroline Daley of Hingham, Madeline Dewire of Hingham, Margaret Di Pesa of Hingham, Kelsey Farden of Hingham, Karlee Koswick of Cohasset, Daniel Kylander of Hingham, Graham McOsker of Norwell, Andrea Minicus of Hingham, Madeline Murphy of Hingham, Regan O'Donnell of Cohasset, Ellora Rich of Hanover, Lanie Schwartz of Cohasset, Eric Seewald of Duxbury, Cassidy Warwick of Hingham, The seventh grade Book Award recipients were:, Alexis Anastos of Hingham, Amanda Bradley of Hingham, Emmeline Endresen of Duxbury, Olivia Gomez of Cohasset, Merrick Gregory of Hingham, Kaja Hartwell of Hingham, Zachary Herman of Cohasset, Julia Herzfelder of Cohasset, Ashleigh Hogan of Duxbury, Helena Jensen of Duxbury, William Johnson of Norwell, Meredith Julian of Cohasset, Loring Lauretti of Cohasset, Elizabeth Mullaney of Cohasset, Lauren Oliver of Duxbury, Abigael Osmanski of Cohasset, Camerin Rawson of Cohasset, Madeline Stavis of Cohasset, Nicole Temple of Scituate, Camden Vassallo of Norwell

Two eighth graders are honored each year at Derby Day for best typifying the Derby spirit. This year's Madam Derby Pin for girls was awarded to Margaret Di Pesa of Hingham. The Academy Pin for boys was awarded to Avery Devlin of Scituate.

The Thomas J. Waters Prize, recognizing the individual teacher who exemplifies caring and concern for students, was awarded this year to third grade teacher Lisa Baxter.

GIMME SHELTER

Sophie is a true socialite

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Sophie, a black-and-white, adult female with unusual markings. Sophie adores attention and will befriend anyone who gives her attention and pets her. She is still playful and full of fun. She appears to get along well with other felines. Sophie does well at the shelter, which usually means that she would do even better in a home of her own.

Sophie welcomes visitors and if you'd like to meet her, please give Judy a call at 781-534-4902.

While you're at the shelter you can meet Sophie and all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Sophie does well at the shelter, which usually means that she would do even better in a home of her own.

Celebrating Summer

CEF Fun Run heralds the season

The First Annual Family Fun Run, sponsored by title sponsor, PUMA, was co-hosted by the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) and the Cohasset Recreation Department this past Sunday. More than 375 people participated overall in the 5K, 1 mile and "Tot Trot."

The weather was perfect for the Fun Fair on the Common, which included a Penniman Farm Petting Zoo, Face Painting, a Dunk Tank, children's games and much more. Entertainment was provided by the Rusty Skippers and Jim Armstrong and the New City Cowboys. Fun Fair and post-race refreshments were available thanks to: b.good burgers, Del's Lemonade and Nona's Ice Cream.

This event supported the CEF and the Cohasset Recreation Department and was supported by local community sponsors like Pilgrim Bank. It was a chance for the town to come together to celebrate the beginning of summer.

Mariposa Massage donated their services for the entire day.

Probe goes on

Selectmen vote to interview DeLuca

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Both the Chief of Police and Acting Town Manager are still being investigated, but the Board of Selectmen have decided to wait to vote on whether or not the town manager interfered with a police disciplinary matter until they hear from the suspended police chief.

It's been a whirlwind month for Cohasset's Town Hall and police department. Police Chief Mark DeLuca, the town's chief for the past two and a half years, was placed on paid administrative leave on May 25 after the town's police union brought several allegations against the chief to the attention of Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. Later that day, DeLuca sent a letter to the Board of Selectmen alleging the town manager interfered with an open investigation in the police department. As a result, both DeLuca and Milanoski are still under investigation by an independent consultant.

The results of the investigation of Milanoski, along with a timeline of events, were presented to the Board of Selectmen during their Tuesday, June 19 meeting. The night's agenda specified that the discussion pertained to the "results of independent investigation of allegations raised by Police Chief after he was put on paid administrative leave," and included reviews by the State Ethics Commission, Attorney General's Office, and the investigative firm Richard A. Sjoberg and Associates. Both the ethics board and AG's office declined to further investigate the matter, selectmen chair Paul Carlson reported. However, the discussion derailed as some audience members were asking questions or making comments directly about DeLuca.

Carlson said after the meeting, "Some other people tried to change the topic, but I think we

12-year-old runs triathlon in father's memory

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Losing a loved one is enough to stop anyone in their tracks. Five summers ago, Karen and Sam Lyons were put the ultimate test during the first-ever Cohasset Triathlon.

Karen's husband, Joe, was competing in the race to raise money and awareness for Type 1 juvenile diabetes, which their son Sam, now 12, has suffered from since he was two years old. Joe succumbed to a heart attack during the swim portion of the race. He was 38 years old.

Karen and Sam were left reeling from the loss. But instead of staying far away from the race and from Cohasset, the mother and son team chose to rally — the pair, who lived in Newton then but recently relocated to San Francisco, has returned to the triathlon every year since then. Inspired to pick up where Joe left off, Karen formed Team Lyons and ran the race herself in 2008; she has competed in every Cohasset tri since then, and in many other triathlons. Team Lyons had over 50 members in its inaugural year, consisting of family members, friends and neighbors who knew and loved Joe.

One year after the tragedy, Sam was made the triathlon's official starter; but this year, he's getting involved in a whole new way. For his first time ever, Sam will put foot to pavement and compete in the run portion of the triathlon this Sunday.

It's a move that is significant on many levels, Karen explained. Not only because Sam has diabetes – the very type that the Cohasset Triathlon was founded to raise funds and awareness for – but also because for both mother and son, running the race is a way to finish what Joe started.

"For Sam, it's doing what his dad started, being able

PUBLIC SAFETY

Sharing our roads

What
Driving around town, you might have noticed a new sign in place. Featuring symbols of a car, cyclist and runner, the new "Share the Road" signs encourage pedestrians, drivers and cyclists alike to look out for one another while in transit.

Where
Signs are going up along the triathlon route and other major routes around town used most often by cyclists and runners.

Who's involved
Patricia Morse coordinated the project, along with Deputy Police Chief William Quigley, the Mass. Bay Road Club, Bill Burnett of the Cohasset Triathlon, and several individual donors.

Safety tips
As you take to the road, here are a few things to keep in mind:

- Drivers: When passing cyclists and runners, please pass at a reasonable speed and allow at least three feet between your car and the rider/runner.
- Riders/runners: When a driver extends a courtesy to you, smile and say thank you!
- If you are in an oncoming vehicle and see that a car is attempting to pass a cyclist coming from the opposite direction, move over to the right side of your lane if possible, and give them a little more room.
- Cyclists and runners: You are ambassadors to your sport. Try to respond "professionally" in your interactions with drivers.

See page 4 for more on the Share the Road project and Mass. rules of the road.

These signs are being posted along routes often used by cyclists and runners.

PICTURE THIS

The Mariner caught up with Nick Lawless at the Recreation Department at Town Hall this week. Stay tuned to the Mariner all summer for great pictures of Rec activities. If you run into Nick around town, be sure to tell him you saw him in Picture This!

Nick Lawless

Name: Nick Lawless.

Occupation: Cohasset Recreation.

Best day of your life: Scoring a Collegiate hat trick for the Curry Men's Soccer team in the 2011 season.

PRINT EXTRA

Best vacation: My favorite vacation was in 2011 when my Curry Men's Soccer team traveled to Italy for 7 days and visited 9 cities. We also had the opportunity to play two Italian teams one, which we lost, and the other, which resulted in a victory.

Favorite season: My favorite season is summer; the beach is one of the most relaxing places in the world.

Favorite holiday: My Favorite holiday is July 4th. All the food, fireworks, and festivities make it different any other holiday; it's a special time to celebrate this great place in which we live.

Favorite junk food: Reese's Peanut Butter Cups

Best book (or magazine): "Black Mass" by: Dick Lehr and Gerard O'Neill.

Best movie and actor: "The Departed." Favorite Actor: Denzel Washington.

Best TV show: Rob Dyrdek's "Fantasy Factory."

Best music, group, or artist: I don't have a specific type of music that I listen to all the time. I like a little bit of everything but my favorite artist would be Drake.

Pet peeve: When I hold the door open for someone and they don't say thank you.

Fun fact: Even though I graduated from Curry College this spring I will be attending for one last semester to use my fourth year of eligibility for the Men's Soccer Team in the fall.

Goal: To one day become a successful small business owner and earn a Master's Degree in Management.

Person you'd most like to meet: Tom Brady and Bill Belichick

Biggest worry: Letting fear keep me from trying new things in life.

Best part of Cohasset: Cohasset Recreation.

POLICE BEAT

A week for car wrecks

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

MVAs

• At 10:21 a.m. on Tuesday (June 12), a 57-year-old Cohasset woman who lives at 100 Pond Street and was operating a 2006 BMW, Street reported she was traveling down a common driveway in the complex when a landscaper on a riding lawnmower, put the mower into reverse, and drove in the side of her car causing damage.

The woman did not think the landscaper was paying attention. She said he was joking with his friends and did not see her when the incident occurred. The mower was being operated by a 21-year-old Carver man. Neither vehicle was towed and there were no injuries. The Cohasset woman will seek recourse through her insurance company, police said.

• At 9:14 a.m. on Wednesday (June 13), a female 17-year-old student driver from Hull in a auto-school 2006 Toyota was traveling along North Main near Cedar Street (toward Forest Avenue) when she drove off the road, hitting four cement posts, before traveling 15 feet down the ditch. The instructor tried hitting the brake on his side of the car but it was too late, police said. The girl was shaken up and taken to South Shore Hospital with minor injuries. The vehicle, which was totaled, had to be towed. The instructor did not have any reported injuries, police said.

• At 8:29 a.m. on Thursday (June 14), a 54-year-old Marlboro man in a 2001 Dodge Durango, who was headed south on Route 3A near Sanctuary Pond Road, hit a deer that had darted out across the highway. The deer was killed. The Marlboro man was shaken up and taken to South Shore Hospital. There was minor damage to his car that had to be towed.

• Police said a 2012 Nissan Sentra that was parked facing the wrong way on Sohier Street and was about halfway into the travel lane was sideswiped sometime between 8 p.m. and 12:30 a.m. (June 14-15). Police said the girl, who was driving, parked the car there while going to a friend's house. The car was scraped and the mirror was missing.

• At 1:26 p.m. on Friday (June 15), police responded to a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway at Beechwood Street. Police said a 43-year-old Marshfield woman in a 2011 Honda Pilot was traveling north and stopped at the light when she was rear-ended by a 1999 Nissan Pathfinder. Police said the driver of the Pathfinder, a 49-year-old Scituate woman, was cited for following too closely and not having her license and registration with her. Neither vehicle had to be towed and there were no reported injuries.

• At 5:01 p.m., on Saturday (June 16), a caller reported hitting a deer near the train crossing on lower King Street. The DPW was notified to pick up the deer, police said.

• At 5:20 p.m. on Saturday (June 16), a caller reported that a 1996 Chevrolet pickup truck had struck another vehicle in the parking lot at Shaw's and left. Further investigation revealed the 21-year-old Scituate woman who had driven the truck left a note on the 2011 Ford pickup truck that she struck it when she misjudged the parking space. The Ford, which is owned by a Pembroke company, was unoccupied at the time. There was minor damage to the Ford, police said.

Checks

A 52-year-old Cohasset man reported last week that someone had gotten a hold of some of his checks and had written $14,000 in checks on his account. Detectives are working with the victim and the bank, police said.

Checked out

Police went to the home of a 44-year-old Cohasset woman last week whom a caller had reported as driving erratically in a black Lincoln Navigator on Route 3A near Pond Street. Police said the woman checked out fine.

Front-loader

Last Thursday at about 1 a.m., police responded to a report of an unmanned front-end loader that was running on Sandy Beach. The equipment had been there to clean up debris. The responding officer was able to turn off the machine and the owner was notified. The owner determined that someone had pulled out the oil plug in an apparent act of vandalism and luckily the officer turned the machine off before the engine seized up.

Coyotes

A 71-year-old Cohasset man who was walking his puppy in his backyard, which backs up to the woods and is not near other residences on Friday (June 15) around 12:50 a.m. fired off a warning shot with his registered handgun at four coyotes that were circling them and getting ready to attack. He alerted police in case someone heard the gunshot, police said.

Juveniles

A security guard at the Arts Festival chased two juveniles out of one of the tents at about 1:50 a.m. on Friday (June 15). He reported the youths took off toward Beach Street. An officer on patrol located the duo and brought them home to their parents, police said.

Missing kids

Police responded to two separate, unrelated reports of missing children last week. The first came in from a 68-year-old grandmother who thought she had lost her one-year-old grandson.

The second came in from a14-year-old boy who had thought he had lost his baby sister, 2-1/2. Both children were found hiding inside the respective houses, police said.

Hood damage

A 54-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Friday (June 15) that someone might have thrown something at her 2004 Jeep Wrangler, damaging the paint on the hood while it was parked on Elm Street.

Expired license

A 67-year-old Rockland man is being summonsed to court to face the charge of unlicensed operation following a traffic stop at 2:17 p.m. on Friday (June 15) at Forest Avenue and Black Rock. The officer on patrol clocked the man, who was driving a Chrysler Sebring, as traveling at a high rate of speed. Police said the man's license expired in March. He was also cited for speeding.

Boat scam

A 53-year-old Cohasset man reported to police that he found a boat that he loved on the Internet and transferred $20,000 into an account number that the broker provided. The money is gone and he did not get the boat, police said. Detectives are assisting the victim the help track down the money and find who is responsible.

Money taken

The manager at a local business reported to police last week that $2000 in cash was missing from the safe in the store. Detectives processed the safe for evidence and are looking a video surveillance as part of their investigation.

Harassment

Police said a 22-year-old Cohasset woman and a 20-year-old Hingham woman have been feuding and have harassment prevention orders out against one another. The Cohasset woman, who has disabled her Facebook account as a result, complained to police last week that she was hearing from a friend what the Hingham woman had been posting about her but had not seen it. Police said the posting did not amount to a violation of the harassment prevention order.

Two-alarm fire at 100 Pond Street

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A fire at the condominium complex at 100 Pond Street was initially reported as an explosion Wednesday evening at around 7 p.m. Subsequent calls were for a building fire.

The two-alarm fire was in a two-car attached garage at unit number 34 on 100 Pond Street. Authorities at the scene could not clarify the cause of the fire.

Assistant Fire Chief John Dockray reported that Cohasset Fire deployed engine 1 and engine 2; upon arrival, the second alarm was struck. The department received assistance from the Scituate, Hull, Hingham and Norwell fire departments. Cohasset's Fire Chief Robert Silvia was in command of the incident.

No one was home at the time of the fire, Dockray said. Residents huddled around the cul-de-sac, talking together and surveying the damage, said that they were all right but declined to comment further.

"We do not have a cause at this time," Dockray said, shortly after 8 p.m. "We are awaiting a trooper from the state fire marshal's office to begin the investigation. We are currently in the overhaul phase, checking for hot spots."

Dockray also reported that there were no injuries.

Stay tuned for updates from the Cohasset Mariner.

Share the Road

Signs go up in time for tri

By Patricia Morse
Special to the Mariner

About a year ago, a cycling friend of mine, Lori Cooke, posted a photo on Facebook of a new 'Share the Road' sign she had seen while riding in Duxbury. That got me thinking... with the popularity of the Cohasset Road race and the Cohasset Triathlon becoming a premier event in New England, Cohasset should be a more bicycle-friendly town. Our town is such a beautiful place to ride and run that people come from all over for training and pleasure. So I contacted Deputy Chief Quigley and asked him for his input, and then talked to Carl Sestito at the DPW and to Bill Burnett, Race Director for the Cohasset Triathlon. With major donations from the Cohasset Triathlon and from the Mass. Bay Road Club, whose members regularly ride in Cohasset and with a few individual donations, we were able to raise enough money to donate two-dozen top quality signs to the town of Cohasset.

Our roads are beautiful, but because many are narrow and winding, cyclists and drivers need to be a little more cautious to ensure everyone's safety. Understanding their respective rights and responsibilities will help runners, cyclists and motorists be more accommodating and will help make Cohasset a great place to walk and ride. Hopefully, a little education will help everyone understand that safe roads are really a partnership.

People are coming here to run and ride anyway, but it would be wonderful if we went out of our way just a little bit to make them feel welcome, and maybe they will stop in the village for a drink or a sandwich while they are here and support our businesses.

I have heard many stories about cyclists and runners being harassed, yelled at and even being hit by objects being thrown out of cars in certain towns. I don't want Cohasset to be that town! Riders have to obey the rules of the road and should show gratitude when drivers are courteous. Drivers need to understand that more and more cyclists and runners are rightfully sharing our roads and that they have a responsibility to take a little special care when driving.

We were cycling in Italy last month, and I was amazed by how much cooperation there is between cyclists and motorists there. They drive very aggressively, there are many times more bicycles on the roads than we have here, and their roads are narrower and even more congested in the villages than ours— yet people are amazingly courteous to each other. Even in the narrow tunnels, which are everywhere, the cars and buses give room to the cyclists when they pass.

It is a mentality that has evolved over time over there that is just so cooperative and respectful. I really think it just takes practice and a little shift in attitude and maybe in our case, a conscious effort to be more willing to be nicer about it. Like in Italy, most of our roads were not built with cyclists in mind, but we can borrow a little bit of their sensibility about it and make it more pleasant for everyone.

Did you know that Massachusetts is now listed as the 3rd most bike-friendly state in the US? (http://www.boston.com/yourtown/news/on_biking/2012/05/massachusetts_named_3rd_most_b.html)

As recently as 2009, it was 19th, so we've come a long way. I think when people hear about this ranking, they might naturally rise to the occasion and become more conscious of how they are riding and how they are driving. It would be great if, over time, Cohasset became known as a place where runners and cyclists are really welcomed and looked after. Through education, we can encourage our cyclists to be careful to follow the rules and show their gratitude to drivers with a wave and a smile. That would be something to be proud of!

"Share the Road" project donors:

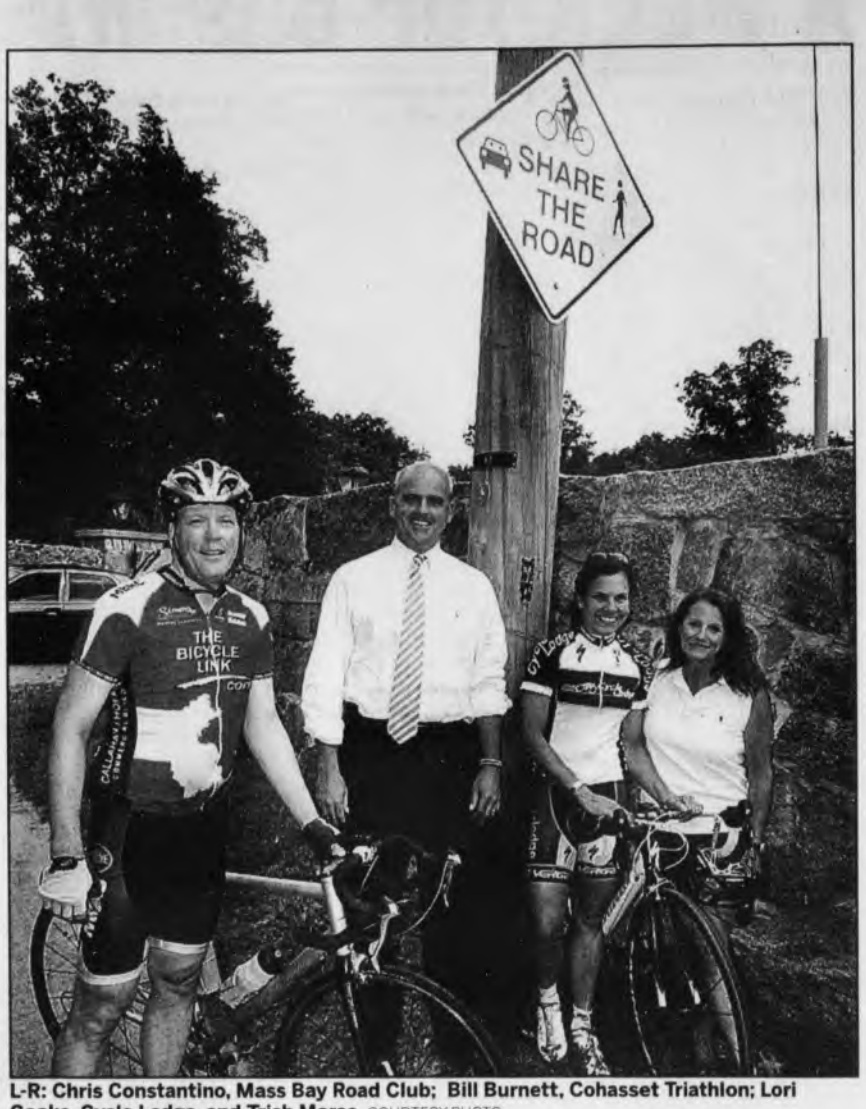
Cohasset Triathlon
Massachusetts Bay Road Club
The Cycle Lodge, Pembroke
Cohasset Patrolmen's Association
Lori Cooke
The Morse Family
Deputy Chief Bill Quigley

Cohasset Triathlon organizer Bill Burnett said, "When Trish approached me about the Share the Road project, I immediately thought it was a perfect fit for the triathlon to get involved. My vision with the triathlon has always been to promote a healthy, active lifestyle and to give back to our town. I am pleased the triathlon is financially able to support this project. Hopefully these new signs will serve as a reminder to motorists, cyclists and runners to do their part to improve safety for everyone."

Chris Constantino, president of the Mass. Bay Road Club, said, "The Mass. Bay Road Club has members living in Cohasset and the surrounding towns who frequently use the local roads. The club felt the sign project was a good way to get the message out to drivers to help make the roads safer for everyone."

Rules of the Road:

There are a lot of misconceptions about the rights and responsibilities of cyclists and motorists. The Massachusetts General Laws outline them in great detail, but here are the basics of a few of the most important ones to know:



In Massachusetts, cyclists are allowed on ANY public road, except where specifically prohibited and posted (such as on the interstate).

Cyclists are considered vehicles, and therefore must abide by all of the same traffic rules as automobiles. This means stopping at traffic lights and stop signs, signaling when turning and yielding the right of way at intersections just as they would if they were in a car. Same roads, same rules!

Cyclists MAY ride side-by-side but no more than two-abreast. They should ride to the right side of the travel lane where possible and should ride single file to make it easier when autos are attempting to pass.

Cyclists should always wear a helmet. Riders 16 years old and under MUST wear a helmet (and buckle it).

Cyclists must use lights and reflective gear when riding at night sufficient to be seen from 600 feet.

Cyclists should always ride WITH traffic and keep to the far right of the road unless hazards such as parked cars, glass, sand or potholes make it unsafe to do so. When moving toward the center of the lane to avoid hazards, cyclists should signal their intentions to cars that may be behind them so drivers are aware and can wait before passing.

Cyclists MAY use the entire lane but that doesn't mean that they should! Don't be a road hog.... keep to the right whenever possible.

Cyclists must yield to pedestrians.

When overtaking a cyclist, motorists should pass at a reasonable speed and allow 3 feet between the car and rider. Please do NOT honk your horn to alert the cyclist that you are approaching, which can startle the rider and cause an accident.

Motorists must wait for a safe opportunity to pass cyclists, and MAY use the adjacent lane, crossing the center line to pass if there is no oncoming traffic.

After passing a cyclist traveling in the same direction, a motorist may not make a right turn at an intersection or driveway unless the driver allows a safe distance between the car and rider and must use turn signals to alert the rider to the intended turn.

In congested areas (such as Cohasset Village), the safest place for a cyclist to ride is often out in the middle of the lane where they can be easily seen by cars backing out of parking spaces and don't run into car doors as they open out into the travel lane.

Runners should run on the sidewalk when there is one and against traffic in general, except in blind corners when they might be more visible by crossing to the opposite side.

Runners should be visible! Wear reflective gear. Headphones are not advised, or wear just one and keep an ear free. And it is always good to run with a buddy if possible.

Water dept. shut-off update

The Cohasset Water Commission submitted the following to the Mariner:

The Water Commission would like to thank those who have brought their balances for services received from the Water Department up to date.

As a town entity, many do not consider us a business, but we are very similar to any other small business. Our vendors and contractors depend upon us to pay our bills so that they in turn can pay their bills, taxes and employees. When our customers don't us pay it has a domino effect, and also impacts other entities of the town, especially if we have to go to Town Meeting to 'borrow' to pay our bills until we receive payment. Receivables balances at the water company potentially harm other departments in town that could have used the money.

Currently, our receivables from customers, excluding the town, total $275,000. This represents shut-offs slated to take effect shortly, along with those that have not paid their bills for the last quarter.

We encourage those who are delinquent to bring their account up to date by June 29, the last business day of our Fiscal Year. According to state guidelines, payments received after that date are not considered for this current year.

Thank you.

Contracts approved

Both the water department and town counsel had contracts approved during the Tuesday, June 19 Board of Selectmen meeting.

The town's contract with law firm Deutsch Williams was renewed December 31, 2012. The town has retained this firm since October 1998; the renewed contract Deutsch Williams presented is a standard contract, the same agreement the town has had with the firm for the past 14 years.

The town will continue to pay $190 per hour for legal services, although Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that the firm is asking for a $5 per hour increase for next year. These services include: litigation counsel, tax counsel, real estate counsel, or legal services to the schools, water or sewer commissions. For all other services, the town will pay a retainer fee of $54,000 per year.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that she wanted to issue a request for proposals (RFP) for a new legal contract, as the selectmen discussed doing last fall, but Milanoski suggested that the board refrain from issuing an RFP and finish out the calendar year. The board voted unanimously to renew the current legal contract, effective July 1.

Meanwhile, the Water Department's new operations contract with the firm Woodard and Curran was also approved by the selectmen.

Stickers are on sale now

Stickers will be on sale during normal business hours at the Town Hall and the DPW garage. Stickers will not be sold on the weekend. Stickers are $65 for residents under the age of 65 and $35 for any additional vehicle registered at the same address. The sticker price for a person 65 and older is $25.

A copy of your current registration is required. If leasing your vehicle, you will need proof of residence in addition to the registration. Still some open committee seats

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

As the selectmen complete annual committee appointments and reappointments this month, it was reported this week that a few boards have open seats that no one has applied for yet.

The Board of Selectmen voted to reappoint or appoint any committee members who currently hold uncontested seats during the Tuesday (June 19) selectmen's meeting. The new appointments or reappointments will be effective July 1. The board asked committee members with expiring terms to reapply for their seats this year.

Conservation Commission chair David Farrag applied for his full-term position, and the selectmen voted unanimously to reappoint him. But there are a few contested seats for the ConCom.

Committee appointments and reappointments are a routine measure for the selectmen. However, the board courted controversy last July when the selectmen voted to replace three longtime ConCom members with three new associate members.

The selectmen voted 3-2 to make this move; they also voted to demote one voting member to an associate position. The decision led to 120 residents signing a nine-page-long petition opposing the vote, asking the selectmen to rescind the new appointments, reinstate the ousted commissioners and apologize publicly.

Selectman Paul Carlson said at the time that the board could not undo its decision. "We cannot have a system of automatic, lifetime reappointments simply because the appointees wish to be reappointed."

Once again, there is some competition for ConCom seats, the associate member positions. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski was appointed as an associate member last year, but resigned in March after the selectmen appointed him as interim town manager. Farrag has been reappointed for another three-year term. There are two associate member positions, each with one-year terms, which are up for appointment. One of the associate terms was Milanoski's; the other is Richard Karoff's. Karoff is the former full member who was demoted to the associate position last year.

A few applicants for ConCom positions came before the selectmen Tuesday to ask for their consideration. Patrick Kennedy, Jerusalem Road, whose wife Diane serves as selectmen vice-chair, asked to be considered for any full member positions that are vacant or becoming available, but only if a current member in the position is not seeking reappointment. He also noted that his wife would obviously recuse herself from voting on the matter. Kennedy is an attorney with experience in property law; he also attended Vermont Law School, an institution with a well-known environmental law program.

E. Briscoe Rodgers also asked for the selectmen's consideration. Rodgers shared that his background is in business and computer science, not environmental law, but that he felt the ConCom could benefit from his outside perspective.

Farrag said in a phone call that while an environmental or law background "is not a prerequisite" to sit on the ConCom, "it is very helpful."

The ConCom chair added that he planned to discuss the open positions with the ConCom during their scheduled Thursday, June 21 meeting. The ConCom could write a letter for the selectmen asking to keep Karoff on board and appoint one new associate member, Farrag said.

Other boards with contested seats are the Zoning Board of Appeals and Harbor Commission. Meanwhile, there are three committees that have not had any applicants for the next term:

- The Cohasset Common Historic District Commission, which has two openings: 1) District resident, a three-year term and 2) Realtor representative, also three years
- Keeper of the Clock: one open position with a one-year term
- Open space committee: one three-year term

Anyone interested in applying for these positions should send a letter of interest to the board of selectmen's office, 41 Highland Ave., or email Tracey Connors-Kelly at:

tconnorskelly@townofcohasset.org.

Applications for the other boards and commissions closed last Friday, June 15; the only ones the office will still accept applications for are those listed above, which have not yet had any applicants.

The selectmen will vote the remaining appointments and reappointments during their next scheduled meeting

AROUND TOWN

Summer reminders to stay cool and safe

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Summer reminders

Hello Cohasset and how are you all? As I am writing this week's column, the thermometer is heating up and reaching temps above 90 degrees, I love the warmth but the humidity isn't always so nice. Overall though, welcome Summer 2012! The kids are out of school, the town pool is ready for families and friends to splish and splash, the beaches are open and sprinklers, hoses and lots of ice cream cones are being seen and enjoyed all over town.

With all of that fun going on, we all need to remember a few safety reminders to keep everyone happy and safe. We all know and hear it often enough about SUNSCREEN and the importance of it being used from teeny tiny babies to the oldest of the old who are outside in the sun. Now, we just have to make sure to practice what is preached. Also, with the number of cases of Lyme disease being reported from tick bites and the mosquitoes now in action big-time, make sure to use bug spray when needed.

A few weeks ago when I was babysitting for one of my favorite families in town,(so many of you are my favorites, I promise) I was putting the little girl to bed and noticed a rash on her stomach with what looked like a bite in the middle. For a brief second, I questioned a tick bite however, no tick and, the rash was not a "bulls-eye" circle and was definitely not in the shape that I have seen in all the pictures of the "traditional" Lyme disease. I mentioned it to her parents when they came home, she went to the doctor four days later when it was still there and becoming more prominent and yes, a confirmed case of Lyme! Lesson learned is we cannot protect ourselves from everything and also, things are not always "textbook" but we can do our best to prevent what we can and if things don't look right, get it checked out. She is doing fine now and enjoying the summer, hooray!

The last of my reminders have to do with helmets when riding bikes, scooters, skateboards and trikes and the biggest one of all...PLEASE DO NOT leave your child or your animals locked in or closed up in a car with the windows rolled up or even with the windows cracked a tiny bit while you go and do your errands. It is too hot for one thing and even a few minutes is way too long for anyone to deal with that heat and...you never know when that wrong person may try to do something freaky or wrong with your child, your animal and/or your car. Take them with you or leave them home, better safe than sorry. Ok, enough reminders (thank you to all who asked me to include them this week) and on we go with the column...

Dallas Cowboys sports internship

This is a great bit of news that Sue and Bob Cunningham wanted to share about their son. Congratulations go out to Cameron Cunningham who graduated from Texas Christian University in Fort Worth, Texas on May 12th with a bachelor of arts degree in Strategic Communications. Following graduation, Cameron began his career in sports management with a one-year internship with the Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League.

Way to go Cameron on this very exciting news. You should be so proud of this accomplishment and start of your career and goals as we know your parents and friends are, great job!

Saint Michael's

Two Cohasset residents were named to the spring 2012 dean's list at Saint Michael's College, a liberal arts, residential Catholic college located in Burlington, Vt.

Caitlin Mahoney, daughter of Alexandra and Robert Mahoney of Cohasset, a junior business administration major, who graduated from Cohasset Jr. Sr. High School before coming to Saint Michael's.

Peter McKenna, son of James and Mary-Kate McKenna of Cohasset, a first-year economics major, who graduated from Brooks School before coming to Saint Michael's.

Students who complete a minimum of 12 credits and achieve a grade point average of at least 3.4 at the end of a semester are recognized for their scholarship by inclusion on the Dean's List.

Keep up the great work!

Art exhibit

The South Shore Art Center presents an exhibit by artist Ted Polomis at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library from July 2 through August 31. Gallery hours are Mondays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays from 10-8, Wednesdays and Fridays from 10-5, and Saturdays 9-5. For more information on this artist, please go to www.polomis.com.

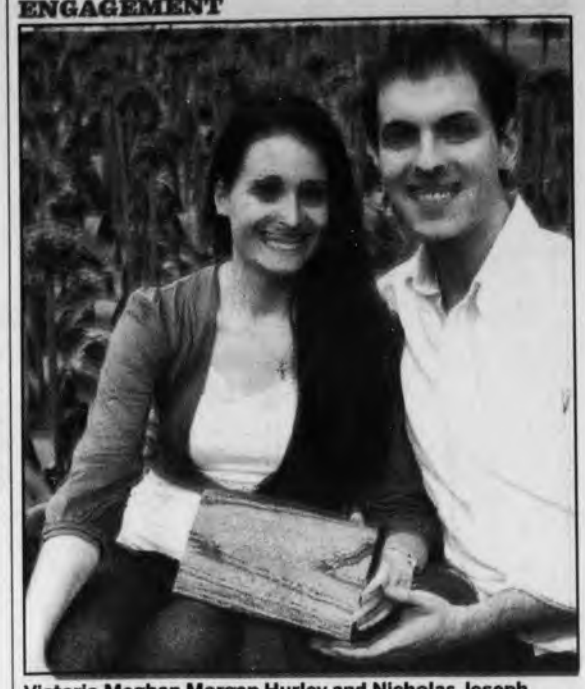
Rusty Skippers

The South Shore's Rusty Skippers Concert Band has kicked off their summer season and will be appearing at The South Shore Conservatory's Carr Amphitheater on Saturday evening, June 23rd. Admission is Free. Festivities kick off at 6:00 p.m. with hot dogs, drinks and ice cream offered to all at no charge by the event's generous sponsors, Janna Oddleifson and Jane Carr. The concert will begin at 7:00 p.m. If you haven't experienced a musical event at the Carr Amphitheater, you are in for a real treat. It is an acoustic joy for concert-goers. So grab a hot dog or a picnic basket of your own, come for the music, the tranquil setting nestled among the trees on the SSC campus, or stroll around the beautiful grounds. It is a concert event not to missed!

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.



Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

ENGAGEMENT

Hurley – Salvatoriello

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hurley of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Victoria Meghan Morgan Hurley, to Nicholas Joseph Salvatoriello, son of Drs. Fredrick and Mary Ann Salvatoriello of Hanover, N.H.

The bride-to-be graduated from Union College and the College of Veterinary Medicine of Michigan State University. Currently she is a veterinarian for a private small animal practice in Brockton.

Her fiancé, a political science graduate from Union College, is an inbound marketing consultant at Hubspot Inc. in Cambridge.

Their wedding will take place at St Anthony's Church in Cohasset in June 2013.

Carillon series starts Sunday

The 88th Annual Summer Recital Series on the Cohasset Carillon begins Sunday, June 24th at 6pm. On eight consecutive Sundays this summer, hear carillon players from all over the world play St. Stephen's treasured instrument. The Recital Series is the longest running continuous carillon concerts in the North America, dating back to the carillon's installation in 1924.

The best place to listen to the carillon is on the grounds of the Cohasset Common. So plan on a picnic with the family ever Sunday at 6pm from now until August 12th and treat yourselves to some glorious, unique music on our town's treasure. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower is offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

The Cohasset Carillon (speaking in superlatives) is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England. St. Stephen's invites all around to come out to this fantastic series.

Family dedicates Relay walk to father

Event starts Friday at Cohasset High

With the annual Relay For Life quickly approaching, many members of Cohasset, Hingham, Scituate and Hull have decided whom they are going to walk for, whether it is a friend, a cousin, a sister, or a father. For Amy Ferguson of Hull, the latter choice has hit closest to home. Ferguson had always been lucky to come from what seemed to be a perpetually healthy family. With three siblings and two daughters of her own, cancer had never been a disease they had to worry about. Unfortunately, that changed this past February.

John Bergonzi had been incredibly healthy his entire life. At 72, he was still walking his dog several miles every day with ease, not expecting any imminent health issues. This changed, though, one day in February when he was struck with a seizure. After being brought to the hospital, his doctors discovered that he had a cancerous brain tumor that needed to be removed. After the surgery and pathology, it was concluded that Bergonzi had stage four gleoplastoma, the most dangerous type of brain tumor.

Ferguson describes her reaction to her father's diagnosis as, "kind of a helpless feeling." In order to combat this feeling, she and her siblings took action and looked for something that they could do to help. In March, she signed up as team captain for the Relay For Life with nine members on Team Gonzee that included her siblings, their spouses, and her cousin.

Although they registered Team Gonzee a bit late, this did not stop them from being the top fundraisers in the Relay. Currently, the team as a whole has raised $6,700, and her brother, John Bergonzi, has donated $2,000, making him the top individual fundraiser.

For the past few months, Ferguson has been dedicated to raising money and spreading awareness. She has involved her daughters, Samantha (3) and Alexandra (4), in the process, too. Ferguson went to their school and made luminarias with the children and gave them boxes to collect donations. She stresses the importance of educating children about cancer. Ferguson states, "The younger they start, the better. They need to know how lucky they are to have their health."

Bergonzi's battle with cancer has inspired his family. Having just finished his final round of chemo-radiation, he has made up his mind that he is not going to let this beat him. He continues to lead his normal life, and makes sure to dedicate time every day to take his dog for a walk. He is excited for the Relay, and looks most forward to walking the survivor lap.

Although this was a terrible diagnosis, Bergonzi is feeling much stronger and healthier. Ferguson states that this journey, "makes you appreciate every day, every second." Thus, on Father's Day, the entire family came together for a lobster dinner to celebrate Bergonzi, to which Ferguson says, "why not?"

The Relay for Life takes place on Alumni Field at Cohasset High School, beginning at 3 p.m. on Friday, June 22, and ending the next day. The event will include children's activities, food, a luminaria ceremony, and a performance by the Rusty Skippers. Come join Team Gonzee and the other Relay participants as they walk for a cure.

About the Relay

The Relay for Life is sponsored by the American Cancer Society. Started in 1985 at the University of Puget Sound, the Relay has expanded nationally and now having over 5,200 events in the United States as well as 23 other countries. Cohasset has been sponsoring the Relay for Life for 15 years, and in that time has raised over 1.5 million dollars for the American Cancer Society.

Library Trust turning five

In the five years that the CLT has been managing the endowment, its investment performance has been strong.

At its recent annual meeting, the Cohasset Library Trust, Inc. (CLT) completed its fifth year of operation. The Library Trust was established in 2007 to ease the library's financial future by managing and increasing the library's endowment. At the five-year mark, in addition to prudent management, $230,000 has been added to the endowment from 15 gifts of $5,000 or more!

In the five years that the CLT has been managing the endowment, its investment performance has been strong. Its Investment Advisory Committee has recommended portfolio changes from time to time that have produced results that have generally outperformed appropriate financial benchmarks. Bob Riley, an experienced investment manager, chairs this Committee that includes John Flanagan, Todd Marshman, Nina Hughes, Rick Towle and Barbara Wipf, who also are seasoned investment professionals. Each year, the Library Trust supports the library's book budget with 4 percent of the average total value of the endowment's last 12 quarters ($36,610 in this fiscal year). This conservative withdrawal rate preserves the buying power of the endowment.

From the outset, the idea was to try to increase the library endowment – not by a big fundraising campaign — but by letting Cohasset know that CLT exists as a steward of the library's endowment and is encouraging new gifts to honor or memorialize loved ones. Gifts of $5,000 or more to the library since 1901 are listed on an Endowment Board in the library entryway off the parking lot. The names of the donors of four new gifts have recently been added.

CLT has also sponsored two evenings with noted authors to celebrate the South Shore Music Circus' gift of $100,000 to CLT, completed in 2011. Both evenings were very popular, and while fundraising was not the primary goal of these events, their success added more than $20,000 to the endowment.

For the coming year, John Flanagan was elected as president, Linda Litchfield as treasurer and Sheila Evans as clerk. New board members, to serve a three-year term, were nominated and are Stephen Brown, Marylou Lawrence, Michael Putziger and Mary Whitley. Continuing as Directors, along with the officers, are Susan Davis, Doulas Eymer, Bernadette Faulkner, Jane Goedecke, Genevra Higginson, Rodney Hobson, Sarah Pease, and Robert Riley.

The CLT Board reminded itself to spread the word that a gift to the Library Trust is a wonderful way to honor someone you love or to memorialize someone you have lost, or by including the Library Trust in your estate planning.

Cohasset girl is winner in Read to Ride program

Morgan Ferreira, a 7-year-old first grader at the Osgood School School, has been chosen as the second grand prize bicycle winner in Dependable Cleaners' 2012 Read to Ride program. Read to Ride is a summer reading incentive program, created by Dependable Cleaners, that gives children ages 6 -15 a chance to win a bike and other prizes for reading books during the summer months.

Morgan, an animal lover who enjoys reading books about all kinds of different animals in her spare time, won a brand new bike by reading "Philippa Fisher and the Fairy's Promise" by Liz Kessler. Her parents think she will become a veterinarian one day because of her love for animals and her practice of taking great care of them. Morgan counts her late dog Fred, a bird, fish, a turtle, and her current tadpole as pets she has watched over. Morgan also enjoys riding her grandpa's Shetland pony Stormey and taking his other miniature horse Chestnut for walks. When not taking care of her many pets, Morgan can be found exercising her love of gymnastics by doing somersaults around the house.

Morgan, an animal lover who enjoys reading books about all kinds of different animals in her spare time...

This week's second place runner up is fellow animal lover Taylor Marshall, 9, also of Cohasset. In years past, Taylor has read more than 30 books for the Read to Ride program. This year, she has finally won on her entry of Jack Russell Dog Detective; The Phantom Mudder by Odgers, Darrel & Sally. Taylor is a big fan of reading books about animals, especially dogs. Her love of dogs might have been inspired by her own black Labrador Jasmine. Taylor is a third-grader at Deer Hill School. She enjoys reading The Harry Potter series by JK Rowling during her independent reading time in school.

In its 14th year, Read to Ride is designed to foster the love of reading and provide students aged 6-15 with the tools they need to ensure year-long learning success. Over the past 13 years, children have read more than 59,000 books. For every book a child reads, they fill out an entry form and submit it at any Dependable Cleaners store location or with a Dependable Cleaners Home Delivery Driver. Dependable Cleaners will randomly draw one winner and 2 runner-up prizewinners every Monday beginning June 4 until August 13, (with the exception of July 2). The winner will receive a new bike and the runner-ups will win a gift card to a local sporting goods store or activity around town. Entry forms will be available at Dependable Cleaners 16 locations and with Home Delivery Drivers, as well as at the participating libraries and sporting goods stores throughout the duration of the program.

Read to Ride 2012 is sponsored by Dependable Cleaners in conjunction with Farina's Bicycle Center, Dave's Bike Infirmary, Buttonwood Books, Newtonville Books, The Patriot Ledger and Patch.com. A full list of participating organizations, program rules, and a printable entry form will be accessible at www.DependableCleaners.com/read-ride.

TEAMING UP

Cable committee, emergency management

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

They've got supplies from the '60s, including cots and blankets; they're got first aid kits, water bottles, and other emergency provisions. But one thing the town's Emergency Operations Center (EOC) doesn't have is a way to broadcast from the center in the event of an emergency. At least, not yet.

Here to save the day is the town's Cable Advisory Committee and Cohasset Community TV (CCTV). The two groups held a joint meeting on Mon., June 11 in the EOC, which is located in the basement of the Deer Hill School.

Glenn Pratt, the town's deputy director of Emergency Management, turned to the cable and CCTV for help on how to get the center ready for prime time.

"The idea is to make [the EOC] be able to replicate the police and fire station if we couldn't work from there," Pratt explained, which occurred last summer during Tropical Storm Irene. Throughout the week, when the public safety building's conference room became full or unavailable, the town's emergency management team had to find other places to meet.

The deputy director said that the EOC needs to connect to the school's fiber optic cable, which goes through town, connecting the high school (where the CCTV is housed, off the library) and Deer Hill School with the police and fire stations. The EOC will also be connected to the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC) in Hingham, where Cohasset will soon move its dispatchers.

"If we have to hunker down and operate [at the EOC], we want to be able to broadcast on the community network through there," said Pratt. In order to do that, the EOC needs switching equipment to connect to the studio's fiber optic cable connection that broadcasts to Comcast and Verizon.

CCTV, also known as 143TV, hired Don Roine of Hull as studio director in March. Roine explained that the studio has been ordering new field equipment, including high-definition cameras and switchers, that will function as a portable studio. This could be a viable option for the EOC to utilize for broadcasting.

"We can set that up here," said Roine of the EOC. "We can create a studio anywhere in town."

Recently, the video equipment in the selectmen's office underwent an upgrade; now, a new flat screen monitor is mounted on the wall behind the selectmen. New wiring allows for laptop presentations so the audience, both in the meeting room and watching on TV at home, can see PowerPoint, charts, maps, etc.

"Now, the documents on the screen will be in your home," said selectmen chair and cable committee treasurer Paul Carlson.

CCTV is also working on improvements to the Town Hall auditorium, so that if the selectmen need to move a meeting there to allow for more public commentary, they will still be able to broadcast the meeting live. The plan is to implement a "live drop" in the auditorium; that way, in case there is ever a large crowd at a selectmen's meeting, instead of lining the hallway, the group could move to the auditorium and the meeting could continue being recorded and broadcast live.

"When we have an overflow... it becomes chaotic," said Carlson. "The alternative is to move to the auditorium. It happens rarely... but people always wanted that [option]. We would also be able to announce election results right there."

For the EOC, Roine suggested a similar set-up to the selectmen's office, involving a "robo cam" and laptop, or "something even simpler," because, he asked Pratt, "How often will you have an emergency?"

"That's the devil of the business," Pratt replied.

CCTV functions as a corporation and separate entity from the town; its budget is overseen and approved by the Board of Selectmen, but the studio's bills are paid by cable user fees, Carlson explained.

Pratt said that the EOC is receiving grant money from the Mass. Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) as reimbursement for costs incurred by last summer's Tropical Storm Irene. The grant could pay for switchers that will connect to the fiber optic cables. The deputy director later said in a phone call that these new implementations will probably be in place this fall. The town departments are coordinating with the newly hired Chief Technology Officer (CTO) Rob Bonnell, "bringing him up to speed," said Pratt.

The deputy director said that while it will take a few more months to bring the EOC up to date, he is grateful for CCTV's assistance.

"We have been working on the EOC for about three years, and any bit of help we get from other departments/committees is a help, so we were delighted at the interest the cable committee showed our project," said Pratt.

Cable committee chair Pat Martin said at the meeting, "It's all about getting the word out to the Cohasset residents."

OUR VIEW

Hollywood Cohasset?

Has anyone fantasized about which parts of Cohasset would be the perfect setting for a feature film?

Next door in Hingham, officials have made overtures to the Massachusetts Film Office that Hingham is a film-friendly town. The motivation behind the outreach is that a film might be good for business, especially in the downtown area.

While Cohasset is just as historic and perhaps more quaint than neighboring Hingham – it could provide a terrific setting as well as the storylines with a phenomenal number of twists and turns for either a movie or ongoing TV soap opera.

Let's face it while soaps may have mostly disappeared from daytime TV – they are alive and well in primetime as the two series "Revenge" (which takes place in the Hamptons) and the revival of "Dallas" (with the oil-rich Ewings) demonstrate.

If any of our readers are fans of those shows — you know you have to pay attention to every minute and every detail or you can quickly get lost. If you miss an episode, you quickly become of a fan of "on demand."

While Cohasset is just as historic and perhaps more quaint than neighboring Hingham – it could provide a terrific setting as well as the storylines with a phenomenal number of twists and turns for either a movie or ongoing TV soap opera.

We've been thinking who should play the roles and what would be the title of our local soap – perhaps "As Cohasset Turns" or revive the old title "The Guiding Light."

We have often thought the old "Dynasty" series missed out by not using the Roys' Margin Street mansion as its centerpiece.

If you recall the filming of the "Witches of Eastwick" during the summer of 1986 (the movie came out in 1987) you know it was a fun summer complete with sightings of the film's stars Jack Nicholson, Susan Sarandon, Cher and Michelle Pfeiffer. The "occupation" of Cohasset by Hollywood was at times an inconvenience and irritation – but for the most part, it was a real "happening!"

The Massachusetts Film Office website features a database of potential film sites that cities and towns wishing to attract movie companies can sign onto. Communities are invited to submit photographs of significant historic and other sites and destination points that might make a good location to shoot scenes from a movie.

Cohasset has a lot of appeal. In addition to "Witches" – it was also the setting for "HouseSitter" with Steve Martin and Goldie Hawn.

Signing up with the MFO would classify Cohasset as a "film-friendly" town.

Stay tuned!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Heartfelt appreciation

The town of Cohasset recently offered a tremendous outpouring of love and support during the loss of my husband, Michael Meallo, and for this I would like to extend my deepest gratitude.

Michael was a self-taught man who was born and proudly raised in the town of Cohasset, where his parents still reside. Mike loved growing up in this town and it gave him an immense amount of pleasure to have been given the opportunity to leave his mark on this town through his work. He spoke of how he hoped that his desire to create long lasting marks of beauty through his landscaping and stonewalls would be there for people to see many years down the road. One of Mike's wishes was that one day his own children would be able to take their children to see the walls that their grandpa had constructed and that they would have a sense of pride in his workmanship.

For those of you who knew Mike personally, it is clear that if you met Mike once you were automatically treated as a friend. He was a kind, loyal, sincere man who had a smile to offer to anyone and always a word of encouragement to go along with it.

We would like to thank the people in Cohasset for giving Mike the opportunity to shine while doing some of his best work. He was truly grateful for this gift. For those of you who had the opportunity to have any of Mike's work as a part of your landscape, I would like to ask if you might send a picture with the address of the work. It is my hope to create a scrapbook of his work for our children to cherish and to share with their own families one day. Please see the website www.meallofamily.com.

On behalf of Michael, Hannah, Max and I would like to say a heartfelt thank you for all of your generosity and for giving Michael the opportunity to shine.

Jennifer, Hannah and Max Meallo

Process is unfair to DeLuca

This past Tuesday I returned to Town Hall to hear the preliminary report on the whether the Interim Town Manager interfered with an internal investigation being conducted by Chief Mark DeLuca. As a former Assistant District Attorney, Army JAG lawyer and town manager/administrator, I was amazed at the approach the investigation is taking.

In any investigation the complainant is the first to be interviewed. In this case, DeLuca will be the last. It is also erroneous to assume that an objective investigation can only be conducted on the basis of a written statement. As to claims that he was extended a fair opportunity to comment is outrageous as his attorney was only contacted 10 p.m. the night before Tuesday's meeting.

The preliminary report was also quick to exonerate but deficit in its reasoning. First, it was reasoned by the Chairman that DeLuca launched an inquiry only after DeLuca learned that the interim town manager spoke to the union president. I can tell you from over a decade of experience that an internal inquiry is launched the moment a Town Manager/Town Administrator contacts the community's chief law enforcement officer. In other words, the fuse was lit the Saturday of election day when Interim Town Manager Milanowski called DeLuca. A fact buttressed by former Chief Jim Hussey — who in addition to being Cohasset's former top cop headed the Internal Affairs Division of the Boston Police Department.

Secondly, while the fact that a Town Manager has the authority to speak directly to union personnel without involving either the chief or department head is technically legal, no seasoned town manager/administrator worth his salt would ever undercut the actions of a top manager except in the most extreme circumstances. The fact that the Interim Town Manager specifically asked the Town Attorney to point this out weakens the public's confidence in the objectivity of the inquiry and creates a question as to whether the one being investigated is actually leading the investigation.

The letters from both the Attorney General's Office and State Ethics Commission do not actually clear anyone. The Attorney General letter — typical in such matters — the criminal division leaves the issue to the local administrative authority while the State Ethics Commission bases its letter on a phone conversation that the circumstances of the matters are exactly the way the Interim Town Manager has portrayed them. In any investigation, there are always two sides of every story, conflicting statements as well as circumstances. So the reasoning that one could base exonerating the Interim Town Manager can be based upon these documents is also clearly erroneous.

DeLuca needs to be heard as he has direct knowledge of the events not hearsay as it was reasoned by another commentator nor can the magnitude of the issue be diminished like another tried to do. DeLuca's job and reputation are on the line as well as the integrity of the department. This is as serious as it gets. Finally, the fact that four of the five selectmen are ready to exonerate the Interim Town Manager before a final and complete report is rendered is also troubling as to their objectivity and fairness in the future.

As Hussey reminded the board on Tuesday the Cohasset Police Department suffered several years ago from ill conceived and biased investigations as to officers conduct in the past — ending up costing the town money while tarnishing the image of the police department as a whole. The Board of Selectmen would be wise to consider his advice.

CEF thanks volunteers, sponsors

The Cohasset Education Foundation would like to extend a heartfelt thank you to everyone who helped make the Family Fun Run a success! The Family Fun Run was held on Sunday, June 10th and attracted close to 375 participants and their families. It was a true community event and pulled in support from all corners of Cohasset. Thanks to all the sponsors and volunteers who helped make this happen. A good time was had by all and at the same time raised money for our public schools and Recreation Department.

In connection with the Family Fun Run, I would like to especially thank the following individuals:

The talented race committee, Ted Carroll, Beth Corry, Katie Dugan, Kelly Grech, Linda Fechter and Rebecca Synnestvedt, for going above and beyond in all your planning and execution efforts

• Puma for donating the cool tee shirts, water bottles and bags.

• B.Good, Del's and Nona's for providing delicious food

• The Rusty Skippers for giving our runners an unforgettable musical send-off

Jim Armstrong and the New City Cowboys and their fabulous music

Penniman Hill Farms for providing a petting zoo that was enjoyed by all

Sergeant Treanor and the Police Explorers for ensuring that we had a safe race

Mariposa Massage for giving our runners some relief at the finish

Pilgrim Bank and their very generous sponsorship

The Cohasset Rotary Club for lending us all of their race equipment

Andy Corry and the Girl and Boy Scouts for manning the water stations and making sure all our runners stayed hydrated

The High School Volunteer Club, High School Art Students and the High School Cheerleaders for putting on a fabulous fun fair

Mr. Kevin Dykas, the Osgood Physical Education teacher, for making exercise fun and exciting

The local businesses and individuals who supported the Family Fun Run — we couldn't do this without you

Race Course Sponsors include: Harbor Medical, Meadowcroft Camp, Mike Handrahan Builders, Rockland Trust, Rosano Davis and S. Shore Athletic Club. Race Bag Sponsors include: Cohasset Collision, Cohasset Sports Complex, Dean Harrold Painting, Health Express, Kluza Construction, Larsen Mortgage, Mathnasium, P.O.S.T. Therapy, and Steve Pinkus Electric.

Raffle donations and in-kind prizes provided by Rudolph Adamo Salon, Atlantic Bagel, The Body Studio, Dependable Cleaners, Outside In, Goodwin Graphics, Ivivva Athletica, Jodi James Salon, Marathon Sports, Ports and Strong Kids. There were also several Cohasset residents who personally donated to the event including the Allen, Alves, Campbell, Corry, Doherty, Dugan, McHugh, Smith, Wimberly and Witkos families

The CEF is also grateful for the help and generosity of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

The CEF was thrilled to see so many people come out for this event. With the support provided by all of you, the CEF raised enough funds to make a significant difference for our kids, our town and our future. Thank you!

ROWING ON THE FARM

Weeds want to grow, too

JON BELBER

I have been scratching and itching for almost an entire week. I do not own a goat, and though I wore gloves and know about leaving be, leaves of three, I contracted a healthy dose of poison ivy while working in my own yard. I was desperately trying to clear some space so I might walk out the side door to some veggies, instead of relying solely on the farmers and their cultivated fields at Holly Hill Farm. Though I bet there are a few means to eradicating poison ivy using a "weed killer," whose contents come in a bottle of synthetic fertilizer – and though poison ivy is painful – I will stick to organic methods for battling weeds.

As for the goat, it is a nifty practice at the farm to position them in accessible proximity to poison ivy. They have the stomachs to handle the oils and issues contained in poison ivy. The green and red leaves, the hairy vine are all healthy vegetation for goats.

Seeing as not everyone has access to a goat one must find better self-protecting ways. A gardener at the farm dons a plastic bag, with the gloves and long sleeves/pants, to reach for the roots, as one would observing the methods for curbing a dog. And as with any weed, the earlier one can identify it and pull it, the less likely one is to wrestle with the problem after a spring of sun, rain and rampant growth.

Weeds want to grow, whether you want them to or not. The organic farmer and gardener do not have the luxury of spraying chemicals and synthetic fertilizers. Though many commercials and garden advisors preach the ease of spraying for a "weed-free summer" or golfing on the "pristine grass links," it is not good practice for the affected water we consume or the food we eat. So the organic farmer and the committed gardener, who wish to tackle weeds, often do so by hand, with hard labor.

Giving your seeds and plants a healthy start is one advantage your plants can have over weeds that try to catch up and take over the flowers and crops you wish to grow. But very little beats getting in early and scratching out the weed seedlings as they begin to germinate. One needs to also feed your soil with organic compost, so that the tomatoes, lettuce and potatoes can grow strong and perhaps get established before weeds take hold. Going often to the garden bed will keep you busy, so that you can pull a few at a time.

One farmer also told me, after weeding for awhile, to look back and admire how happy those emerging carrots are and how delighted the zucchini are to not have to compete against the weeds. (Though there may still be a squash beetle to contend).

When the weeds are less prominent, the crops are more productive and there should be a greater yield.

From poison ivy to chick weed and quack grass to smart weed, it takes time, some scratching and perseverance. And you needn't be a goat to find that some weeds are even quite delightful, such as purslane, lamb's quarters and even fresh mint. I suppose a lot is about perspective and perfection. An organic grower must try for both, while keeping the environment clean and enjoying the fruits of hard work.

So keep at it, a little at a time, so it is not so overwhelming and if you don't get a goat, then don't let the weeds get your goat.

Jon Belber is a Scituate resident and the education director at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. He teaches students and adults about organic gardening and farming. His column appears twice monthly in the Mariner. He can be reached by email at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com. For information on upcoming programs at Holly Hill, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

FOR THE RECORD

Photographs can put us to the test

GREGORY MATHIS

Photographs of kids riding bicycles or skateboarding without helmets usually gets the newsroom phones ringing.

Five male high school graduates celebrate their milestone by lighting up a cigar.

A young girl rides her bike around the neighborhood without a helmet.

Likewise, a teenaged skateboarder is showing off his latest moves, again without a helmet.

A group of older teens cool off from the summer heat by leaping off a bridge that spans a local river.

A young couple enjoys a slow dance at the junior prom, but the moment captured may be a little too intimate.

A high school wrestler finds himself in an awkward position with an opponent.

A picture may be worth a thousand words, but photos like the ones described above can also create some real headaches for editors.

Shooting graduations can be very tricky. While most of the photo coverage is pretty standard – student and staff speeches, presentation of diplomas, classmates hugging, high-fiving, and lots of smiling – high school graduates can create some awkward moments. This year, as well as in year's past, we had editors debating whether to run photos of new graduates lighting up cigars following the ceremony. Maybe the former students are 18 or older and could actually legally smoke, but isn't it against the rules in most places to smoke on school property? If we print the photo are we condoning smoking and/or contributing to promoting an activity that is not allowed? If we don't print the photo are we just being prudish?

At least the recent example of the cigar smoking was something that was talked about before the photos ended up on the page of a newspaper or in an online photo gallery.

Oftentimes photos end up in print or online and the proper questions have not been asked prior to its publishing.

Photographs of kids riding bicycles or skateboarding without helmets usually gets the newsroom phones ringing. Of course there is a state law that requires a helmet for all riders 16 years old or younger, at all times, without exception. We seem to be getting better at not running these types of photos because of the outcry over the years and better bike safety education.

Publishing photographs of people jumping off small bridges into local waterways still trip us up on occasion. For the most part this is a fun activity for those participating and it makes for some terrific action photos. It's all fun and games until someone gets hurt and invariably someone always gets hurt. Readers have been very upset at us in the past for running photographs of this type of activity.

Photographing high school age kids comes with its set of challenges in many areas. In addition to the graduation photos that can make one cringe, prom photos can be tricky, as well as some high school sports such as wrestling and gymnastics. Who can predict what young people will do when they get out on a dance floor with their friends? Sometimes the best sports shots we see show young athletes in compromising positions.

We just need to be selective and mindful of what the consequences could be – either from the people in the picture or the reaction the picture might elicit from the public – regardless of whether it's a brilliant, award-winning photograph. Hopefully we are. If we're not, please let us know.

Gregory Mathis is editor-in-chief of GateHouse Media New England's South and Cape Cod units. He can be reached by email at gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

COMMENTARY

'Pierson to Person' -A Tribute to Wig

BOB BELLIVEAU

Wig Pierson and I worked together for 10 years on "Pierson to Person", and what a ride it was. As Wig's Executive Producer, I'd like to share with you some of our team history together.

In November of 1987, I had just started working for American Cable systems as the Cohasset Program Director in a small office right in the center of downtown Cohasset. I wasn't there for a week when Wigmore walked in and asked me how he could have his own TV talk show. I said to him: "Mr. Pierson: go round up some volunteers and let's get started"; he did. Jan Pierson, Carol Dean, and Harriet Partridge were Wig's first volunteers, and Carol and Harriet stayed there with us for 10 years until the very end in October 1997. So did about 100 other wonderful volunteer people who passed through our lives through the Cohasset/North Scituate studio doors. In his naming the program, he derived it from Edward R. Morrow's famed "Person to Person" program on CBS. Wig told me that he watched it many times in his early years with his parents. That led to his appropriate naming of the program as it was "Pierson to Person".

Wig knew that his age and graying hair, his speaking style with a little stutter once and a while, his distinct physical facial persona, and white Santa-Style beard, made him out as a harmless older-man caricature. In all our years together, he never let his ego get in the way of the program's content and how he was tasked to deliver the information to the TV audience. The warm and charming character Wig had, made him able to reach through the TV-tube glass into local viewers living rooms on Channel 3. He became a trusted, professional, polished TV broker of local civic information, and his persona exemplified that. As luck would have it, our program was located on the television channels right next to the big national network's channels, and flipping right there between WGBH-2 & WBZ-4, gave us a strong viewership on the Thursday night lineup.

We were polar opposite different in so many ways, but we both had the same passion in what we wanted to present into the public's living room TV on Ch-3/53. He was well versed in the political interview arena in many ways, but when he was out of his element, he was fun to watch. He was not afraid to try anything. Wig's real job as host was to present his moderating/interviewer abilities and let the viewer make their own judgments and observations about the discussion-because, as I told him each week for 10 years: "the camera never lies." He relied on me (and the all volunteer crew) to be his trusted right arm, and his alter ego while talking in his earpiece during a live show. As some cable TV talk stations use a slogon stating 'fair and balanced' we were long ahead of that line. In the early years, we grew into our roles synergistically about 'how' the show should look and come across to the public. My role was to teach Wig, and our volunteers, how to produce a program in the best professional way as possible-with no budget. Wig admittedly had no technical savvy, and he implicitly trusted the volunteer staff to make us all look good.

When we were done with the program at 9 p.m., we cleaned up the studio, and headed across the street to Jamie's Pub for Pizza and beers and discuss what television history we had just created.

In tribute to the immense success of the program, we had tremendous P/R assistance given to us from Rockland photographer Fred Robertson, and Patriot Ledger Executive Editor Bill Ketter, reporter Molly Hochkeppel (who is now Mrs. Wigmore Pierson), along with Mary Ford and Marilyn Jackson from the Mariner Newspapers, and many others. We were both so grateful for his secretary, Betty Joy, who gave us the printed schedules, fielded the business calls, and organized much of our programs' behind the scenes hard work for Wig at his office. I was personally lucky to have George Bearce and Peter Whitfield as go to guys for extra video camera work we may have needed for the show. They did a huge amount of work for Wig's program, and we deeply thank them. All of P2P's vast amounts of videotapes are housed in the basement of the Cohasset Public Library, with a 3/4" video deck for viewing them, as donated by Continental Cablevision to the success of the program.

If I may note some program highlights:

• Let me start here: Wig so screwed up the telephone for live calls because he had to control the phones on his desk on the set. Fat fingers, not-technical, saying to me live on the air: "Bobby: which button?" I'd have to run out of the control room on the set and show him which button to press. So many people got cut-off mid sentence...every time we had the phone on set, it was an 'uh-oh' on-the edge moment each time a call came in. We just laughed in the booth and clapped quietly every time a caller made it through. Wig had to buy the whole staff a round of beers at Jamie's Pub each time he screwed up a call...

• The Kennedy Library Presidential Exhibit opening. It was a 5-hour private tour with Michael Kennedy, which we videotaped with Wig and Mike the day before it opened. We edited it into our 1-hour tribute to President Kennedy, which we ran repeatedly each year on the anniversary of his passing. Wig and I were also invited to the grand opening the following day when President Clinton was there.

• The Greenbush Railroad Debates: there were three, separate 2-hour prime time shows, presented live on Sunday nights to the 6-town viewing area with live audience, politicians, and phone call ins. It was awesome theater.

• The 1058th Hingham National Guard: a co-production of WBBH TV in Springfield and us, with live roll-ins from the 1058th Soldiers in Iraq. Parents of these soldiers were invited in a large studio audience; we surprised them with the video of their sons telling them hello on tape. Emotional TV.

• The tour of the Auschwitz Concentration Camp in Germany by Massachusetts Attorney General, and Cohasset Resident, Marek Lass was a defining moment of poignancy for the program. Marek and I edited the videotape roll-in from his video footage he shot while there at Auschwitz with the MA delegation from the Boston Holocaust Museum. We told Wig that he was not going to see our edited videotape until this ran live on-air with him watching for his reaction. Wig was inconsolably moved to tears during and after the program, so was all of our crew during it's broadcast.

• The sold-out two-hour benefit we had for the Jimmy Fund at SHS with the Jimmy Fund Singers and Ken Coleman as Master of Ceremonies-live. We raised over $3000 that night for the Jimmy Fund.

• Wigmore, with Famed Cohasset Lobsterman Herb Jason, his daughter Heather Dauphenee, and myself, went with the Scituate US Coastguard Staff, inside Minot Lighthouse for a tour.

• The 10 years of exciting, entertaining, vivacious, impeccably hosted annual television circus event of every Cohasset town meeting-live, even from the So. Shore Music Circus Tent. Note: AND All of the live coverage of Cohasset election results and announcements from Cohasset town hall-all of them throughout the years.

• Music shows: Jazz Saxophonist extraordinaire Sparkly Meile had a PO Box in the NO Scituate post office, located directly next to my office. Sparky holds the record for most appearances at 7 times.

• MA Senate President William Bulger as a guest (twice), and once as a substitute host for Wig... Someone once asked us: "how in the name on St. Ignatius did 'Wiggy' get Senate President Billy Bulger down to Scituate, not once-but 3 times: and once as a host?" (As a noted true response here, the Senate President himself said to us: "It's the Irish Riviera, I have relatives there.")

• Our trip in 1989 to Washington DC as invited media guests to the US State Department was just awe-inspiring. There we were-The Brokaw and Cronkite of Continental Cablevision in Scituate, standing in the quadrangle inside the White house grounds, with all the video gear I brought down, doing stand-ups, promos, and commercials for the P2P show. It was a wow moment for both of us.

We had raised the bar in local access programming throughout the entire South Shore, with some notable points:

• 10 years of phenomenal television programming — 400 shows produced

• Inside its pages, photos of Wig and his guests on the set of P2P, and articles

• Numerous articles and photos from the Cohasset and Scituate Mariners, • Cartoons of Wig's show by the renowned cartoonist Jim Hamilton for the Mariner.

• P2P was at its peak in 1996 on various cable channels in 38 towns from Quincy to the Cape Cod Canal weekly.

• We received gigantic awards from the highest levels of Massachusetts government officials, town governments, and extensive cable TV awards both locally and nationally.

• At one point, we both approached the new startup NECN (New England Cable News) and gave them a demo reel and a pitch stating that here is a ready-made program set to go; they said no...too bad.

In the late spring of 1997, Wig called me to come over to his house for dinner. In the middle of dinner, he calmly said to me that he needed to end the program at the end of our season in October. The weekly commitment of time he spent on the program lining up guests and preparing for the program was substantial, and he needed a change. It was a very emotional decision for him to want to sign-off after all we achieved. Wig was very close to his children, and he realized that he needed to spend as much time with them as possible now that they were coming into teenage years.

Understanding his rationale, we then proceeded to plan our graceful exit out Cable TV land with a bang. We went through lots of memories, looked at old guest lists to jar some more memories, and then went to the P2P video archive closet to review what good line or comment we could use as roll-ins for the final show review. We also made a good blooper reel for some laughs, too. In the end, we went out with local style and class, and had a great party, too. It was also tough for me to let the show go, as we were just on the new technical threshold of technological innovation with the coming of digital internet broadcasting transition, websites, and Facebook. We could have gone much further, but the timing was right for all to end. We did a lot for local cable, for the community, and for our own sense of accomplishment and personal enjoyment.

My relationship with him has been inspirational, insightful, and with lasting admiration. Wig was my friend and TV partner. 13 years later, I still miss Thursdays with Wig and the great crew, and have deeply cherished the long lasting education I received from the program.

As Wig said ending the program each week:

"I'm Wigmore Pierson, and I thank you for watching. We'll see you again next week for another edition of Pierson to Person. Thank you, and Good Night." Fade to black.

TRIATHLON

to cross the finish line because Joe didn't get to," said Karen. "It's an accomplishment, something he can do for his dad."

As a runner, Sam has managed to raise a lot of money for the cause; Karen shared that as of Tuesday morning, her son was the number one individual fundraiser on the Cohasset Triathlon's website.

"Things like that are really meaningful," she said. "Joe was out there because Sam has diabetes. It wasn't just a race to him; he was fundraising. For Team Lyons, our story was to finish what he started, to continue raising awareness for diabetes."

The Cohasset Triathlon donates its net proceeds to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), the world's leading charitable funder and advocate of Type 1 diabetes research.

Running in a triathlon is a challenge enough for any athlete, especially for one so young. The Cohasset Triathlon sees between 800 and 900 athletes descending upon the town, swimming at Sandy Beach, winding through a challenging bike trail and running along the waterfront on Jerusalem Road. The event itself would be daunting to anyone trying it for the first time. On top of that, Sam is tasked with monitoring his blood sugar throughout his run.

But the 12-year-old, who turns 13 in August, is looking forward to it.

"I feel very excited that I will have a chance to see what the run is like, to feel the excitement and adrenaline," said Sam. "I've heard a lot about it from my mom."

Sam added that he's glad it's something they can do together. "I'm happy she can be there for my first triathlon and see how far I've made it... She's been there every step of the way in my life and will be there at the tri, helping me make it through."

Karen shared that for her and Sam, diabetes has been a major hurdle for both triathlon training and daily life, but nothing that they can't handle.

"It's every day, every moment," Karen explained. "First thing in the morning, he has to check his blood sugar... he has to measure out his food and estimate how many carbohydrates are in everything he eats... Everything he does that involves his body requires planning and thought; what works for him on a training run one day doesn't work the next day, and we have to figure out why. It's a constant puzzle and aim, and a lot to put on a kid.

"He's had it since he was two years old," Karen continued. "It's a lot to ask of anybody, but for a kid who, on top of that, loses his dad in the midst of it... He's doing great. I'm so impressed with him."

As a runner, Sam has managed to raise a lot of money for the cause; Karen shared that as of Tuesday morning, her son was the number one individual fundraiser on the Cohasset Triathlon's website.

For Sam, running with diabetes has "definitely been a roadblock." While the rigors of training have sometimes slowed him down, they haven't stopped Sam for wanting to compete. He explained that, even when he's had to take a breather after his blood sugar has dropped, he just waits a little while and runs again. Sam's found inspiration in a fellow diabetic who happens to be an Olympic triathlete, who is also racing in Sunday's event.

"Gary Hall. Jr., who's doing the full race for the first time [this year], said, 'Don't let diabetes slow you down.' That's a meaningful quote to me, because I don't want to let diabetes control me," said Sam. "If I put my mind to it, I can beat it."

This is one family who won't let a diagnosis keep them for doing what they love.

"We're a crazy family," Sam said by way of summary.

For Karen, it's about leading by example with a healthy lifestyle. "We're a pretty active family," she said. "We're not really sedentary."

Sam said he doesn't think anyone should "live in your house your whole life and never get out there.

"You have to get out there and take some risks," the young runner said. "It's good for people to get out of their comfort zone once in a while. You learn a lot about yourself— you learn that you can do a lot more than you thought you could when you set your mind to it."

Training for the race has been a family affair. Karen and Sam have been practicing their runs on the hills of San Francisco. Joining in the training— Sam's stepfather, Dan Latta, who will race in all three portions of the race with Karen. It's his first time doing a triathlon – ever – said Sam.

"I'm very proud of him," the young runner said of his stepdad. "I know he's there to support me and am very grateful he's here. After my dad left, it's been great to have a father figure in my life. I hope anyone who's lost a mom or dad can get to love someone else."

This will be Karen's fifth triathlon in Cohasset. A former yoga instructor, she didn't begin competing in triathlons until after Joe died. Karen said that she was compelled to run the race after Joe didn't get to finish.

"I felt like I had to," she explained. "It's been a really good vehicle for healing... definitely a healing experience for me and for Sam as well."

Seeing his mom pull it together after losing Joe in such a tragic way made a lasting impression on Sam.

"After my dad died, I was very traumatized," he said. "But it was inspiring to see her overcome her fears."

For Karen, this included a fear of the ocean. The Los Angeles native said that she grew up swimming in pools, but avoided the sea due to a fear of sharks. Like her son, however, the triathlete isn't afraid to take a few risks.

"I probably have a different perspective on how to approach life now because of what happened," Karen explained. "It's liberating. I believe things happen when they're going to happen... accidents happen anywhere in life, at any age or any time. That's why I swim with sharks now— I don't want to let that fear stop me from moving forward."

It's also important for Karen to let people – and her son – know that Joe didn't die in vain and that he "wasn't doing anything reckless or dangerous." She doesn't blame the race for taking her husband's life; for Karen, the opposite is true.

"It saved me," she said of the triathlon. "I don't know what I would have done if I wasn't doing that."

The triathlon "is just part of our life now," said Sam. "Even though we moved to California, we're always going to fly back and do this race, because it's our thing, our life. I hope we'll always have Team Lyons to race with us."

The Cohasset Triathlon's organizer, Bill Burnett, said that the mother and son duo are integral to the event.

"Karen and Sam will always be an important part of the Cohasset Triathlon," Burnett said in an email. "It is because of their strength that Joe's spirit lives on through all of the family and friends who continue to race to this day for Team Lyons. I never met Joe, but I am told he had endless energy and an incredible personality. I bet he'll be looking down on Sunday with a proud smile as Karen, Sam, and countless friends race for Team Lyons."

Karen had nothing but praise to share over Bill's work with the triathlon and how he's helped her family cope with losing Joe.

"Bill's been amazing... he's made it as easy as can be," said Karen. Being part of the Cohasset triathlon and forming Team Lyons "has created a huge community of people who wouldn't otherwise be friends," she continued. "It's a great legacy for Joe."

Another legacy Karen hopes will inspire her son and other children with juvenile diabetes: you don't have to be "an elite athlete" to race.

"Unfortunately, the disease is becoming more and more prevalent, but there are a lot of famous people out there" who have diabetes, Karen explained. "Not every kid can be a quarterback in the NFL... but they can be a triathlete. It's nice to have that example."

Sam hopes that, for his part, he will set an example for his peers: "I hope I inspired other kids to do this triathlon, 'cause it's very fun and very cool." He's succeeded in getting a few of his friends to join him; on triathlon day, two of Sam's friends will help him complete the race. Doing the swim portion of the race is Sam's best friend since kindergarten, Jack Sinclair; Becca Hooker, a friend of Sam's since third grade, will do the bike ride.

"We're very close," Sam said of his friends. "It's like doing the race with family. I couldn't have asked for anyone better to do my first tri with."

Mother and son are back in Mass. this week, visiting with family members and doing a trial run of the race before Sunday's big event. Returning this year is a touching way to pay tribute, one week after Father's Day, to the man Sam lost at an early age, but who had made a lasting impact on his young life.

"I hope if my dad is out there somewhere, he'll watch me and run beside me," said Sam.

The Cohasset Triathlon

What: Sixth annual Cohasset Triathlon
Where: Swim at Sandy Beach; 12-mile bike ride along Atlantic Ave. to North Scituate and back through Cohasset common, then back to Sandy Beach; 3.2-mile run on Jerusalem Rd. looping around Little Harbor.
When: Sunday, June 24, from 8 a.m. to approximately 10:30 a.m.
Why: To raise funds and awareness for Type 1 juvenile diabetes
Who: Over 850 racers, including Senator Scott Brown and Olympian Gary Hall, Jr.
Fun fact: This year's race sold out in a record 40 minutes, the fastest for the Cohasset Triathlon; it also broke the national record for the fastest sellout of any sprint-distance triathlon

TM contract called into question

May not have been ratified in open session

by Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Following up on her request last week for the Board of Selectmen to issue a Town Manager RFP (request for proposals) to search for a "qualified town manager," Selectman Martha Gjesteby is now calling the Acting Town Manager's employment contract into question.

Gjesteby, who was elected this spring unseating then chairman Ted Carr, raised a question on the current contract for Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski — whether his contract was ratified in open session.

If not, Gjesteby pointed out, Milanoski "never had a [legal] contract."

The Mariner had also previously raised the question to selectmen chair Paul Carlson, who said he would have to consult the minutes from the meeting during which Milanoski's contract was approved.

Cohasset resident Michael Milanoski, an economic development consultant, has been serving as acting town manager since February, after the board suspended then-town manager Michael Coughlin. Following Coughlin's removal without cause in March, Milanoski was appointed interim town manager and will serve in this role until June 30, 2013.

Milanoski was an unpaid volunteer during his first two weeks as town manager; after that, the selectmen voted to keep him of for another month, during which he received a weekly stipend of $2,000. On March 20, the selectmen voted to extend him as interim for another 15 months; according to his contract, he is being paid a salary of $112,500 for the remainder of the current fiscal year (which ends June 30, 2012) and will receive $132,500 for fiscal year 2013. During that March 20 meeting, the selectmen stated that they would discuss Milanoski's salary during executive session, per Town Counsel's recommendation.

Milanoski's contract was signed by the selectmen on April 3 during an executive session under exemptions 2 and 3 for the purpose of collective bargaining. According to the meeting minutes, the board came out of executive only for purposes of adjournment; that meeting was adjourned at 11:44 p.m. Judging from the minutes, Milanoski's contract was not discussed publicly at that time.

Gjesteby pointed this out to her fellow board members Tuesday night: "You never came out [of executive session] and voted it," she said. Milanoski responded that his contract was voted on in open session during "the following meeting."

The selectmen convened the following week on April 10, but according to those minutes, the town manager contract was not discussed, at least not in open session. That meeting also included an executive session at the end under exemptions 2, 3 and 6.

If the town manager contract was not, in fact, ratified publicly, the board could have violated the state's Open Meeting Law. According to the Attorney General's Open Meeting Law Guide, "while a public body may negotiate with nonunion personnel or conduct a collective bargaining session with a union in executive session, and may even agree on final contract terms in executive session, the public body must vote to approve or ratify any contract or collective bargaining agreement in open session before it can take effect."

According to the Attorney General's office, individuals who allege a violation of the OML against a public body must file a complaint within 30 days of the alleged violation or within 30 days the complainant could reasonably have known about the violation. The public body alleged to be in violation then has 14 business days from the date the complaint is received to review the allegations, take remedial action if appropriate, notify the complainant of the action, and forward a copy of the complaint and description of the action take to the AG's office.

If the board's meeting minutes do not reflect that the contract was, in fact, ratified in open session, the selectmen could review the meeting's recording and correct the minutes, if necessary.

Carlson said in a phone call that he plans to ask Milanoski to look into the matter further, and hopes to resolve the issue.

The selectmen and Milanoski have been sticklers when it comes to the legality of contracts. Shortly after Milanoski came on board as acting town manager, he reported to the board that several town employee contracts were "not done properly" and had undergone contractual changes authorized by former town manager Michael Coughlin, who was removed without cause in March. These changes, including salary increases up to 21 percent, were not reported to the selectmen or properly vetted, Milanoski said. These contracts, some of which were signed by Coughlin only a few weeks before his suspension "were not done according to protocol," Milanoski told the selectmen during their March 13 meeting. The selectmen voted that night to reject 10 employee contracts.

stayed on course and dealt with the allegations on Milanoski."

However, staying on course was not an easy task for Carlson, who had to use his gavel and interrupt several out-of-turn public comments; nor was it easy for the rest of the selectmen, some of whom wanted to exonerate Milanoski from the allegations then and there.

"This is crazy," selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy said of the situation she and her fellow board members found themselves in. "We're caught between a rock and a hard place in a lot of ways."

The investigation on Milanoski began shortly after DeLuca was placed on leave. The selectmen received the chief's letter alleging Milanoski had interfered with "an open investigation." During their Tuesday, May 29 meeting, the selectmen were discussing DeLuca's suspension during Milanoski's town manager update as a "personnel update." Former selectman Karen Quigley, who was in the audience, asked the board whether they had received any correspondence from the chief; Carlson then read a letter from DeLuca into the record. In it, DeLuca wrote that he believed that certain "actions that town manager Milanoski took... could possibly lead to ethical, civil, or criminal sanctions."

It was later reported that Milanoski had contacted police union president Patrick Reardon on Monday, May 21, two days after an incident during the May 19 Town Election, when Sgt. Jeffrey Treanor parked the police department's Humvee on the town common the night before election day. He had affixed a banner protesting the town manager's comments at the May 12 Town Meeting, during which Milanoski told voters that once the police department's dispatch moves to the regionalized dispatch center in Hingham this summer, the police station will go dark; staffing it 24/7 is not in the town budget, Milanoski explained. Treanor's banner read: "Keep the police station open. Tell the Board of Selectmen to keep 'your' police station open 24/7. It's the safe thing to do. A message from the Cohasset Police Association."

According to Sjoberg's report, Milanoski called DeLuca on Saturday morning and asked him to have Treanor remove the Humvee; Treanor complied, driving the vehicle back to the police station and returning for his shift at Town Hall in another police car. Treanor reported that he was approached by Milanoski at Town Hall; Treanor apologized and said he had acted alone. Officer Reardon said that DeLuca asked him if the union had anything to do with the banner, but Reardon stated that he had no previous knowledge of Treanor's intentions. DeLuca ordered Treanor to write a to/from report, which Treanor did later that day.

Milanoski reportedly called Reardon to discuss several union business issues two days after the banner incident. The following day, May 22, Milanoski sent an email to Town Counsel Paul DeRensis stating his intention "to extend both chiefs' positions for another three years" and asking for a standard employment contract for each. Milanoski provided the Mariner a copy of this email.

When it comes to the town manager's actions regarding both DeLuca and the union, the question the selectmen were trying to answer Tuesday night was twofold: When Milanoski contacted the police union's president, was an internal investigation in the police department currently underway? And if so, when did the investigation start?

The selectman chair pointed out that DeLuca was not in attendance at Tuesday's meeting. Town Counsel Peter Berry said that he contacted DeLuca's newly attained lawyer, Edward J. McNeeley, on Monday night to ask if DeLuca would like to be interviewed. According to Berry, McNeeley responded Tuesday morning, stating that he and his client were not given enough notice, and also saying that DeLuca would not be available until next week.

DeLuca's absence was "his choice," said Carlson. "But he is not the subject of this meeting."

A few audience members apparently begged to differ, including former Cohasset chief Hussey. Hussey and DeLuca worked together in the Boston PD years ago, and when Hussey stepped down in late 2009, he recommended DeLuca for the job. Hussey spoke up to clarify a few things when it came to DeLuca's actions regarding Treanor and the banner incident.

After retired Lawrence police chief Bob Hayden, a friend of DeLuca's, spoke up to protest the late hour contacting of DeLuca's attorney, Carlson told him the comment was not relevant to the meeting's discussion. He also brought up the issue that the matter involving Treanor could be a criminal investigation depending on whether or not the Humvee was registered.

Kennedy responded, "What's relevant now is whether our town manager interfered with an investigation. If this timeline is accurate, and we have to assume it is, the criminal investigation got started well after whatever the phone call with Patrick Reardon was."

Here, Hussey attempted to clarify what a criminal investigation was. The report on the banner incident, Hussey, said, was "an administrative charge." The investigation, Hussey continued, was an internal affairs investigation, not a criminal one.

This led to a debate on who was the complainant in the banner investigation: DeLuca or Milanoski. The selectmen, and Sjoberg's report, suggested it was DeLuca, since he ordered Treanor to write a to/from report; Hussey, meanwhile, said that Milanoski was the complainant since he was the one who called DeLuca to report the banner incident.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said that in her eyes, Sjoberg's report was incomplete without DeLuca's side of the story. Carlson and Kennedy both stated that DeLuca's complaint was clearly stated in his letter to the selectmen, and that was enough for the investigation.

When it came time to vote, however, things were still confusing. The selectmen ultimately voted 3-2 to wait on deciding whether or not Milanoski had in fact interfered with an open investigation; however, Kennedy also made a motion for the board to support the town manager they appointed.

"I think we as the board of selectmen need to say that we have faith in the job he's doing," said Kennedy."

Carlson, Kennedy, and selectman Fred Koed voted in support of the motion; Gjesteby and selectman Leland Jenkins were the two dissenting votes. Gjesteby voted "nay" to unofficially exonerate Milanoski for the time being, while Jenkins was against interviewing the chief.

DeLuca will be invited to come before the selectmen next week, though the meeting's date and time has yet to be set as of press time. "We want to be careful," Kennedy concluded during the meeting. "The investigation of the chief is ongoing – and by god, it'd better be done right – with everyone involved getting interviewed... we want [DeLuca] to be part of the process."

Swim lessons will be offered in four two-week sessions: Session I: June 25 – July 6, Session II: July 9 – July 20, Session III: July 23 – August 3, Session IV: August 6 – August 17.

For those who miss the June 15 swim lesson online registration deadline, walk-in registration for swim lessons will be available at the front desk on weekends.

Once the CSC opens full-time for the season, members and non-members can sign-up anytime at the front desk for any one of the four, two-week sessions on a first come, first service.

A new look

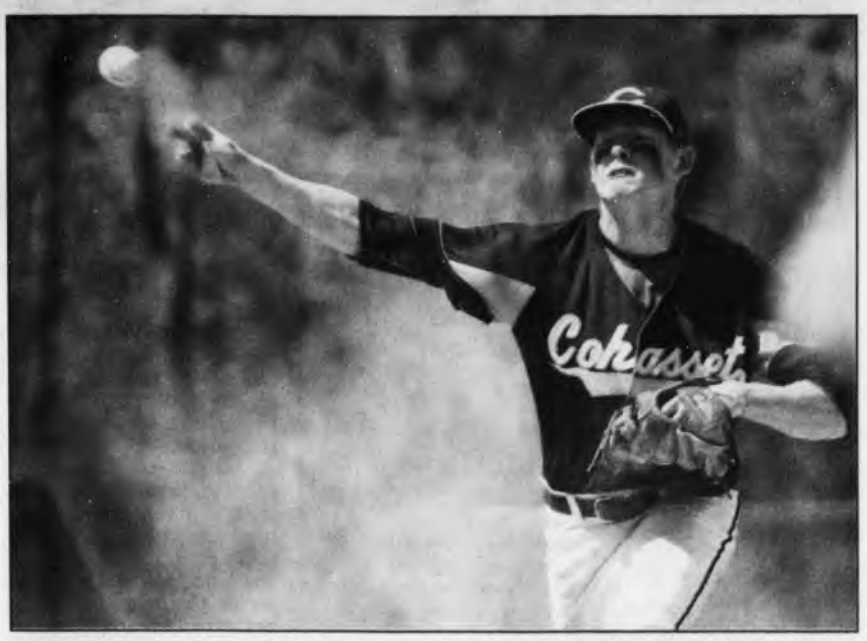
Post 118 starts Junior League team

The Scituate Mariner

There's a new-look baseball team in Cohasset and Scituate and so far things have been going well.

Cohasset Post George H. Mealy Post 118 started a Junior League American Legion team this season.

The Junior League team is coached by Cohasset assistant varsity coach Darin Sousa and managed by long time Cohasset youth baseball coach John Cavanaro and under the supervision of long-time general manager Scott Arnold.



"We hope for good things to come," said Arnold.

Arnold said the senior team has played well from the start, something the team has struggled with the past few seasons as key players were still battling in the MIAA Tournament.

This season, Cohasset fell in an early round and Scituate missed the tournament, leaving players free to join the Legion quicker.

The Senior team opened their season with a tough

Cohasset's Davis wins State Title

By William Wassersug

Cohasset freshman Emma Davis has been playing tennis for a long time.

Through the years she has played in tournaments all over the country and has done very well with the sport.

This spring was a little different though.

Davis chose to join the Cohasset High School girls tennis team.

It was a good fit for both Davis and the team.

As a team, Cohasset won the Division 3 South Sectional Championship and fought the good fight in the State Semifinal, where they were edged 3-2 by Bedford.

Individually, Davis matched the feat, winning the MIAA Individual South Sectional Tournament in May.

She followed that title with a State Championship last weekend in Shrewsbury.

Davis was thrilled with winning the State Title for more than one reason.

"It was awesome," Davis said of the finals. "I was a little nervous in the finals, but I had a lot of my team and parents all cheering me on. Going in I didn't know what to expect. It was pretty cool."

Having her teammates cheering her on was a special feeling, but knowing the makeup of this team and coaches, it was easy to see why.

While Davis has tremendous skills and talent on the court, when she was with the team, she was just that – a member of the team.

"I knew a bunch of players," Davis said. My brother (Chris) is a junior and he had friends on the team. When I was little I used to play basketball and soccer. I missed being part of a team. It was something I really wanted to do. It was the right decision. It was fun."

Davis finished the season undefeated at No. 1, and was always there to cheer her teammates on if her matches ended first. The team was there for her as well when there were battles. As for being a leader, she deferred that to her captains.

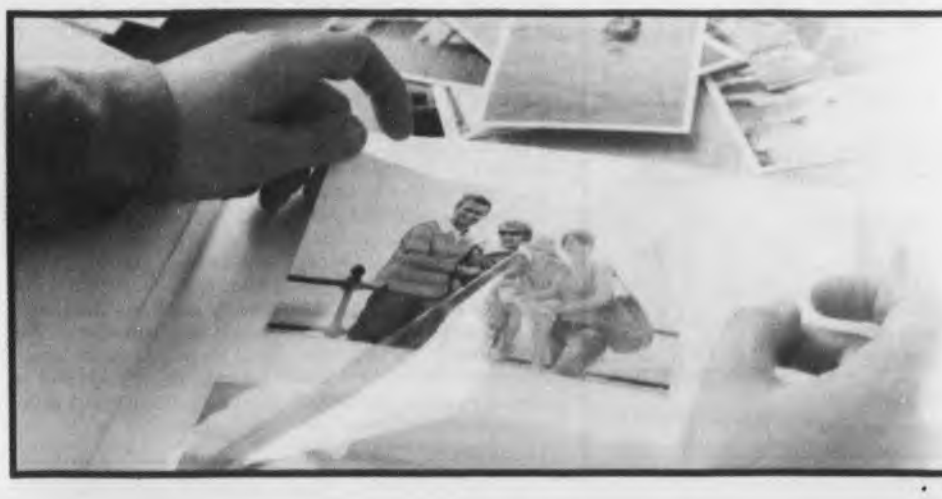
Locals lead Rox in victory

McCunney's six RBI power Rox

Cohasset's Rob McCunney, (Fordham) went 4-for-4 with a homer, six RBI, and two runs scored to lead the Brockton Rox past the Torrington Titans, 12-4, on Sunday afternoon at Campanelli Stadium.

Brockton (3-6) took an early lead in the bottom of the second after East Bridgewater's Greg Baggett (Bentley) led off the frame by reaching on an error. With Baggett on second, McCunney stepped in and ripped a single for the first of his six RBI to put the Rox up, 1-0.

After Scituate's Jordan Berry (George Washington) reached on a fielder's choice, Joe Gallub (Concordia) followed with a single to put runners on first and second. That's when Hull's Jeff Cavanaro (UMass Amherst) smacked his first hit of the season into left field to score Berry and give the Rox a 2-0 lead.



After Baggett launched a two-out double into the left center field gap in the third inning, McCunney came through with another RBI single to make it a 3-0 lead.

Trailing by a run heading into the bottom of the seventh, the Rox stormed back with a two-out rally for the ages. Mike Lupia (Indiana University of Pennsylvania) spearheaded the attack with a

Khang will have a busy summer

Meghan Khang, 14, of Rockland, fashioned a 3-over par 75 last week at Foxboro Country Club to earn medalist honors and qualify for the U.S. Girls' Amateur Champion, which will be played July 16-21 at Lake Merced Golf Club in Daly City, Calif. It is right across the lake from the Olympic Club, site of last week's U.S. Open. Playing in the Junior Amateur is old hat for Khang. She has qualified for the past four US Girls' Juniors, making match play each of the last two years.

Isabel Southard of Sharon also qualified for the US Girls' Junior Amateur at Foxboro.

It will be a busy summer for the Rockland High School sophomore-to-be. She also qualified for this week's US Women's Amateur Public Links in Neshanic Station, N.J., and will make her debut in the US Women's Open July 5-8 at Blackwolf Run in Kohler, Wis.

She already has done well this summer, finishing second in a playoff for the Mass Women's Open Championship two weeks ago at Mount Pleasant in West Boylston and the week before that she played hooky from classes and won the Connecticut Women's State Open, fashioning a two-round 1-under 143 at Clinton Country Club, two strokes better than her nearest competitor.

The first of seven days of qualifying for the 104th Massachusetts Amateur Championship was held last week at The Captains Golf Course in Brewster. A total of 13 qualifiers advanced at that site. Those competitors have now earned the right to compete at Championship Proper scheduled for July 9-13 at Tedesco Country Club.

Headlining today's first day of qualifying were a trio who carded medalist scores of 1-over par 73. Capturing a share of that top spot were Christopher Tarallo of Thorny Lea, Steve Shiner of Blackstone GC and Barry Higham of the Country Club of New Bedford. Tarallo, who advanced to match play at the 2011 Massachusetts Amateur Championship, played 1-under par golf through his final 11 holes to card a 1-over par 73. Also qualifying was a local veteran of amateur golf championships, Joe Keller, who now plays out of Oyster Harbors on Cape Cod, but for many years was a member at Wollaston. He proved that he is still up for even the greatest of tests as he carded a 3-over par 75 to capture one of the final qualifying spots. Keller is a local legend. He was the 1993 Richard D. Haskell MGA Player of the Year, 2008 George M. Cohen MGA Senior Player of the Year and won six MGA Championship titles over the course of his career. He also won the 2008 New England Senior Amateur Championship.

Other locals who qualified included John Gratton of Dedham C&PC, Colin Andrade of Lebaron Hills and Andy Falcone of Marshfield.

There was also a State Am qualifier at Glen Ellen in Millis. Patrick O'Leary of Wollaston, Justin Wilson of Thorny Lea, Matt Montt of the Harmon Club, and Christopher R. Melvin of Walpole CC won berths at Tedesco.

One local golfer who does not need to qualify is defending champion Ryan Riley of Easton. He will be in the field along with fellow Easton residents and former champions John Hadges and Billy Drohen.

At Hatherly Golf Club last week during Ladies Day, Annette Walsh was the winner with a 72. The women's association also held its Grandmothers Tournament, a net event as well. Maureen Allman came in first with a 68. Jane Welch was second with a 69, Julie Maguire was third with a 70. Chris Hotarack was fourth with a 71.

Plymouth Junior Golf Tour: The Plymouth Junior Golf Association has put together a Junior Summer Golf Tour for boys and girls who are Plymouth residents, under the direction of David Moore, head pro at Squirrel Run GC; Don Daley, head pro at Atlantic CC; and Paul Anderson, head ranger at Squirrel Run.

The tour will consist of age groups 15-17, 13-14, 11-12, and a one-hour clinic for ages 10-and-under, and starts with a mandatory rules clinic for all at Squirrel Run on June 30. The first event will be on July 12 at Squirrel Run, followed by Southers Marsh GC (July 19), Atlantic (July 26), Village Links (Aug. 2), Crosswinds GC (Aug. 9), and Waverly Oaks GC (Aug. 16).

Registration fee is $20 and includes a bag tag and rules book. Applications are available at www.squirrelrungolf.com, or can be obtained at both, Squirrel Run and Atlantic golf clubs. The tournament fee is $20 for 15-17-year-olds (18 holes), $15 for the other nine-hole age groups, and $5 for the clinic. Events begin at 1 p.m. and it is pay as you play.

At an NEPGA Pro-Am event at Thorny Lea last week, Brian Spitz of Golf Town in Avon fired a 1-under-par 69 to defeat a field of 41 professionals and combined with his team of amateurs – Frank Sacco, Rick Greene, and David Navick – for the overall win at 11-under 129. The Thorny Lea team of head professional Peter Norton and amateurs John Hadges, Dick Ellis, and Jim McCabe tied for fifth at 8-under 132.

Two veteran golfers, Paul Luizzi and Tom Durdan, both of Easton, who spend more time playing cards than golf at Thorny Lea and two of the worst hackers at the club, used their high handicaps successfully to become the overall winners of last week's two-day Stone Cup at Thorny Lea with 28.5 points.

Round of applause to long-time Brockton Country Club member W.P. Kelley, who beat his age by one stroke last week after firing an even-par 72 at his home club,

TALKIN' GOLF

Let's tea it up and play a quick nine holes

PAUL HARBER

There are 18 holes to a round of golf, but I don't have four hours to spare. So let's play a quick nine. Here are nine idle thoughts while watching the U.S. Open in prime time.

No. 1: Open is NASCAR on turf

The U.S. Open is goofy golf. It's NASCAR on turf. You're not watching to see who is the greatest golfer. You are waiting for that god-awful crash, where a leader goes tumbling down the leaderboard, which happened time and time again this weekend. If you want to see a great tournament, take the Masters. Nothing is close. The U.S. Open is simply cruel. It rewards acts of caution instead of heroic performances.

No. 2: Charity for all

We love charity tournaments. It's a painless way to give money to deserving charities. But there are two types of charity tournaments I hope disappear. One is where you pay a healthy entry fee and it's a scramble tournament with two groups of golfers on every tee. That's 36 foursomes. Then you find out there are only two gross prizes for the tournament. C'mom man! Give the golfers something to play for. The other charity tournament is exactly opposite. You get a goody bag full of golf paraphernalia that's worth more than your entry feet and they also offer a big breakfast before the tournament and a huge dinner afterward. And the prizes? They are worth hundreds of dollars. Those are too excessive and little more goes to the charities. You gotta find the middle ground.

No. 3: Give me Czervik

Golf isn't about where you play or what you shoot. Neither really matters in the long run. It's the company you keep. If I look back at the thousands of rounds I've played over the last 30 years, that's what I remember. There is nothing better than a good foursome. It doesn't always happen. Years ago during the opening day tournament at Widow's Walk in Scituate, we were paired with some guy I hope I never see again. By the second hole, he was seething because I thought it was funny and no big deal when Bill Parcells called one of his players, "she." Furthermore, it only got worse the more we played. To him, political correctness was more important than enjoying a nice day. Give me Al Czervik and you can have the Judge Smails.

No. 4: Chip's moment to shine

It was so great seeing the 17-year-old high school youngster on top of the U.S. Open leaderboard. That's fun to watch, but you know it never lasts. I remember in 1988, a young assistant professional from the South Shore made it through all the qualifiers and played in the Open at The Country Club in Brookline. His brother, who many thought was a better golfer, caddied for him. And on Friday, something crazy happened. You looked up at the leaderboard and there was Chip Johnson, yes, the Chip Johnson who is the head professional at Hatherly Country Club in Scituate. He was on national TV as the unknown golfer on the leader. If he could have stayed healthy, Johnson might have made it on Tour. His dream ended at qualifying school a year later. He was on his way to the golden fairways of the PGA Tour. But his back went out and he had to withdraw. The back was so bad his late father, Ken Johnson, one of the all-time good guys, had to drive the van back to Boston with Chip lying down on the van's floor.

No. 5: Come a long way

The results of the Girls Individual Golf State Championship held June 5 at the Bay Club in Mattapoisett put a smile on my face. Not just because a local girl, Isabel Southard of Sharon, won the event or that Scituate High's Mary Mulcahy was second. What was nice to see was the number of girls who broke 100. I remember covering an event like this in the early 1980s when Pippy O'Connor held one at Woodland GC. Only two or three young women broke 100. At the Bay Club, there were 36 who broke 100.

No. 6: Shameless

For those who wanted to know, it was Wollaston Golf Club where Clay Buchholz and Josh Beckett went to play golf when Beckett was told to rest up. Word is they played 27 holes. For young guys like they are, that's OK with me. What isn't OK is three days later when the Sox had the 17-inning game against Baltimore, Beckett didn't volunteer to pitch. Shameless. I don't care how well he pitches the remainder of the season. He has a seriously flawed character. Buchholz, unfortunately, is cut from the same cloth. He was asked to pitch on Sunday night against the Cubs and declined. For all the money they are being paid, it is difficult to root for these players.

No. 7: Texas yarn

We will miss a familiar face this summer on the local golf scene, Mike Calef, who worked and played out of Brockton Country Club and Thorny Lea Golf Club while growing up in the region. He won several local tournaments, gave the minitour a whirl, before becoming a reinstated amateur. Last summer, in his final Massachusetts Golf Association event, the State Mid-Amateur at Pocasset CC, he earned his only MGA championship. Afterward, he moved to Texas because of a work opportunity for his wife, Alicia. Folks in Texas are finding out about his golf talents pretty quickly. This spring in Irving, he won the Texas Golf Association's North Mid-Amateur Championship at Old American Golf Club. Calef claimed a four-shot victory and his first TGA championship with rounds of 70-68-72. He was the only player under par for the week. More recently he finished fourth in the 103rd Texas Amateur Championship last Sunday. However, a 7-under par 206 was secondary. Before the pre-tournament dinner at Lakewood CC in Dallas, there was a freak hailstorm. Calef's wife was in the clubhouse parking and about to exit her Honda. Calef called her and told her to stay in the car until the storm passed. Good thing she did, the hail hit the front windshield several times, cracking. She jumped in the back seat and curled up on the floor while the back window was shattered. After it passed, she was OK, but their Honda was totaled. Calef will visit the area in a few weeks to play in the State Am.

No. 8: Techno golf

I have an iPhone and I can't go anywhere without it. It's that valuable, even on the golf course. I use a GPS app that gives yards on the particular hole I'm playing and now the USGA has an app that will settle any dispute on the golf course, an app with the Rules of Golf. Now, if I had an app that could help me putt I'd be unbeatable. These iPhones aren't always a blessing. They are driving USGA officials at the US Open and every other tournament nuts. Of course, if you ever attended a PGA tournament, you know, except for the media, cameras are banned during tournament play. But with iPhones, people are using them to take photographs and videos all the time. Furthermore, there are inadvertent and assorted beeps when folks get news flashes, texts or emails. One of the golfers was so irate last week that he complained to the USGA officials during his round. How did he complain? He took out his iPhone and texted the officials.

No. 9: Saves that really matter.

Fritz Dehn, a member at Scituate Country Club, had a week that he will never forget. He knows all about sand saves and saving par, but what he did was save lives three times. First, his wife, Pam, was choking on a piece of food. Alertly, he had to use the Heimlich maneuver and saved her life. Second, was a few days later. His son, Richard, was driving him to Boston to take the red eye out of Logan Airport. Bright lights were fast approaching and his son was mesmerized, like a deer in the headlights. It was a car going down the wrong way of the Southeast Expressway. This time Dehn grabbed the steering wheel and moved the automobile out of harm's way. Two days later, in Miami at a seminar, he was walking along the beach. He heard a woman's screams from the water. She was caught in the undertow. Dehm ran into the water and brought the women to shore. His clothes and his telephone were ruined. But it was another saved life. How many people have had a week like that! He might be a 13-handicapper on the golf course, but he is scratch when it comes to being a superhero.

YOUTH SUMMER BASKETBALL

Expanded Youth Summer Basketball starts Monday

Registration still open

The popular Cohasset Basketball Boosters summer basketball program is ready to roll with an expanded format for youths of all ages.

Each age group now has two nights per week for the six-week session. So if your child has a conflict with another sport on a particular night, he or she still can come to play ball at least one night per week.

In addition, the Boosters have expanded the program to include our high school-age youths for the first time. Basketball is a lifetime sport and the Boosters wish to continue to offer boys and girls the opportunity to play and develop their skills even if they are not on a varsity team.

Another new feature this year will be the utilization of former CHS stars and present college players as our instructors.

AND this is all for the same bargain price of just $50.00.

Program details:

— Six weeks starting 6/25 and ending 8/2 at the CHS gym.

— Boys in rising grades 4 & 5 on Mondays and Tuesdays from 5:00-6:30;

— All girls (rising grade 4 through high school) on Mondays and Tuesdays from 6:30-8:00;

— Boys in rising grades 6 & 7 on Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5:00-6:30;

— Boys in rising grades 8 & HS on Wednesdays and Thursdays from 6:30-8:00.

Each girl and boy must bring their own ball and each should wear a reversible shirt. (Please note: There will be no shirts given out for the summer program).

Full details and the link for on-line registration are at http://www.cohassetbasketball.com/.

DERBY ACADEMY

Derby Academy Athletic Award recipients

At the end of each athletic season, the Middle and Upper School students and faculty gather together to celebrate the successes of each team and honor those student athletes whose contributions to the teams and progress in mastering a sport go above and beyond. In the spring, Derby students may elect to participate in baseball, softball or lacrosse.

Derby students from Cohasset honored at the Spring Athletic Awards Assembly include:

· Bri Condon, Grade 8, earned the Susan Feins Spirit Award for courage and determination.

· Zack Herman, Grade 7, earned the Parents Association Minor Banner for Boys awarded annually to recognize the areas involving sportsmanship and character building. The minor banner is considered one of Derby's highest athletic awards and is given to the boy in seventh grade who best typify the Derby Spirit in athletics by his attitude toward teammates, coaches, opponents and officials.

· Karlee Koswick, Grade 8, earned the Girls Varsity B Lacrosse Most Improved Player Award.

· Regan O'Donnell, Grade 8, earned the Girls Varsity A Lacrosse Coaches Award.

· Madelyn Schwandt, Grade 7, earned the Girls JV Lacrosse Coaches Award.

· Minnie Stavis, Grade 7, earned the Girls Varsity B Lacrosse Coaches Award and the Parents Association Minor Banner for Girls awarded annually to recognize the areas involving sportsmanship and character building. The minor banner is considered one of Derby's highest athletic awards and is given to the girl in seventh grade who best typify the Derby Spirit in athletics by her attitude toward teammates, coaches, opponents and officials.

Founded in 1784, Derby Academy is one of the oldest coeducational day schools in continuous operation in the United States. Located in Hingham, Mass., Derby Academy is dedicated to serving students in Pre-Kindergarten through eighth grade and is committed to providing an exceptional educational experience that includes rigorous academics and comprehensive arts and athletics programs in a welcoming and nurturing environment. Revolution Academy tryouts

The New England Revolution will hold tryouts for its newly-created Revolution Academy Under-14 team, as well as its existing Under-16 and Under-18 teams, at Gillette Stadium on Monday, July 2.

Players born in the following years are eligible to try out: 1995, 1996, 1997, 1998 and 1999. There is no fee to try out, but all prospective players must register for the tryout no later than Sunday, July 1.

Players who have not already registered will not be allowed to tryout on July 2.

Open Tryout Schedule:

Monday, July 2

Gillette Stadium (Foxborough, Mass.)

Birth Years: 1995, 1996 and 1997

Time: 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

Birth Years: 1998 and 1998

Time: 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Important Tryout Information

Registration information is available at www.revolutionsoccer.net/academy/2012-open-tryouts

All players who plan to attend a Revolution Academy tryout session are required to have consent and liability release forms with them, signed by a parent or legal guardian. Players without the necessary signed forms will not be allowed to try out.

All players should arrive at the respective locations 30 minutes before their age-group tryout begins to ensure all required paperwork is in order

Selected players will be called back for a final round of tryouts later in the week

The Revolution Academy's youth teams - which U.S. Soccer rated among the nation's top eight youth programs last year - is the only fully-funded youth soccer program in New England and competes in the prestigious U.S. Soccer Development Academy at the U16 and U18 age levels. The U14 team will compete in U.S. Club Soccer's Northeast Pre-Academy League in 2012-13.

Qualified and talented players are accepted into the program without regard to their financial situation. All players' needs and expenses related to soccer activities – training, facilities, equipment, uniforms, travel associated with competitions – are provided by the Revolution at no cost to the players or their families.

Players who are chosen to represent the Revolution on its youth teams will be required to forgo their high school soccer seasons as now required by U.S. Soccer.

For more information about tryouts or to download the required forms, visit revolutionsoccer.net and click on "Academy" in the blue navigation bar. The Revolution Academy can also be reached by emailing revolutionacademy@revolutionsoccer.net.

loss to Weymouth before rebounding with four straight wins to improve to 4-1.

A big key for this season's team could be pitching. Post 118 is deep with pitching talent.

Jordan Jenkins, Chris Smith, Chase Michaud and Jamie Faber all have solid credentials

"We lost a tough one," Arnold said of the Weymouth loss. "The boys were rusty and full of cobwebs. Chase Michaud pitched well but had no offensive support."

Things got better in the next game, a win over Morrisette, fueled by Jordan Jenkins, who tossed a complete game gem.

In a win over Braintree, Jamie Faber went the distance. Chris Smith followed that performance with a complete game victory over Stoughton.

Michaud then came back and tossed a complete game while allowing two runs in a win over Holbrook.

Offensively, Tim Kensinger's bat has been on fire, getting on base in 15 of his 20 at-bats to open the season.

For Post 118, there are several new faces on the squad, including Scituate players Connor Gibbons, Chris Smith, John Brady and Chris LeClair.

Jenkins is back from the recently dissolved Norwell team and Cohasset's Mickey Barry has joined.

"It was really fun," she said. "I made some upper classmen friends. It was always so positive. I went with the flow. It was a very team oriented atmosphere. Coach always said it didn't matter if we win or lose. We'll still get ice cream."

Meehan was thrilled with Davis.

"Emma has been a great asset," Meehan said. "At the beginning of the season it (having her) scared me. I didn't know what to expect. She's been great. She's a great team person. She has brought an intensity to practice and a high level of play, but she's still a freshman with a lot of friends on the team and she plays as part of the team."

Davis enjoyed her coaches.

"She (Meehan) is awesome," Davis said. "She's very supportive."

Of course one highlight to the season was a small round friend named Bounce.

"We found Bounce at the very first match. He was just sitting there," Davis said of the team's popular mascot. "Our coach said we need a mascot. He was a member of the team."

FOOTBALL

New game in town

Coastal Chiefs focus on community

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Hanover High School graduate Steve Santacroce loves football.

He also knows the power of sports in everyday life.

With that in mind, Santacroce felt that it was time to put that love to good use and created the Coastal Chiefs of the East Coast Football League, a AAA affiliate in the New England Football League, one of the top amateur leagues in the nation.

"I'm a big community service guy," Santacroce said. "I saw how football could be a central focal point in bringing back values of supporting the community that supports you."

The Chiefs will play their games, which begin July 21, at Hanover High School, but the team itself is built with players from just about every town on the South Shore, including Cohasset, Scituate, Hull, Norwell, Hingham and Quincy.

Head coach Jim Sullivan, who was head coach at Norwell High School, and a member of Cohasset's staff before that, is one of the most respected coaches in local football circles and beyond.

One thing that has Santacroce's attention is the professional level, where it seems more and more players with more and more money and attitude have a disconnect with the everyday fan, and worse in some cases. Just ask Pacman Jones, or those guys in Washington with the guns in the locker room, or even LeBron James, who's talent and dedication to helping kids is somehow overshadowed by his oversized ego.

"I love discipline and camaraderie," he said. "I love when you see guys get knocked down, get up and dust off. Anyone interested in playing for our team is expected to be a role model. They sign a contract to do community service during the season."

Santacroce said that occasionally a practice might switch to a trip to a local food pantry.

"Our game is family friendly," Santacroce said. "Come to a practice or game and you won't hear any language. We don't tolerate that. You can bring kids and feel safe. When you come down, you are joining a family. There's always room at the table, but if you're here looking for yourself, it's not the place."

Other members of the coaching staff include Jim Luscinski, a member of four Super Bowl winners while at Hanover High School, Pat Kelliher and Bob Whitcher.

"These guys all know each other," Santacroce said. "If you're going to start a team, the best way to do it is with experienced coaches. We have that. Our brand of football is different than most. We have a lot of younger guys who haven't picked up many bad tendencies and our coaching staff is all about teaching. If you don't know anything about football, you can learn it from them."

Players on the Chiefs have all played high school football and some have college experience.

Santacroce said the team can help players in the middle, who want to play college, but haven't found a place yet.

"If you're a player who wasn't quite good enough and want to move on, we'll get you there. We'll help with applications and whatever else we can do."

Still the big thing is the community service.

"I've never met a successful person who lacked giving something back."

The decision to play in Hanover was simple.

"I graduated from Hanover and wanted to be in my hometown," Santacroce said. "But we made sure to give the name Coastal because we're here to support other towns as well."

two-out double down the left field line to keep the inning alive. After a Tanner Reibenspies (San Diego State) walk, Baggett laced an RBI single to score Lupia and knot the game at four. McCunney followed with a two-run single to score Reibenspies and Baggett, giving Brockton a lead it wouldn't surrender. The Rox weren't done there, as Gallub, Luis Gonzalez (Concordia), and Rhett Wiseman (Vanderbilt) notched RBI singles to add to the scoring barrage and eventually put Brockton on top, 10-4.

After a seven-run seventh inning, the Rox added two more in the eighth thanks to McCunney, who belted his first homer of the season off of the left field foul pole to give the hosts an eight run lead.

Not to be out-shadowed by the offensive heroics, Brockton's pitching was stellar all afternoon as well, scattering just four hits in the win.

Rox starter Evan Brown (Newberry) allowed just two runs on three hits in 5.1 innings of work, while walking four and striking out five. Sal Minichino (Concordia) recorded the win (1-1) in 0.2 scoreless innings of relief, while Westwood's John Sheehan (William and Mary) and Cohasset's Brendan Doonan (Rhode Island) retired the side in order in the eighth and ninth inning respectively.

McCunney, Doonan, Cavanaro and Berry all played for Cohasset/Scituate American Legion Post 118 in recent years.

Tuesday, McCunney went 3-for 5 with an RBI and run scored, while Berry added a pair of hits and a stolen base in a 7-2 win over the Torrington Titans.

McCunney is hitting .342 so far this season, with a team-leading 8 RBI, while Doonan has a 2.46 ERA in three appearances. Berry is hitting .226 with a homer and 3 RBI. Cavanaro is hitting .111, but has drawn four walks in five games.

In their most recent action, Berry notched an RBI double to score McCunney in the third inning of an 8-2 loss to the North Shore Navigators.

The Hubbard Memorial 5K Fun Run

July 21, 2012 - Cohasset, MA

Register now for Hubbard Memorial 5K

Register now for the Hubbard Memorial 5K Fun Run on Saturday, July 21st, to benefit the Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI). This CMI "fun"-raiser is dedicated to the memories of Jack and June Hubbard. Jack Hubbard was a CMI founding member and an avid rower. June Hubbard, his wife, shared her husband's love of the ocean and was a dedicated volunteer and active member of many local organizations. Proceeds of the event support CMI's mission to provide a community rowing program for all, revitalize small boat woodcraft, and raise awareness for Cohasset's special place in local maritime history. The race starts and finishes on Cohasset Common.

Entry fee is $25, Family entry fee (maximum of 6 members) is $75. All participants will receive a commemorative race T-shirt. Register on-line at rowcmi.com.

To sponsor, or volunteer, please contact Ed Baldry 781-383-8555, ed.baldry@icdfunds.com or Karen Hall at 781-374-5152 at karen.hall@icdfunds.com

CMI is committed to providing safe and rewarding race opportunities to all club members. CMI strives to develop and promote sportsmanship, fitness, rowing skills, teamwork, and friendship for youth and adult rowers, of all skill levels, through participation in safe and challenging rowing events were competing to the best of one's abilities and inclusiveness are equally valued. Cohasset Maritime Institute is a 501c (3) non-profit charitable organization.

COUNTRY MUSIC ON THE COMMON

Jim Armstrong and 'The New City Cowboys'

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

Jim Armstrong has been teaching guitar to Cohasset students for more than a decade. Some of his most well known local "stars" are The Brown Sisters (who have since relocated to Florida), Mimi Mahoney, Colby Smalzel, Jenna Neer, Anya Gruber and the list goes on and on from the very young to the parents of the very young. Armstrong is not only a skilled guitar player and teacher, he has a singing voice to match those talents. As lead singer of his newest venture, "The New City Cowboys," Armstrong joins brother Gerard; Bill Holbrook; and PJ Justice. The four play everything from modern Country Hits to Classic Rock. The concert is Thursday, June 28th at 6 p.m. on Cohasset Common. Attendees are encouraged to bring a blanket or folding chairs, along with a picnic dinner.

The Cohasset Concert Series Summer 2012 is funded in part through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. This program is supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency that is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency. Donations are gratefully accepted and can be made out to the Cohasset Recreation Department; Concert Fund, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Cohasset Sailing Club Launch Party

Summer is finally here, and on Saturday July 7 the Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) is hosting its annual launch party. All adult members and friends of the CSC are cordially invited to attend—you don't need to be an active member and past members are especially welcome, as are future ones. Perhaps you have recently moved to town, and have kids that soon will be ready to take sailing lessons? The festivities will take place at the Clubhouse beginning at 6:00 p.m. and will carry on to 11:00 p.m. Dinner, a lobster and BBQ chicken feast, will be served between 6:30 and 8:30. BYOB.

As many of you already know, the summer launch party is the CSC's only adult social event and the silent auction held at the party is the club's main fundraising event. Donations for auction items are actively sought: in past years these have ranged from gift certificates, artworks, tickets to professional sporting events, gourmet dinners, sunset cruises, sailing lessons, vacation home loans—you name it. No gift is too big or too small, as all the proceeds go to benefit what we humbly consider one of the town's best institutions, one that makes sailing accessible and affordable for all.

Reserve your place for the dinner by calling or dropping by the CSC during lessons and getting your name on the registration list. (Lessons start on June 25 and run from 8:00 am to 4:30 pm.) Dinner is $50 per person and payable in advance by cash or check. There is no charge to come socialize and bid on the auction items. If you have any questions or wish to donate an auction item, please e-mail Deb Johnson at debjoh2000@yahoo.com.

We look forward to seeing you!

Students attend leadership program

HOBY Leadership Seminars bring together a select group of high school sophomores to interact with speakers and to participate in activities to learn leadership skills and ways to get involved in community service.

Clarke Indek and Matthew MacCormack recently attended the Massachusetts Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership Seminar. Both boys joined 237 other young leaders representing 166 high schools from throughout Massachusetts, June 8 through 10 at Bentley University in Waltham. This year, there were also seven students transfer to this seminar from Connecticut, New York and New Hampshire.

Representing Cohasset High School, Clarke Indek is the son of Linda and Bruce Indek, and Matthew MacCormack is the son of Karen and Stephen MacCormack.

HOBY Leadership Seminars bring together a select group of high school sophomores to interact with speakers and to participate in activities to learn leadership skills and ways to get involved in community service. The goal is to provide the youth a stimulating forum for broadening their understanding of their leadership potential and quest for self-development. HOBY leaders are also challenged to return to their communities to perform at least 100 hours of community service within 12 months following the seminar.

Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership was established in 1958 by actor Hugh O'Brian following a visit to Africa where he was inspired by a meeting with Dr. Albert Schweitzer.

"One of the things Schweitzer said to me was that the most important thing in education was to teach young people to think for themselves," O'Brian said. "From that inspiration, and with the support of others who believe in youth and the American dream, I started HOBY to seek out, recognize, and develop outstanding leadership potential among our nation's youth."

Information about HOBY activities and sponsorship opportunities is available by calling Gail Elmore at 508-839-6943 or by referring to www.mahoby.org.

BRIEFLY

Cohasset PSO General Appeal

The Cohasset PSO wishes to thank all of the families who have generously contributed to our recently mailed letter of appeal. In lieu of the Spring Telethon, we are asking for your financial support to continue enhancing our children's educations in all of our schools. Last year, the Cohasset PSO provided over $43,000 to the school district to support special events, enrichment programs and direct teacher grants.

The PSO is looking at significantly increasing our contribution to every school next year, including enhancements to the Deer Hill Playground and programs at the M/HS, and are relying on your support to ensure that we can present these exciting events to our children. Any donation, large or small is appreciated, as are corporate matching funds.

If you have misplaced the envelope, donations made out to "Cohasset PSO" can be mailed to Cohasset PSO, PO Box 30, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Marsh Monitors sought by CSCR

Attention all Middle School science lovers. Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research is once again offering its popular Jr. Marsh Monitors program for students entering grades six, seven and eight. Jr. Marsh Monitors will run from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday for one or two week sessions in mid-July. Each week will feature different activities. Visit www.ccscr.rog for details on dates and costs.

Farmers' Market open for business

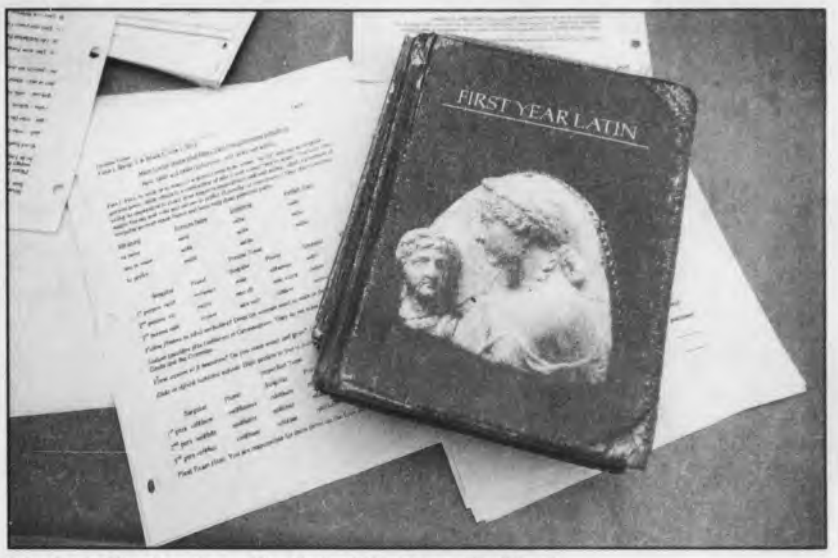
The Cohasset Farmers' Market opened for its 18th season on June 21 and will continue every Thursday from 2-6 p.m. through October 18, on Cohasset Common. Vendors are offering locally grown produce, fresh fish and lobster, homemade specialty and prepared foods such as breads, jellies, pies, cookies and snacks, handmade jewelry and crafts and more. A new vendor is offering barbeque to go.

Kids love the pony rides and kids of all ages enjoy the ice cream and musical entertainment. Come to our market, do some shopping, sit on the grass and listen to music while supporting local family farms and businesses. Get to know the people who grow and prepare food and the artisans who craft an array of wares.

Special events are planned, including the return of the Dog Parade! Stay tuned for details. For more information, visit the website at www.cohasset-farmersmarket.com. See you at the market!

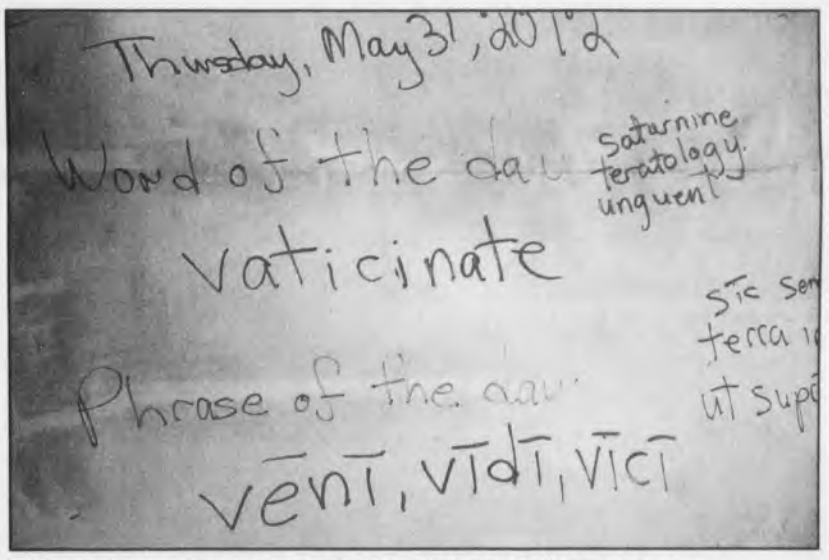
Celebrating victories in Latin over ice cream

The students of Latin I from the fall semester met after school on a recent Friday to celebrate their silver medals and enjoy some ice cream from J.J.'s on Route 3A. The students had given up their lunch breaks in February and March to meet with their Latin teacher from the first semester and to prepare for the National Latin Exam on March 15th. The American Classical League and National Junior Classics League have sponsored this examination for over 30 years with tens of thousands of students from North America and, in recent years, all over the world entering the competition.



The following students entered the competition: Adam Benson, Erin Driscoll, Valerie Farren, Patrick Federle, Curtis Golden, Sarah Gruber, Samuel Morris and Cole Morrison sat for the the Latin I test. Derek Benson sat for the Latin II test. Freshman Brett Dooley also participated in the review sessions, but had never studied Latin and was ineligible to sit for the examination. Erin Driscoll and Sarah Gruber won silver medals for answering at least thirty-two out of the forty questions on their exams correctly.

Their teacher, Mr Muzzy Qazilbash, is proud of all his students for their hard work and persistence in continuing their study of Latin on their own time and for their own edification. He feels that the current 9th graders of Cohasset High School have not even hit their stride in the acclaim that they will bring to the district. "This is a wonderful group of students. An ice cream sundae party makes for a nice treat to recognize their hard work."



Staff photos by Robin Chan

Erin Driscoll, Sarah Gruber, Cole Morrison, Matthew MacCormack, Curtis Golden, Hank Brown, Sam Morris, and Pat Federle flank Mr. Muzzy Qazilbash who is the Latin teacher at Cohasset High School. (Matthew and Hank are not Latin students).

A Latin textbook rests on the desk of Mr. Muzzy Qazilbash.

Latin words are written on the white board of Mr. Muzzy Qazilbash's room.

Anthony Catlin

Anthony Catlin

WESTON – Catlin, Anthony Beebe 75, of Weston, formerly of Cohasset, MA and Marco Island, FL, died June 9, 2012. He was a loving husband to Shifi Catlin (1950-2010) for nearly 25 years. He is survived by 2 siblings: sister Dianne Gardiner of Palo Alto, CA and Robert M. Catlin III of Spring Island, SC; 4 children: Anthony B. Catlin Jr. of Natick, Wendy C.R. Catlin and partner Margaret Costello of Newton, Leslie Catlin Carr and husband Michael of Bellingham, and Jessica Catlin of Cambridge; and 7 grandchildren: Rachel and Tucker Catlin of Natick, Michael and Alison Costello of Newton, and Alexander, Ethan, and Ella Carr of Bellingham.

He graduated from Dexter School in 1954, from the Hill School in 1955, and from Yale University in 1960 with a BA in Philosophy and a minor in Italian. He then joined the Navy and served with CINCLANT-FLT in Norfolk, VA as a naval air intelligence officer. His intelligence group was instrumental in spotting the missiles in Cuba during the Cuban missile crisis. He then went on to civilian life and worked for IBM, Keane and, in later years, worked as an independent computer consultant. A lifelong dog lover, Tony was a familiar sight over the years as he walked his Labradors around Lake Waban. He also had a penchant for Dixieland jazz, oftentimes playing the trumpet as he listened. He was an avid golfer and member of The Country Club in Brookline for many years. He was Tiger Woods' scorekeeper when TCC hosted the Ryder Cup in 1999. He was also an excellent amateur woodworker. Tony loved spending summers at the family beach house at Sandy Cove in Cohasset and could often be found enjoying a day out exploring on the water or relaxing on the beach. Tony valued family above all else and cherished hosting everyone for holidays at his home. He had an incredible zest for life and was an amazing father. He will be sorely missed and fondly remembered by all those left behind.

A Memorial service was held at the family home in Cohasset on Sunday June 17. Interment was at Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset. Expressions of sympathy may be made in Tony's memory to Joslin Diabetes Center 1 Joslin Place Ste 745, Boston, MA 02215. Arrangements made by George F. Doherty & Sons Funeral Home, Wellesley. Wigmore Pierson

Wigmore Pierson

HULL – Wigmore Alling Pierson, 72, died Tuesday after a year-long standoff with a variety of illnesses that tried to lay him low. Wig left this world exactly the way he wanted to: at his Hull home, at peace and surrounded by his wife, Molly, and children Beth, Morgan and Jack.

Wig was best known locally as the host of cable talk-show "Pierson to Person", which was broadcast live from Scituate every Thursday for 10 years. His enthusiasm and boundless curiosity attracted guests from local Cohasset luminaries to state wide political figures like Billy Bulger and Bill Weld to wrestler "Killer" Kowalski and boxer Peter McNeely. Wig, his future wife, Molly, who worked for the Patriot Ledger and Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford, had a great time for years disporting themselves as the "Cohasset media giants".

But Wig's real love was politics, local or national. He got a degree in political science from Lake Forest College in Illinois and then served in the Peace Corps in Peru for two years. When he returned, Wig ran twice for state representative from Newton. To his great surprise, this 20-something Republican running in what was then a heavily Democratic town, lost. Undaunted, he moved to Washington D.C. where he founded a career counseling firm and was thrilled to serve as a presidential advance man to President Gerald Ford. During his 22 years in Cohasset, he jumped into the political scene with both feet, joining town boards, running for office twice and working behind the scenes on many campaigns.

Another enthusiasm was history–his own, his town's, the country's. Wig, a descendant of William Brewster, was a proud member and past governor of the Massachusetts Mayflower Society. In Cohasset, he served on the historical commission and as chairman of the committee that produced the third volume of the Narrative History of Cohasset. He maintained such a comprehensive collection of presidential literature and memorabilia that his library sports the Presidential Seal. Wig also bribed each of his kids to memorize all the presidents in order.

Wig's real talent may have been for friendship. He kept in touch with boyhood friends from Newton, classmates from Buckingham Browne Nichols, fraternity brothers from Lake Forest College, fellow Peace Corps volunteers, the production crew from "Pierson to Person", Mayflower members from all over the country , and dear friends gathered from two decades in Cohasset.

He was a larger than life figure who will be missed by those he touched across the country.

Wig was born in Oakland, California, to Merlin A. and Janice W. Pierson and was raised in Newton. He was a loving husband to Molly (Hochkeppel) Pierson; devoted Dad to Elizabeth Brundage, Morgan Wigmore and Jack Benham Civita Pierson; super stepdad to Kurt, Glen, Matt and Zach Hochkeppel and their spouses Kelly, Sarah, Kendra and Caitlin; loving "Grampy" to Cole, Finn, Ella, Mimi, Carisa, Myrna, Rosey and Shane Hochkeppel; he is also survived by cousins Jean Koenig and Ruth Wetmore, their spouses and children.

There will be a memorial service at 5 p.m. Friday at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset. Reception will follow.

Arrangements will be through McNamara Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

GIMME SHELTER

Trixie is a true people-person and is not wild about other cats. COURTESY PHOTO

Trixie wants to be an only

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to feature Trixie, a beautiful black-and-white medium hair female. She is hoping to find a home where she'll be the only cat. For some reason or other she doesn't care for others of her species.

She is extremely friendly with humans, and doesn't scratch or bite. When she sees someone sitting down, she takes it as an invitation to jump onto their lap.

Trixie is just a year old, and still quite kittenish. HSAR invites you to stop by the shelter to meet her.

Trixie welcomes visitors and if you'd like to meet her, please give Judy a call at 781-534-4902.

While you're at the shelter you can meet Trixie and all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

Trixie is just a year old, and still quite kittenish. HSAR invites you to stop by the shelter to meet her.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org. HSAR sends out a huge thank you goes out to its many supporters.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Summer of family memories

Elaine Sorrentino

I have wonderful memories of being 8 or 9 years old, piling into the back of my dad's old station wagon with my two brothers, with my mother and father in front, and driving into Boston to see Pete Seeger in concert. I remember the five of us singing the whole way in and the whole way out of Boston. I can still see my dad at the concert, looking at his young brood, and beaming at our smiling faces as we sang "Hokey pokey penny a loafie, taste before you buy... singing oh what a merry land is England!" Even now, many years later, that family outing remains a very fond memory.

We have planned a summer of memory-making family concerts here at South Shore Conservatory, as part of our well-known Evenings Under the Stars outdoor concert series. Mothers, fathers, grandparents, aunts, uncles, friends and neighbors are all invited to come and join in on the Wednesday morning fun. The hotdog vendor and Hornstra Farms will be on hand to satisfy grumbling bellies with their tasty treats, and our beautiful Jane Carr Amphitheatre is a perfect venue rain or shine.

More good news: Vanessa Trien and the Jumping Monkeys are coming back on Wednesday, July 11. Just saying the words "jumping monkeys" gets my friend Ed Perry at WATD all hyped up about this concert. He claims he doesn't want to miss those monkeys! A Boston-based singer-songwriter and children's performer, Vanessa has become a local rock star among the young and young at heart, and has certainly won over the hearts of Conservatory audiences. I remember watching my preschool students dancing in the aisles as they sang along with Vanessa and her backup "monkeys" last summer.

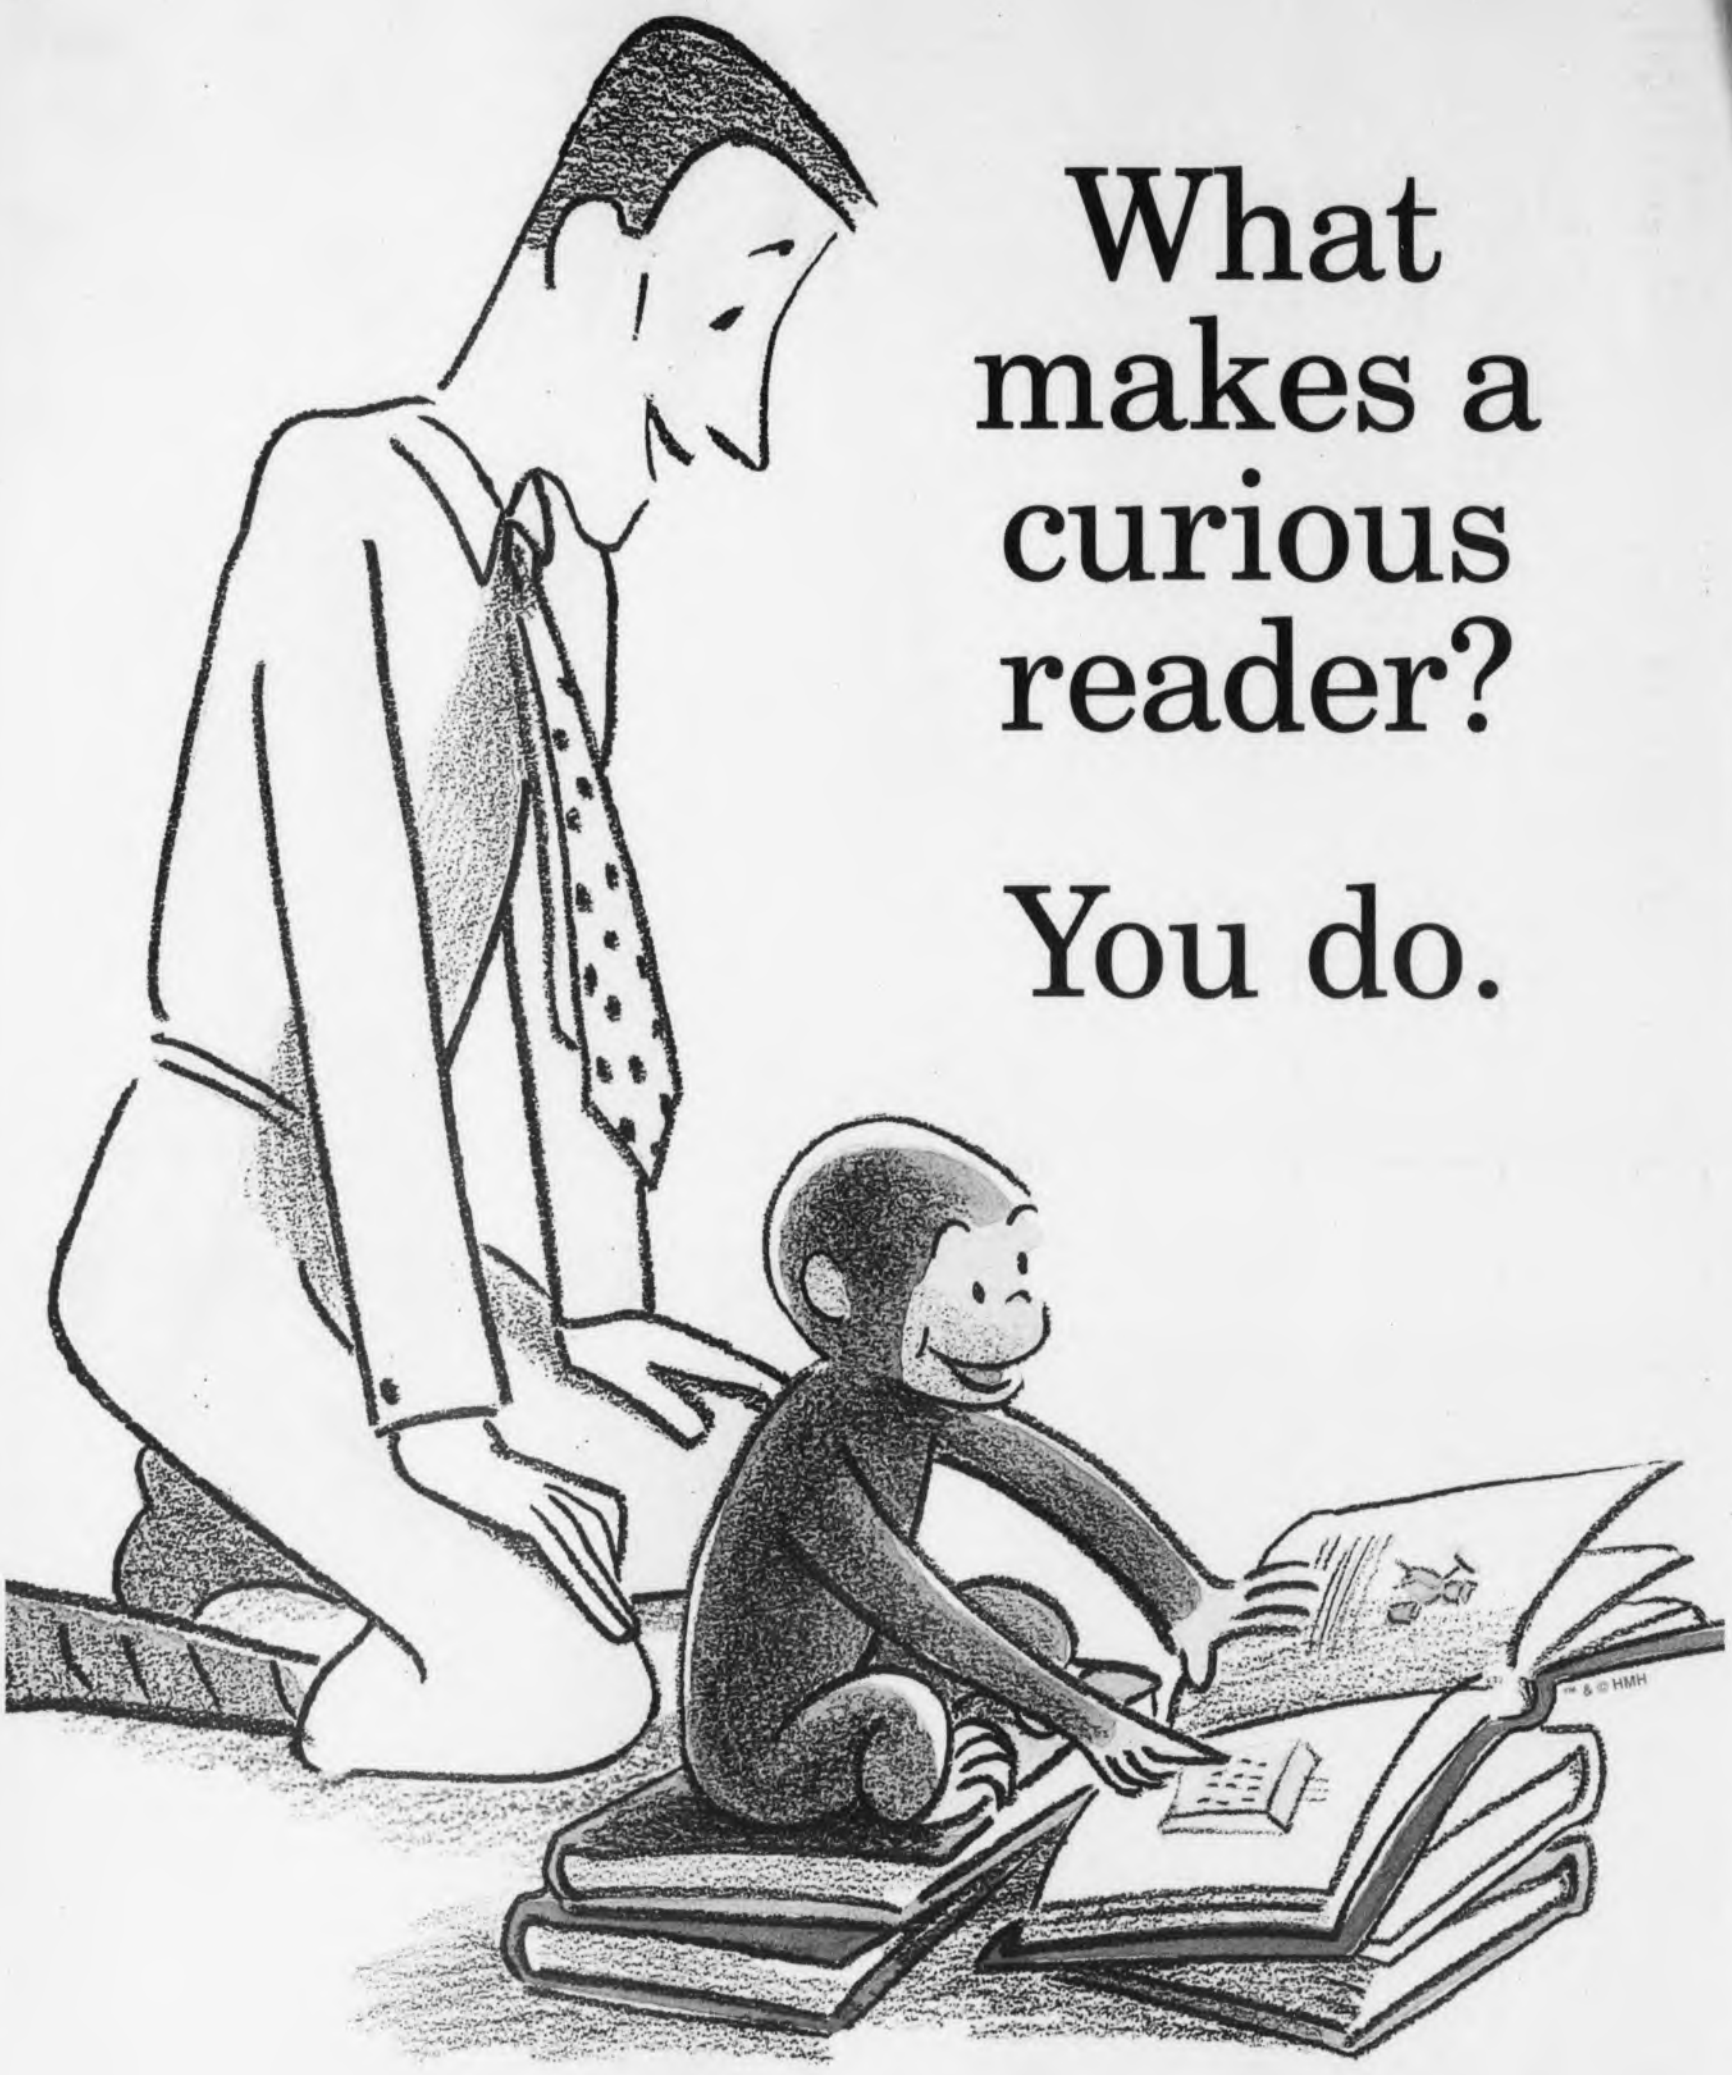
We have planned a summer of memory-making family concerts here at South Shore Conservatory, as part of our well-known Evenings Under the Stars outdoor concert series.

All ages will enjoy the intergenerational sing-along with Jennie Mulqueen as she presents the music of Julie Andrews on Wednesday, July 18. My own mom has already ordered her ticket. The music on this program is cherished by grandparents, parents and children alike, and includes songs from award-winning musicals such as "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," "Cinderella," "Mary Poppins" and the epic "Sound of Music." Young Music Together students and preschool/prek/kindergarten students will delight in seeing their very own "Miss Jennie" on stage.

Grammy Award-winning musical storyteller Debbie and Friends will entertain on Wednesday, July 25. Her show is ideal for families and elementary schools. Kids love her energy, and appreciate the interesting array of music and instruments she brings to each show. With the recent release of her debut Grammy winning CD, "Story Songs and Sing Alongs," Debbie has made a splash in the world of children's music.

A favorite of the 2011 EUS season, puppeteer Dan Butterworth will entertain young EUS audiences again on Aug. 1. His intricately hand-carved puppets dance and whirl from the stage, through the air, and right out into the audience, moving to a stream of infectious world music. What's so cool about his performances is how quickly audience members feel they're an integral part of the show.



I look forward to watching families leave these performances with a new set of songs to sing together in the car and at home, making memories they will cherish into the future.

To learn more about these and other Evenings Under the Stars performances, visit http://www.sscmusic.org/evenings_under_the_stars.html.

Elaine Sorrentino is South Shore Conservatory's communications director. She also teaches in the Conservatory's arts-based Preschool and PreK programs.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 2, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Be prepared to face some challenges stirred up by an envious colleague. Your best defense is the Arian's innate honesty. Stick with the truth, and you'll come out ahead.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your sensitivity to the needs of others is admirable. But be careful to avoid those who would take unfair advantage of your good nature, especially where money is involved.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Having an optimistic attitude is fine, as far as it goes. But don't be lulled into a false sense of confidence. There are still problems to deal with before you can totally relax.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel somewhat "crabby," as you fuss over plans that don't seem to work out. Maybe you're trying too hard. Ease up and let things happen without forcing them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Heed that keen Leonine instinct. It's trying to tell you to delay making a decision until you're sure there are no hidden problems that could cause trouble later on.

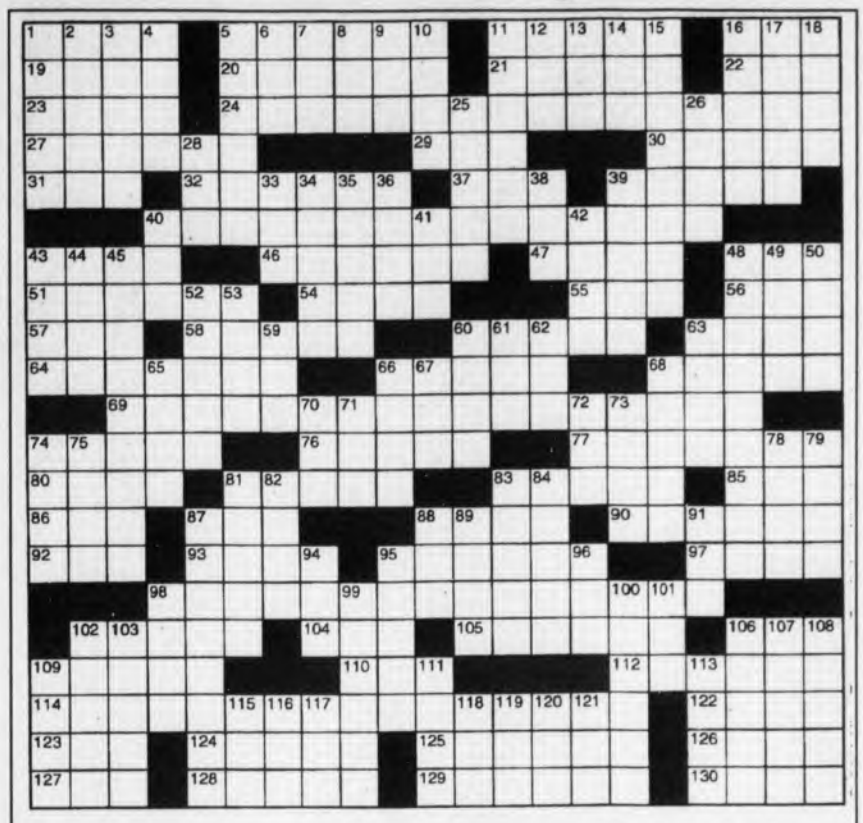
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to reach out to those who might be nursing hurt feelings over recent events. Best advice: Ignore any pettiness that could delay the healing process.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your understanding helps a colleague get through a difficult period. Although you didn't do it for a reward, be assured that your actions will be repaid down the line.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You score some high marks in the workplace, which will count in your favor when you face the possibility of changing direction on your current career path.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your goal lies straight ahead. Stay focused on it and avoid distractions that could throw off your aim and cause potentially detrimental delays.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Keep that burst of exuberance in check and resist pushing through your new project before it's ready. In your personal life, a family member again needs help.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Paying attention to your work is important this week. But so are your relationships with those special people in your life. Make time for them as well.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Good news. Someone is about to repay a long-standing debt. But be warned. That same someone could try to charm you into lending it back unless you say no and mean it.

(c) 2012 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are sensitive to matters that involve your home and family. You would make a fine family-court judge or social worker.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

INVESTIGATION

Town Manager did not interfere

Report concludes DeLuca's allegation 'unfounded'

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The matter was nearly resolved during last week's meeting (June 19) when results of an independent investigation were brought forward.

The idea that the acting town manager interfered with an internal police investigation is in the police chief's mind, according to private investigators.

During the Tuesday, June 26 Board of Selectmen meeting, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski was exonerated of an allegation made against him by suspended Police Chief Mark DeLuca. Selectmen voted to approve the results of a private investigation into the matter.

The matter was nearly resolved during last week's meeting (June 19) when results of an independent investigation were brought forward. Investigator Richard Sjoberg had interviewed everyone involved in the incident, save for the chief. Selectmen held off on voting to accept the investigation results until DeLuca was interviewed, but voted 3-2 to voice support for the town manager.

Calls to DeLuca's attorney, Edward McNeeley, were made last Monday, but Sjoberg said that he did not reach McNeeley until Tuesday afternoon. When invited to come to the selectmen meeting that night, McNeeley said that he and his client did not have enough time to prepare. DeLuca was interviewed the following Monday, June 25, by another investigator from Sjoberg's firm.

Following the interview, the report concluded, "Chief DeLuca in his mind believed that Milanoski was aware of an ongoing internal investigation and believed that Milanoski was attempting to impede his investigation...The Chief came to a rush judgment solely on the word of a

Selectmen approve contract in open session

It was supposed to happen publicly, but there was an oversight on someone's part. The Board of Selectmen voted Tuesday night to approve Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's employment contract.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said during the meeting, "On March 20, we voted to approve a 15-month extension (to Milanoski's temporary contract) subjective to final negotiations. On April 3, we approved the final negotiations, but we never voted it in a public session. Today, we will ratify the final contract as discussed, and be done with this."

According to the Open Meeting Law, the contract should have been ratified during an open session; however, the selectmen signed the contract during an executive session on April 3, but never came of executive to approve the contract publicly.

APPOINTMENTS

New faces for Con Com

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

There's been a slight shake-up on the Conservation Commission.

While the change is minor compared to last year's change in committee members, on Tuesday night the Board of Selectmen opted not to reappoint longtime Conservation Commission member Richard "Dick" Karoff.

Last year, Karoff was demoted from his full member position to a one-year associate position; the commissioner, who sat on the board a total of eight years and had served as vice chairman, was up for renewal again this year. Karoff reapplied, and one other Con Com associate position opened up when Michael Milanoski resigned from his post in March. Milanoski was appointed Acting

EVENT FOLLOW UP

Post-race reflections

The sixth annual Cohasset Triathlon was held Sunday, June 24 starting at Sandy Beach with the swim portion of the event, followed by a 12-mile bike ride along Atlantic Avenue to North Scituate and back through Cohasset Common, the back to Sandy Beach, then the 3.2-mile run along Jerusalem Road looping around Little Harbor.

Here is some additional information provided by race organizer Bill Burnett

- This was the 6th annual triathlon
- 850 athletes competed from over 27 different states - 15% of the race field included athletes who live in Cohasset
- Notable athletes included U.S. Senator Scott Brown, 10-time Olympic medalist Gary Hall Jr. and Dick/Rick Hoyt. This was Gary's first ever triathlon

- Weather conditions were perfect. Calm wind, sunny blue skies, and the water was flat and about 66 degrees
- There were 10 waves of athletes - the last wave included a 1-mile open water swim
- The energy and vibe around the event was like no other
- We worked hard this year, as we do every year, to minimize the impact on the community. Our last athletes were off Main Street before 9:45 a.m.

- The event raised over $110,000 for Type 1 diabetes making the grand total since the inaugural event more than $850,000.
- The event ALSO supports local initiatives including the Cohasset Food Pantry, the Cohasset Share the Road project, and the Sandy Beach Association

Occupation: Head Coach of Cohasset's U14 Girls Summer Travel Softball Team.

Best day of your life: Any sunny day that I can spend fishing down at the Aaron River Reservoir with my kids, Katie and Danny.

Best vacation: Ireland with my wife Lisa.

Favorite season: Summertime.

Favorite holiday: Father's Day.

Favorite junk food (or meal): I start every morning with a cup of Dunkin' Donuts coffee.

Best book (or magazine): "The Basketball Diaries" by Jim Carroll and Michael Patrick MacDonald's "Easter Rising" (his follow up book to 'All Souls').

PRINT EXTRA

Best movie (or actor): Peter Griffin (of Family Guy) seems to be a pretty solid actor. As for movies, it's "Fast Times at Ridgemont High" and "Slap Shot."

Best TV show: HBO's "Eastbound" and "Down."

Best music, group, or artist: The Clash, The Killers and Flogging Molly. I was also big fan of Boston's local music scene, bands like The Atlantics and The Neighborhoods were great live acts. Another decent local band was Bad Habit and coincidentally their drummer, Pete Vitello can now be seen, no longer behind a drum kit, but playing First Base Coach' for Cohasset's Girls Summer Travel Softball Team every Tuesday and Thursday night over the next 5 weeks.

Pet peeve: The saddest thing in life is wasted talent. However, the drainage on Freedom Field is pretty bad too.

Fun fact: For the past 28 years, I have played for the same softball team "The Brewers" in the City of Boston's Park League. I've also worked at Paragon Park and at the rock station WBCN back in their hey day.

Goal: As you may be aware, Cohasset has not had a high school softball team for the past 3 or 4 years. So our ultimate goal for the U14 Girls, as well as for our town's up and coming younger players, is to once again field a competitive high school team for the start of the 2014 Spring softball season.

Person you'd most like to meet: It would be pretty cool to have a couple cocktails with Jimmy Buffett.

Biggest worry: No worries, just wake up the next morning and give it your best.

Best part of Cohasset: We pretty much have it all ... the beach (Sandy), the barbershop (Pat's) and the brews (Mr. Dooley's).

Cohasset Sailing Club Launch Party on July 7

Cohasset Sailing Club will host its annual launch party on Saturday, July 7. All adult members and friends of CSC are invited to attend – past, present and future members. Festivities will take place at the clubhouse beginning at 6 p.m. and will continue to 11 p.m. Dinner, a lobster and barbecued chicken feast, will be served between 6:30 and 8:30 p.m. BYOB.

The summer launch party is the CSC's only adult social event and the silent auction, which takes place at the party, is the club's main fundraising event. Donations for auction items are sought. In past years these have ranged from gift certificates, artwork, tickets to professional sporting events, gourmet dinners, sunset cruises, sailing lessons, vacation home loans, more. No gift is too big or too small, as all the proceeds go to benefit the club, which makes sailing accessible and affordable for all.

Reserve a place for the dinner by calling or dropping by CSC on weekdays between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Dinner is $50 per person and payable in advance by cash or check. Email Deb Johnson at debjoh2000@yahoo.com for more information or to donate an auction item.

There is no charge to come socialize and bid on the auction items.

POLICE BEAT

K-9 unit helps find diabetic man in distress

On Friday (June 22) at about 3:15 a.m., a Cohasset officer on patrol encountered an intoxicated woman in the parking lot at Government Island. This woman, who is 49 years of age and from the Town of Hyannis was reporting that her boyfriend, who is a recovering alcoholic and has diabetes, got extremely intoxicated tonight and ran off into the woods behind the Lightkeepers House.

Officers on foot attempted to locate the man to no avail. Cohasset Police K-9 Officer Patrick Reardon and his dog Erik were called to the scene. Officer Reardon and Erik began to track the male through heavy brush along Border Street. Within 10 minutes the male was located deep in the woods.

The male, who is 50 years of age and also from the Hyannis, was heavily intoxicated and in distress. He was escorted out of the woods and treated by Cohasset Fire Department Paramedics. He and his girlfriend were subsequently placed into protective custody by officers.

For more information about Officer Reardon and Erik, please visit the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation website: http://cohassetworkingdog.org.

Power outage

Around 6 p.m. on Saturday (June 23), a severe thunder and lightning storm hit Cohasset. As a result of that storm, multiple trees and branches came down, and 307 Cohasset homes and businesses lost power. One large limb fell across King Street (near Sunrise) blocking traffic in the height of the storm.

In a reverse 911 emergency message to residents, police explained safety teams were working hard with National Grid to restore power.

National Grid has estimated that power would restored within three hours.

Remote control

On Monday, June 18 at about 9:15 p.m., Cohasset officers responded to a condominium off of Jerusalem Road for a reported disturbance. When officers arrived they were met by a 39-year-old female who stated that her boyfriend, who is 41-years-old and visiting from South Boston, allegedly hit her in the head with a television remote control during a heated argument. Officers checked the area for the male, but could not locate him in the vicinity. A warrant was sought for him in Quincy District Court for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (television remote control). The female refused medical treatment and the warrant for her boyfriend is still outstanding.

Move over

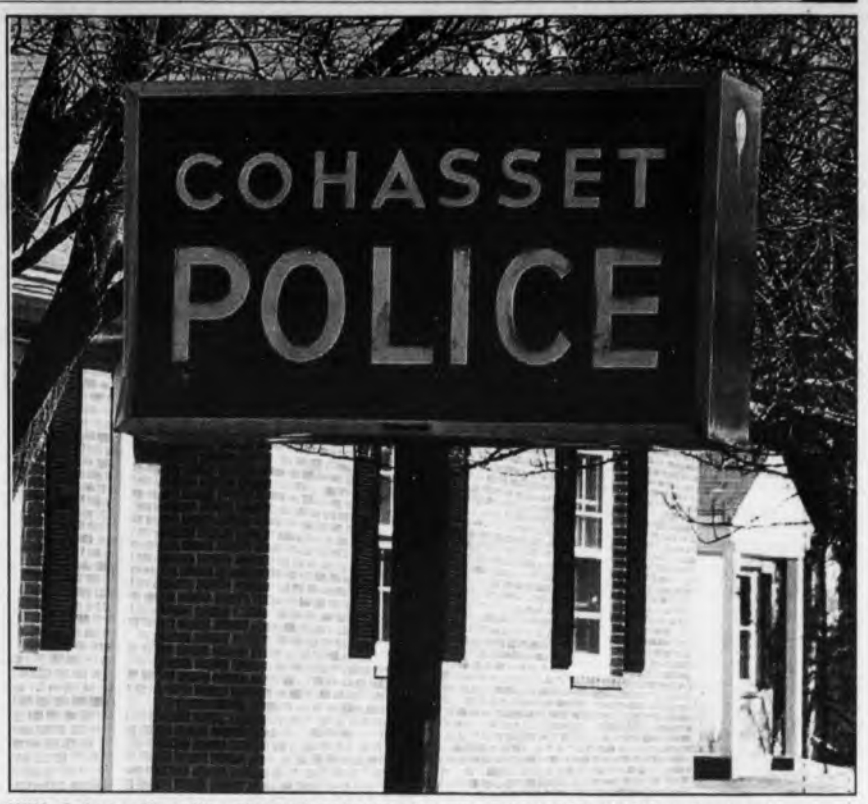
During a traffic stop on Route 3A on Wednesday, June 20, at approximately 8:55 a.m., a Cohasset police officer who was obtaining an operator's driver's license and registration, was almost hit by a passing vehicle. The passing vehicle, which was a 2006 BMW registered to a 57-year-old male from Hull failed to "move over" when he was approaching an emergency vehicle with its warning lights flashing. As a result, the male from Hull was mailed a $100 citation for violation of the states "Move Over Law."

Motorcycle pursuit

Cohasset Police will be summonsing a 22-year-old Boston male for failure to stop for a police officer, failure to stop for a stop sign, and other motor vehicle charges. The incident started on Thursday, June 21 around 6:30 p.m., when Hingham Police were pursuing a motorcycle on Rockland Street near West Corner. According to police, the motorcycle driver was able to elude Hingham Police in the area of Jerusalem Road and West Corner, but was later spotted by a Cohasset police officer on Hull Street. Cohasset officers reinitiated the pursuit, which ended in Hingham near the East School on Route 228 where the rider was taken into custody by Cohasset Police and turned over to Hingham police officers. The male now faces motor vehicle charges in both jurisdictions.

Secret shopper

A 62-year-old male from Cohasset came to police headquarters on Friday, June 22 to report that he was the victim of a scam. The male reported that he had posted his resume on Monster.com and was subsequently contacted by a person that asked him to be a "secret shopper" for a service called MoneyGram. The victim accepted the offer.



Days later the victim received a UPS parcel that contained what appeared to be a valid bank check in the amount of $2,550 made out to the victim. The instructions with the check were to deposit it into his personal bank account, and keep $400. The remaining $2150 was to be returned to the "secret shopper" company in California via bank check. The victim followed the instructions and was subsequently notified by his bank that the check for $2,550 was a fraud. The victim was given an identity fraud packet.

Broadsided

On Saturday, June 23, at around 10:09 a.m., Cohasset Police responded to a reported motor vehicle crash at the intersection of South Main Street and Summer Street. On arrival the officers talked to a 46-year-old male from Cohasset who had been operating a 2002 Honda SUV on South Main Street. The male reported that the operator of a 2002 Buick, a 70-year-old female from Brockton, went through the stop sign at the intersection and broadsided the Honda. Both vehicles had to be towed and both operators were transported to South Shore Hospital with minor injuries. The driver from Brockton was issued a citation for failure to stop for a stop sign and a request was sent to the registry to have her driving abilities reevaluated by the RMV.

Road rage

On Saturday, June 23, around 3:05 p.m., police were called to Dunkin' Donuts at the intersection of Route 3A and Beechwood Street. A caller was reporting a fight between two men. When officers arrived they spoke with two men, one from Cohasset and the other from Scituate. The officers determined that the fight was verbal and stemmed from a road rage incident that occurred earlier in the parking lot. The men were separated and sent on their way.

With Cohasset's police dispatch scheduled to move to the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC) in Hingham next week, there has been debate over how the police station will be used and when it will be manned. PUBLIC SAFETY

What to do with the police station?

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"We have physical things we have to do to the building, no matter what happens."
Michael Milanoski, Acting Town Manager

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced that the Board of Selectmen would discuss plans for the public safety building at its July 31 meeting.

Cohasset's police dispatch is scheduled to move to the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC) in Hingham next week, following the July 4 holiday.

The matter of what will happen to the police station once the dispatchers leave the building has been discussed and debated in many public forums, including the floor of Town Meeting in May. Milanoski told voters there that there is no money in the town's fiscal year 2013 budget to keep the station manned 24/7.

Police Chief Mark DeLuca, who is currently on paid administrative leave, took a stance against the "dark station" at Annual Town Meeting. DeLuca was suspended on Friday, May 25 after the town's police union brought a list of allegations against the chief to the town manager's attention.

Regarding the station, Milanoski has said that it will not be dark "all the time," but that officers, lieutenants and detectives could be working out of the station at any given time. However, it was previously reported that the station could go dark from 4 p.m. to 8 a.m. weekdays and all day on weekends.

The public safety facility will soon get a facelift, as approved by Town Meeting, which voted to appropriate $100,000 in renovations to the building. This includes $80,000 to replace windows and doors and mitigate basement flooding, and $20,000 for security upgrades.

The town manager stated that whether the station is dark at times or not, these repairs are necessary, have already been approved by Town Meeting, and will be implemented.

"We have physical things we have to do to the building, no matter what happens," Milanoski said during a recent selectmen meeting.

Some of the improvements include turning the police station's lobby into a "safe room" with a video monitor linked to the SSRECC, which citizens will be able to access for assistance.

Both the town manager and the chief told the Mariner in separate interviews prior to Town Meeting that the dark station matter, and the transition to regional dispatch, is a legacy issue both have been faced with addressing.

"We were handed off this with little homework done," DeLuca said at the time. "No feasibility study was done whatsover, as far as any for planning for the impacts (on public safety). It was never addressed... it was left in our laps to do something with this."

Milanoski recently stated; "This was a deal done four years ago, and we are going to be presenting the public safety plan as to how we're going to manage the facility."

The selectmen voted on moving to the SSRECC during their Nov. 30, 2009 meeting. According to the minutes, the board voted only to approve the move toward regionalized dispatch, but did not vote on whether the station would go dark.

Look for updates on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

RETIREE HEALTH BENEFITS

Plans in place to address rising costs

By David Riley
driley@wickedlocal.com

Most town and city employees who work at least 20 hours a week for 10 years take home much more than a steady paycheck and benefits.

They also earn a promise from their employers to help bear the cost of health care for the rest of their lives.

When such workers retire, most Bay State communities still provide and pay for at least half the cost of their health benefits, including primary insurance for employees who can leave before age 65 and supplemental coverage for others eligible for Medicare.

As the cost of medical care has soared, benefits promised in cheaper times have become an increasingly expensive pledge for taxpayers.

If costs continue to rise, some municipal leaders and analysts predict municipalities will be forced to cut local services to fund future retiree medical bills, or that the cost eventually may prove unaffordable altogether.

"Over time, it will take more and more of the budget," said Michael Widmer, president of the business-backed Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, which issued two recent reports critical of retiree health care costs. "There's no dodging it."

As Hingham Town Administrator Ted Alexiades sees it, failing to set aside money to pay for retirement benefits as town employees earn them is like ordering dinner, eating it, and leaving a note promising to pay later.

"You can't wait 30 more years," he said of funding retiree health care obligations. "It will be insurmountable by that time."

Alexiades said he has been sounding an alarm about retiree health care costs since the late 1990s, before his arrival in Hingham.

He took his message in January to a Massachusetts Municipal Association conference, where he said he urged colleagues to start discussing employees' post-employment benefits other than pensions, or OPEB for short, in their communities.

"If you're not talking in your community about what OPEB is, how are you ever going to get around to solving it?" Alexiades said.

Hingham is working to address its own long-term liability for retiree health benefits, which is estimated at $64.7 million.

Cohasset currently has a $32 million OPEB liability, and like neighboring Hingham, the community is finding ways to address the issue. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski noted that when it comes to dealing with OPEB, Hingham has been leading the way.

"I know Hingham's been working hard on that, Ted does a good job in Hingham," Milanoski said of Alexiades, adding that he hopes Cohasset will follow Hingham's lead and secure a higher bond rating. "They're a triple 'a' community, and we want to be a triple 'a' community, and one of the things we have to tackle to get there is our OPEB."

Trust fund

Hingham has been looking at the issue longer than many communities, having carried out its first OPEB study in 2002 and adopting a trust fund through special legislation.

Since starting to save in fiscal 2009, the town has set aside more than $2.9 million in its trust fund for this purpose.

Public employers for decades promised retirement health benefits to their workers without truly understanding the long-term financial impact, Alexiades said.

Cohasset citizens, meanwhile, voted at the May 12 Annual Town Meeting to establish a trust fund to cover the $32 million liability. As of fiscal year 2011, the town has earmarked $147,243 to tackle the liability. At a recent Board of Selectmen meeting, chair Paul Carlson called this amount "a drop in the bucket."

Town Meeting approved a $20,000 transfer to the trust fund, bringing the total amount budgeted for this liability to just under $170,000.

It's a necessary move to help bring financially stability to Cohasset, said Milanoski.

"The town can no longer ignore this expense. It's something we have to deal with, and that's why we brought it forward to Town Meeting and why it's in our financial policies, and why we're going to develop a plan to fund it this year," Milanoski said.

Many towns and cities just recently began to understand the likely costs of health care benefits their current and future retirees have earned over time.

"Focusing on this is a major long-term priority," said Geoff Beckwith, executive director of the Massachusetts Municipal Association, which represents town and city managers.

Relatively new government accounting rules that require towns to calculate and report that liability are meant to "reflect accurately to the public the cost of the promises that have been made on their behalf," Alexiades said.

If towns do not address those costs today, they are essentially asking future taxpayers to foot the bill, Alexiades said.

Many communities had hoped to start putting more money toward OPEB after paying off employee pensions, for which they have set aside money for years, Alexiades said.

But economic crises wiped out much of the value towns and cities had built up with their pension investments, and it could take another 20 years or so to fully fund many pension system liabilities, he said.

Meanwhile, post-employment health care liabilities threaten to become unaffordable if towns do not address them amid rising costs and the growing longevity of retirees, Alexiades said. "Communities that aren't addressing this [now] will eventually, in order to address it, need to make draconian austerity measures in order to bring the budget into balance."

Some communities are setting aside money for these obligations, but municipal data shows very few are saving enough to come close to fully funding the long-term cost any time soon.

State policymakers also are grappling with this issue.

A state commission this spring began trying to gauge the long-term cost of public retiree health care statewide, as well as life insurance, dental coverage and other post-employment benefits (or OPEB for short) besides pensions.

The liability to towns and cities over time may be as much as $30 billion and another $16.2 billion for state government, more than for public pensions, said Henry Dormitzer, a former Department of Revenue commissioner and the OPEB commission's chairman.

He said the group will ask: "Is this causing a cost problem, and if so, should we do something about it?"

Wait-and-see approach

The commission plans to deliver recommendations in November. Major public employee unions, which hold two commission seats, are arguing for a wait-and-see approach.

Some estimates of retiree health care liabilities are dated and have yet to reflect changes expected to yield major savings, said Shawn Duhamel, legislative liaison for the Retired State, County and Municipal Employees Association of Massachusetts.

"We do challenge the premise that this is unaffordable," said Duhamel, a commission member.

For example, a 2011 law that gave towns and cities more power over employee health plans is already saving money and requires eligible retirees to enroll in Medicare if they have not already done so, he said.

"Let's take a step back. Let's see the result of these varying reforms," Duhamel said.

The Taxpayers Foundation predicts these changes will trim retiree health care liabilities only about 10 percent, with many eligible retirees already on Medicare, Widmer said.

"This is still a mammoth and unaffordable obligation," he said.

Until recently, few state or municipal leaders viewed these costs in such terms. Most governments simply paid for post-employment benefits when the bills came due.

That began to change when a board that sets financial reporting standards for state and local governments said public employers by 2008 should determine and report the projected long-term cost of retiree benefits as employees earn them.

"The cost of these future benefits is a part of the cost of providing public services today," the Government Accounting Standards Board said in a summary of the new rules.

Now most towns and cities have estimated what such benefits will cost over time, as well as how much they would need to save each year to fully fund this liability in 30 years.

In many cases, the amounts that towns would have to set aside to fund their liabilities are double their current bills for retiree health care.

Yet local officials caution these estimates are based in part on assumptions about shifting factors, such as the rate of health care cost growth, and are subject to change.

Regardless, a growing number of communities have begun setting aside money for retiree benefits, with some placing the money in special trust funds.

That could prove to be to their benefit in the near term, too. Bond rating agencies recently told the OPEB commission they view retiree health care liabilities with the same weight as debt and pension costs when considering a state's financial health, Dormitzer said.

"I don't think it's a broad stretch to think that they would adopt a similar mechanism at the local level," he said, a decision that could affect local bond ratings.

Even towns saving already could find it impossible to keep up with costs, and changes to benefits for future retirees may be necessary, Widmer said.

CEF GRANT AWARDS 2011-2012

We at the Cohasset Education Foundation would like to thank you once again for your very generous support of our efforts to promote excellence in Cohasset's Public Schools. The results of our fall and spring grant application and approval process are listed below. In addition to this sort of direct funding of school projects, your donations also help the CEF build an endowment for the long-term health of the schools. Our principal-preserved endowment has already grown to over $535,000 and has the potential to earn significant returns for school investments each year.

We are very grateful for the incredible support the community provides and doubly so for your generosity which allows the CEF to fund these strategic grants and encourage teacher innovation. Thank you, and have a wonderful summer!

NEW HIRES

Changes at the top at Cohasset High

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

This fall, students and faculty will see some new faces in the administration office at Cohasset High School. Both a new principal and new assistant principal have been hired and will start their new positions on July 2.

Superintendent of Schools Barbara Cataldo announced in April that Carolyn Connolly, current assistant principal of Pembroke High School, was hired for the principal position. At last week's school committee meeting, Cataldo introduced Brian Scott, current vice principal of Catholic Memorial High in West Roxbury, as the new assistant principal of CHS.

Cataldo said of the newest hire, "We're very excited to have him on board. He is very invested in school culture, and we expect him to be a strong male role model," adding that Scott also has experience in coaching football and lacrosse. "We expect to have him a long time. His record shows he's committed to the field of education."

Cataldo also noted that the middle high school has now gained "two leaders out of Harvard."

Scott earned a master's of theological studies from Harvard's program in Secondary Education and Religion, while Connolly holds a master's in leadership from Harvard's Graduate School of Education.

School committee chair Jeanne Astino said that she looks forward to both of the new educators joining the Cohasset fold.

Astino said that Scott "seems very nice, very personable, and has a very good reputation. We're excited to welcome him into the Cohasset school department family and are looking forward to him joining us next week."

Connolly starts her new position the same day as Scott, but Astino said that the new principal has "already been on scene here and there as needed for hiring and interviews; it's been wonderful."

Astino concluded that the school department is "delighted to have both of them join us. We're looking forward to new energy."

"A great community exists in Cohasset, but maybe we can be doing some things to bring it out a little more. All the kids I've talked to loved their time in Cohasset; I think that's really important."
— Brian Scott, new CHS assistant principal

Connolly and Scott replace two educators who fulfilled the respective principal and assistant principal roles as interims. Connolly replaces Dr. Michael Gill, who worked as assistant principal since 2004 before becoming interim high school principal for the past year, following former principal Joel Antolini's departure last summer. Gill announced his resignation from the Cohasset school district in the spring after 32 years of service. He will take the helm as principal of Sacred Heart High School in Kingston this July.

Martin Geoghegan has been interim assistant principal for the past school year after Gill became interim principal.

Astino said that she would like to thank both Gill and Geoghegan for their contributions in these interim roles. However, since the positions were temporary, she noted that it was time for the school department to "look forward to where we are going and what we want to accomplish. We're delighted with the people who will be starting with us shortly."

Connolly said in April that she was eager to start her new job in Cohasset.

"I actually attended a high school (Boston Latin) that was set up like the Cohasset Middle-High School," she said. "I understand the environment and it's going to be a nice fit for me. It's a high performing, fairly small school."

Scott likewise said that he is looking forward to coming to Cohasset.

"I love the school system, love the community... It's been a really warm reception," said Scott. "I'm excited."

The new assistant principal believes that his prior experience as vice principal at Catholic Memorial, a position he's held for the past two years, will serve him well at Cohasset's public high school. Scott has fulfilled a variety of other roles, including coach, director of technology, summer school principal and theology department chair, since he started his tenure at Catholic Memorial in 2003.

Scott noted a few differences and similarities between CM and CHS.

"One of the things that's unique about CM, we really had to work to build community," Scott explained. "A great community exists in Cohasset, but maybe we can be doing some things to bring it out a little more. All the kids I've talked to loved their time in Cohasset; I think that's really important."

Scott also noted that although Cohasset is a public school, the student body is smaller than that of the Catholic school where he currently works. "I was looking for a small school," Scott said, "because in a small school, you can know every kid, know what they're good at, where they struggle, and how to help them... that's why I was looking at Cohasset."

The new assistant principal said that one of the things he's noticed about Cohasset students, so far, is that "they have a real drive toward excellence. The school has high expectations and holds the students to that, and from what I've seen, the students rise to meet them... That's really impressive to me."

Meanwhile, the search for a new principal of the Joseph Osgood Schools continues; former principal Sharon Bellao, began working in Cohasset last July and resigned from the position in May.

The superintendent said that there were a round of interviews for the position this week, and "we hope to get that settled in the next 10 days."

Stickers are on sale now

Stickers will be on sale during normal business hours at the Town Hall and the DPW garage. Stickers will not be sold on the weekend. Stickers are $65 for residents under the age of 65 and $35 for any additional vehicle registered at the same address. The sticker price for a person 65 and older is $25.

A copy of your current registration is required. If leasing your vehicle, you will need proof of residence in addition to the registration. This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, Sandy Beach, as well as, include parking at all areas in town that require a sticker. In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at the Department of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town. Please be advised that all Commercial Contractors and vehicles registered in a business name should pick up their stickers at the Department of Public Works. Marissa Gildea wins book award at St. Michael's

Congratulations to Marissa Gildea of Cohasset and a student at Notre Dame Academy, who was named the 2012 recipient of the Saint Michael's College Book Award for Academic Achievement with a Social Conscience.

The award recognizes students who demonstrate a commitment to leadership in volunteer service and academic achievement.

Award recipients, named at schools throughout the country, are high school juniors who are inductees of the National Honor Society or an equivalent school-sponsored honors organization. They must demonstrate a commitment to service activities in high school or community organizations, taking leadership roles in these activities.

Marissa was presented the book "First They Killed My Father: A Daughter of Cambodia Remembers" by Loung Ung, a 1993 Saint Michael's College graduate who has become a widely acclaimed author.

Rice U.

Greta Shwachman has been named to the President's Honor Roll for the spring semester at Rice University in Houston, Texas. Rice University's President's Honor Roll recognizes outstanding students who achieve a minimum GPA of 3.876.

Greta is currently interning in Philadelphia at St. Joseph's University as a member of the Breakthrough Collaborative, a program that puts low-income middle school students on the path to college and inspires high school and college students to become educators. Congratulations!

UMass Dartmouth

Olivia Kimla of Cohasset who is majoring in psychology at UMass Dartmouth, has been named to the spring 2012 chancellor's list in recognition of earning a semester grade point average of 3.8 or higher of a possible 4.0. Great news, Olivia!

St. Lawrence

Natalie G. Dignam of Cohasset has been selected for inclusion on the dean's list for academic achievement during the spring semester at St. Lawrence University in Canton, N.Y. Dignam, class of 2015, graduated from Cohasset Jr-Sr High School. To be eligible for the dean's list at St. Lawrence University, a student must have completed at least four semester units and have an academic average of 3.6 (based on a perfect 4.0 scale) for the semester.

Natalie was our "Life at CHS" columnist when she was a senior at Cohasset High. She has always been a star!

UVM

Congratulations to the following Cohasset students, who have been named to the dean's list for the spring 2012 semester at the University of Vermont:

- Lauren A. Allen, a junior majoring in elementary education K-6 in the College of Education & Social Services.
- Ellie D. Casey of Cohasset, a senior majoring in English in the College of Arts & Sciences.
- Tara M. Goodwin of Cohasset, a first-year student majoring in secondary education English in the College of Education & Social Services.

To be named to the dean's lists, students must have a grade-point average of 3.0 or better and rank in the top 20 percent of their class in their respective college or school.

Saint Anselm

The Rev. Augustine Kelly, dean of the college, announced that Thomas M. Condon, a business major, was named to the dean's list for the 2012 spring semester at Saint Anselm College, Manchester, N.H. Thomas, a resident of Cohasset, is a member of the Class of 2015.

To be eligible for this honor, a student must compile a grade point average of 3.0 or better.

UConn

University of Connecticut recently announced students who attained the dean's list for the 2012 spring semester. Among those receiving this honor was Erika Priess Orner of Cohasset

To make the dean's list, students must take at least 12 credits, finish the semester with a grade point average that is among the top 25 percent of students enrolled in their school or college, and have no grade below a C.

Pomfret

Pomfret School celebrated its 118th commencement On Sunday May 27, 2012. Among the graduates was Drew Cobin of Cohasset, son of Paulette Marino. Congratulations, Drew!

Clark U.

Molly K. Gallagher of Cohasset received a degree from Clark University on Sunday, May 20, 2012. Molly graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in communication and culture.

Stonehill

Stonehill College recently named Cohasset resident Samantha A. Sears, a member of the Class of 2014, to its dean's list for the 2012 spring semester.

To qualify for the dean's list at Stonehill, students must have a semester grade point average of 3.50 or better and must have completed successfully all courses for which they were registered.

Fairfield

Congratulations to the following Cohasset residents, who received degrees from Fairfield University on May 20:

Matthew Galligan, who received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Fairfield University's College of Arts and Sciences.

Kenneth Muir, who also received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Fairfield University's College of Arts and Sciences.

All the best for a bright future, Matt and Ken!

Ithaca honors

Hats off to Matthew Brooks, a resident of Cohasset and a Outdoor Adventure Leadership major in the class of 2015, who was named to the Dean's List in Ithaca College's School of Health Sciences and Human Performance for the spring 2012 semester.

Gettysburg College

Christopher Kuppens of Cohasset graduated with a bachelor's degree from Gettysburg College on May 20, 2012. Christopher majored in political science.

Colby College

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

House approves MBTA assistance bill

Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, joined his colleagues in the House of Representatives in passing legislation that closes the MBTA's gap for the upcoming fiscal year and provides assistance to the regional transit authorities. The bill provides for the continuing operation of the commuter boats and also requires the Massachusetts Port Authority reports back to the Legislature a timetable for possible transition of commuter boat operations from the MBTA to MassPort.

"With the support of my colleagues and commuter boat riders we were successful in providing for the continuation of the commuter boat services," said Bradley. "This plan allows the residents of the South Shore convenient and affordable public transportation options. The bill also directs the MBTA to develop long term solutions to the Authority's fiscal problems."

The bill includes a provision that requires MassPort to submit a proposal by Aug. 31 to the Transportation and Ways and Means Committees showing how it will own, operate and maintain ferryboat service after the MBTA transfers its property, equipment and interests. The proposal would include details about federal requirements, financial issues and how operation of the ferryboats impacts the economic development of Boston Harbor.

This legislation first transfers $1.5 million in excess snow and ice removal funds to the regional transit authorities as supplemental assistance and also authorizes a one-time transfer of a total of $51 million from the Motor Vehicle Inspection Trust Fund to the MBTA and regional transit authorities for preventative maintenance expenses. The bill also increases fare evasion fines, which will provide additional aid to the transportation system. These funds will allow the MBTA to have a balanced budget for the next fiscal year, which begins on July 1.

Harbor House Day Care students receive diplomas

Some of the graduation class may be too young to read or write but that didn't stop them from enjoying their special day. Of the 21 students in the Harbor House Child Day Care graduation Class of 2012, ranging in age from 6 months to 5 years old, three officially matriculated to kindergarten at the annual graduation day celebration at Harbor House Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Hingham. "The day care children are a wonderful component to the social programs at the center, bringing continued joy to our staff and residents," said Susan Jessup, administrator of Harbor House.

thank you!!

As another school year comes to a close, the Cohasset Education Foundation would like to thank everyone in the community for their extraordinary support. As of June 25, 2012 the CEF has raised over 1.3 million dollars in contributions and has awarded over $640,000 in grants to the schools. Your donations have also allowed the Endowment Fund to reach over $535,000. This success was made possible because of your overwhelming support and participation during the Annual Appeal, Spelling Bee, Vegas Night and Fun Run. We feel very fortunate to be a part of a community that supports its students and excellence in education. THANK YOU! For more information about the CEF or how you can become involved please visit our website at www.cohasseteducation.com.

FOR THE RECORD

We are driven by deadlines

GREGORY MATHIS

"Deadline – a date or time before which something must be done."

It could very well be the Webster's dictionary definition of the word "deadline," but this quote happens to come from a scene in "The Paper," one of the best – if not the best – movies of all time in capturing the characters and spirit of a newsroom.

Actor Robert Duvall (the 1994 movie also stars Michael Keaton and Glenn Close, and was directed by Ron Howard) is the editor of a New York City daily newspaper and he's trying to get his editors in his office for a 3 p.m. story budget meeting.

"3:07," Duvall yells from his office as the start time continues to slip, soon to be followed by another shout into the newsroom – "3:09", adding, "Anyone around here respect a deadline anymore?"

When the editors finally arrive in his newsroom office, Duvall opens a dictionary and reads the quote that opens this column.

The fact of the matter is deadlines are a very important part of the newspaper production process and it starts with those in the community looking to get their information into the paper.

Deadlines for submissions from the public, including regular columnists, press releases from groups and organizations, wedding/engagement announcements and people in the news items, letters to the editor, user generated photos and more, are the first step in the process. Those deadlines are earlier and well before the paper hits the streets and even the press deadline, mostly because there's a system for handling that type of copy that takes some time.

Our reporters and photographers have deadlines too. They need to file stories and photographs ahead of the production deadline to allow editors time to copy edit, headline and place stories and photographs on pages.

Editors have many deadlines in addition to managing the various deadlines for outside submissions and staff. And this is where the rubber meets the road because by this time in the process the paper is being designed in advance of it going to press and the margin for error decreases significantly.

If anyone has missed a deadline along the way, this is where it really starts to bottle up and this is where it starts to cost money.

You've heard the expression "time is money." Nowhere is that more evident than in our business. With printing schedules lined up one after another and crews positioned to get newspapers on and off the presses in a timely manner, there's even less margin for error at the backend of the process.

Deadlines – and everyone adhering to them – will become increasingly more important in the next several weeks as we transition to a new content management system for producing and designing our newspapers.

Deadlines differ from paper to paper and editor to editor, so please make sure to contact your local editor to find out what their deadline is and do your best to stick to it. That will help in more ways than you know.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cohasset teacher bids farewell

Dear Cohasset, as I close-out my career in public school education, I would like to thank the residents of Cohasset for their undying support of the schools and for allowing me to spend over 32 years as a teacher, assistant principal, and principal in your school district. I have had the opportunity to meet thousands of Cohasset students and most of their parents, as well as hundreds of dedicated and talented faculty. The hundreds of thousands of personal interactions I've had through the years have left me a very rich man.

As I cleaned out my office this week, I realized how much I will miss being a part of Cohasset. I am truly blessed to have spent most of my career working with your kids. Thank you very much!

Mike Gill, Cohasset High School teacher, Double Eagle Dr., Marshfield

Senior citizen looks forward to 'our turn'

Always in the habit of taking long walks and riding bikes in Wompatuck State Park, my husband and I were stopped by the weather one winter that was icier than usual. Fortunately, there were exercise classes we could attend at the senior center. We signed up in our late 60s. All went well until the Community Center needed its gym back – for children's gymnastics. Our senior classes were held sometimes at the Town Hall, sometimes across Depot Court to the old post office building and sometimes in the windowless room in the basement of the Community Center. The instructors made the best of it and so did we for more than a dozen years. Finally, when the last instructor left we went to another senior center for exercise classes.

In my late 70s, I returned to the center; first for arthritis exercise classes – as long as they lasted as well as the book club and the knitting group. Now in my 80s, walking has become more difficult so I try to park as near to the building as possible, but even with a handicap placard it is a challenge as there is only one handicap spot in the area down the street. No one likes to take up the business parking spaces and the drop off/pick up of nursery school children takes so many spaces that we are left with the no parking area around the common parking half on the sidewalk/half on the road. There are other activities at the senior center that appeal to me but the parking is too difficult to handle.

In contrast, the wonderful Monday morning coffee at the Lightkeepers fills the need for us seniors who often live alone to socialize, share ideas and enjoy the comfortable surroundings with safe parking. We are so grateful for the Friends of Elder Affairs who provide this opportunity but the season is limited. We need a year round place more than one morning a week that is warm in the winter and cool in the summer where we can keep in touch with our friends and meet new ones.

It was really exciting about four years ago to learn of the possibility for a new senior center building that would offer us all that we are needing now. I have made a couple of contributions to the funds for planning the building and I am hoping my senior friends and I will still be around to enjoy it. We are part of the town's citizens who have paid taxes for over 50 years, built and re-built schools, churches, police and fire stations and are looking forward to our turn!

Joan Trask, Bancroft Road

Many to thank for arts festival's success

South Shore Art Center wishes to thank the community of Cohasset for providing us with such a beautiful space for our arts festival – this year our 57th. We are grateful for the support from the town and its residents: Special thank you to everyone at the Town Hall, DPW, Police and Fire departments who make our jobs so much easier.

A big thank you to Tim Waite, Arts Festival Coordinator, for presenting an outstanding Arts Festival to record crowds.

Thanks to all our wonderful sponsors: Audi Norwell/Porsche of Norwell, Hingham Institution for Savings, Image Resolutions, Dean & Hamilton/The Cook Estate, Roomscapes Luxury Design Center, South Shore Music Circus, Renewal by Andersen, Work N' Gear, Tanglewood, Conway Insurance Agency, Pilgrim Bank, Barbara Bahr Sheehan Design, Colony Rug, Goodwin Graphics, Graham Waste, Granite City Electric, Panopticon Imaging, RBC Wealth Management, Rockland Trust, Sullivan, Garrity & Donnelly Insurance Agency, The Bulfinch Group, Atlantic Bagel, Shaw's, and many more.

Jazz Reception sponsors included Audi Norwell/Porsche of Norwell, Boston Private Bank & Trust, Dean & Hamilton/The Cook Estate, Curtis Liquors, HarborSide Wine & Spirits, Stop & Shop Cohasset and The Fresh Feast.

Finally, a big thank you to our fabulous volunteers, the energetic youth crew, and the Art Center staff who kept things running smoothly throughout the weekend.

SANDY BEACH

Summer arrives with improvements

PAT MURPHY

Two weeks before opening day it looked like the beach was ready for the summer. After the nor'easter, we had a major clean up on our hands. As always, the crew worked tirelessly to bring our beautiful beach back to its pristine beauty. But it took more time and equipment than usual.

Now the real summer weather has certainly arrived. With it came some necessary improvements to the bathhouse. The eaves appeared to need painting. They obviously are quite old and the wood had started to rot. Thus, instead of just repairing, we needed to replace them.

Our handicapped ramp had also started to deteriorate and we decided to replace it with a lighter material. The existing one has served us well for over 25 years with repairs and replacements along the way, but has always been very difficult to store due to how heavy and large each piece was. This was due to adherence to environmental requirements. We hope you will be pleased with the new walkway.

Our sincere thanks to all those generous people who have already responded to our annual letter asking for your support. You are the reason we are able to open and maintain the beach each year.

The Sandy Beach Association wishes everyone many hours of summer fun at our beautiful beach!

HEALTH NOTES

Natural history of Holly Hill Farm

STEVE BOBO

...the land of Holly Hill Farm has hosted a variety of farming activities since the earliest colonial days when Hingham farmers drove their livestock through the woods to graze in the farm's marshes and open meadows bordering Little Harbor

With all the publicity about tainted food products and the news about major food producers disregarding National regulations, it's interesting to speculate about whether such events will lead to the increase of farms such as that in Cohasset: our own treasure; Holly Hill Farm.

Holly Hill farm has been growing agricultural products since the land was first occupied by white settlers before the Revolution; and probably even before that. Land there furnished an eclectic array of agricultural produce from salt-water hay to garden vegetables and lumber. Some of the machinery used in farming was built by Richardson White before his death in 1984 and tales abound of the use of his tractors pulling fully submerged trucks out of mud holes and towing huge logs out of the woods.

The secret to the success of Holly Hill is its adaptability; the ability to innovate and the fierce determination of its owners to retain the principles of honesty and hard work, which seem to be getting lost these days.

Starting when Cohasset was a part of Hingham, the land at Holly Hill was partitioned into parallel ribbons delineated by stonewalls as it was cleared for farming. Everyone in Hingham received a one-mile long strip of width depending on his holdings and importance in Hingham. The earliest walls delineating the strips still exist and may be seen by anyone walking into the property. In 1730, when Cohasset broke away from Hingham, the land became common ground and was farmed by individuals, many with names still on the Town register of residents. The area and quality of land depended the desires of those who used it and the quality of the grown product. Families with names like Doane, Pratt, Peck, Lambert, James, Bates, Lincoln and Cushing became associated with discrete parcels, which were swapped and sold.

The current farm operators are the 5th generation of the White family to farm the land since the 1840's. However, the land of Holly Hill Farm has hosted a variety of farming activities since the earliest colonial days when Hingham farmers drove their livestock through the woods to graze in the farm's marshes and open meadows bordering Little Harbor. In the 17th and 18th Centuries, the woods, in many places, gave way to sheep and cattle pastures, as evidenced by stonewalls that still run through the woods. Around the time of the American Revolution, David Nichols established his homestead and is believed to have built the two late 18th Century barns that still stand. The Doane family farmed the land in the early 19th Century. In the 1840's the Doane homestead farm was bought by Thomas Richardson who used the farm as a summer home. Thomas' great-grandson, Richardson ("Dick") White, used the farm from the early 1930's to the late 1940's to headquarter, a large vegetable "truck farm," most of whose growing fields were scattered about Cohasset and neighboring towns. Dick White, also a sculptor in bronze as well as builder of his own tractors, used the farm for his sawmill and clearing operations between 1950 and his retirement.

Frank and Jean White, Dick White's son and daughter-in-law, moved back to Cohasset in 1998 and shortly thereafter began the current organic operation. The farm is managed today by Co-Farm Managers Hannah Hobbs and Ben Wolbach. Jon Belber, director of the farm's educational programs, also helps. They are a friendly lot and quite willing to give out some literature telling of the farm and its past.

Holly Hill Farm currently has 3-4 acres under active cultivation, most of which supports the wide variety of vegetables, herbs and flowers which are sold at the farm stand in the main barn, at Cohasset's Farmers' Market and at several local restaurants. Produce includes, in season, arugula, beans, beets, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, celery, chard, collards, cucumbers, eggplants, garlic, leeks, lettuce, mixed salad greens, onions, peas, sweet and hot peppers, potatoes, pumpkins, radishes, scallions, summer and winter squash, tomatoes and turnips. Their flower gardens and herb garden produce 40 or more varieties of cut flowers and 15 or more herbs. The farm uses naturally derived materials to control pests. No herbicides are used in their weed control program. Soil fertility is maintained and improved by using farm-produced compost made from leaves, horse manure, grass clippings and seaweed.

Never will we hear from the food industry that their products with additives designed to enhance color or shelf life, are less tasty and nutritious than natural vegetables.

But it may be a choice you wish to make.

ONE-DAY ADVENTURES

The Mendon Drive-In proved to be a family-friendly one-day adventure. Photo/John McMahon

A trip down memory lane

JOHN MCMAHON

My name is John McMahon. I have lived in Cohasset for almost five years with my wife, Angelica, and now 5-year-old daughter, Amanda. Cohasset is filled with many simple pleasures – opening the mailbox on Friday evening and finding the latest edition of the Cohasset Mariner is definitely one of them. Now I have been given the opportunity to start my own bi-weekly column and I could not be more excited. Every two weeks I will recommend a family-friendly one-day adventure complete with some fun facts and all the details you need to know and go.

This past weekend my family and I headed 55 miles southwest to the Mendon Drive-In (Mendon, Mass.) for the "Brave"/"Avengers" double feature. My wife and I discovered the Mendon Drive-In 12 years ago ("Chocolat" was the feature film for our first visit) and have made the pilgrimage at least once every summer since. The Mendon Drive-In has been open since 1954. It has two screens, each one able to accommodate up to 400 cars seven nights a week from Memorial Day to Labor Day. The cost is $25 per carload for a double feature.

Pulling into the venue, you get a huge sense of nostalgia, from the beautiful old marquee at the Route 16 entrance to the vintage snack bar complete with jukebox, you are reminded why drive-in movie theaters are such a huge part of American pop culture. Richard Hollingshead Jr. opened the first one in Camden, N.J., back in 1933. During its heyday of the late 1950s there were more than 4,000 drive-in theaters in the United States including ones in Marshfield, Braintree, Quincy and Weymouth. Sadly, thanks to rising costs of real estate and the video rental boom of the 1980s, there are fewer than 400 drive-in theaters left.

Susan Swanson, one of the co-owners of the Mendon Drive-In, says that business has steadily grown over the past several years as families have a renewed appreciation for a great night of entertainment at a reasonable price. Back in 1987, Susan (who grew up in Mendon) took her life savings and purchased the drive-in and 25 years later says it is the best decision she ever made. The first movie she showed after purchasing the theatre was the Disney classic "The Aristocats" and her favorite movies of all time are "The Lion King" and "Toy Story 3." Susan's fondest Mendon Drive-In memory – when two of their most loyal customers held their wedding reception at the venue back in 2009.

Here are some tips to help ensure you have a great experience at the Mendon Drive-In:

• The first movie cannot start until dusk (around 9 p.m. these days) so pack pajamas for the young kids. That way they can get comfortable, especially if you plan to stay for both films.

• Bring your fold up chairs to set up in back of your car and make sure your car has an FM radio or bring a portable FM radio so you can listen to the movie.

• You are going to want to get there early especially for new releases as sellouts are common occurrences. The box office opens at 6:15 p.m. on weekends.

• Bring cheese and crackers, salads then treat yourself to some soft serve ice cream from the snack bar closer to show time.

• Pack a Frisbee, a soccer ball and a favorite board game to enjoy with the kids as you wait for the movie to start.

• Bug spray is a must, cash is a must (no credit cards) and, believe it or not, pets are welcome.

A night at the Mendon Drive-In is a fun and memorable way to enjoy a summer night with the entire family. It's a great value and an opportunity to experience an important piece of Americana. Most of all, as we now consume movies on demand in our homes, on our lap tops or even on our phones, it is an chance to experience a motion picture as it was originally intended, as an event.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hoyts appreciate support at Cohasset Triathlon

Team Hoyt (Rick and Dick Hoyt) had a spectacular day on Sunday on Sandy Beach in Cohasset. Wow – what a day and what a great event! We want to thank Bill Burnett from Streamline Events LLC for putting on yet another great triathlon – very well organized from start to finish. And of course the beautiful weather helped as well.

We would also like to thank the local politicians and residents for supporting this event, as well as all the police officers, fire department, and EMTs for being on hand to keep us safe in the water and on the streets. And of course an event of this capacity could not be held without the many volunteers that put in their time to make things run smoothly.

Rick and I did not realize how much the residents of Cohasset would enjoy watching us take part in this event, but on Sunday they were lined along the beach as well as the bike and run course, calling "Go Team Hoyt" and cheering us on every step of the way; it almost felt like we were doing the Boston Marathon the crowds were so supportive! Thank you to all of you that come out to cheer us and all the other athletes on – it means a lot to all of us.

We hope you all have a great summer, and Rick and I hope to see you all next June at the next Cohasset Triathlon.

Dick Hoyt, Team Hoyt, 241 Mashapaug Road, Holland, MA

Triathlon a 'terrific asset' to town

Thank you Cohasset. My husband and I both raced in the Cohasset Triathlon this past weekend. We competed in this event a few years ago; the race and other great experiences in the area contributed to our recently moving to town in January. As new residents this year's triathlon was a great way for us to get involved in the community and meet some of our neighbors. We both understand that an event like this can cause stress and complications to the weekend routine, but on balance we think that the race is a terrific asset for the town, promoting community involvement around an athletic and healthy lifestyle activity. Thank you to the race organizers for being so professional and again thank you to everyone in Cohasset that directly or indirectly supported, or... tolerated the race.

Carolyn Soules. Cohasset

Cohasset ideal location for triathlon

Before moving back east in 2009, I had taken a long break from triathlons. When I realized my new town had its own event, it gave me just the motivation I needed to get back into triathlon shape. In 2010, my wife and I helped direct tri-athletes on the bike leg at the end of our street, but last year and this year, we both participated in the triathlon. We're really lucky to have such a well-run event here in Cohasset. It's an ideal location for a triathlon. While out warming up on my bike on Jerusalem Road I heard someone going by say "what a beautiful view." It really is. We're lucky to live in such a beautiful place, and an event like this shows off our town in the best possible light to the hundreds of visitors that come each year.

We've met a lot of people through the triathlon, and it was really nice to see so many friends and neighbors out on the course, whether participating in the triathlon, volunteering or cheering on their friends and family. My kids are too young now, but I look forward to the day when we'll be able to make the triathlon a family event. What better way to promote a healthy and active lifestyle to your kids than to have a triathlon in your town? So thanks to Bill Burnett and everyone else involved for bringing such a wonderful event to our town. Looking forward to next year!

Jim Frame, 68 Summer St.

Local race gaining notoriety

As a three time competitor in the Cohasset Triathlon, I wanted to be sure to express my thanks to all volunteers and townspeople who have made this race possible. I feel it is an extraordinary event, which shows the best our town has to offer, and every year is better than the one prior. Whether you volunteered, came out to cheer, or were impacted by a road restriction/closure, your willingness to support the race for a few hours one morning a year makes all the difference.

Our "local" race is quickly becoming nationally known as a great destination event, and to have it continue to shine is a wonderful asset for our town. Thanks to all for helping to make it happen.

Michael Doherty, 27 Ash St.

Triathlon showcases Cohasset

Congratulations Cohasset! Sunday's sixth Triathlon was an amazing event our town should be quite proud of. My extended family and I look forward to this event each year. There is no better way to showcase not only what a great town this is, but how generous the people are. Race organizers, volunteers, participants, neighbors, emergency professionals, store owners and residents all come together in their own way to ensure the true spirit of our town is experienced by all.

This year I had a chance to reflect on how special it all is while I watched and cheered for participants as they worked their way through the course. I had the distinct pleasure of seeing our town through the eyes of friends from Hopkinton, Newton, and even as far away as Virginia. I can't imagine a better event or a better place to have it! It's a great reminder of just how lucky we all are to live in such a special town!

Marci Comeau, 120 Nichols Road

People make triathlon special

Thank you to Bill Burnett and the scores of volunteers who made possible another successful Cohasset Triathlon. Thanks, too, to the Sandy Beach Association, police and fire personnel, the Board of Selectmen, and other town officials who all supported the event throughout the entire process. It was great to see all the vendors, volunteers, participants, and spectators gathered together to enjoy the venue and the event. Of course, the beautiful weather brings out the best in everyone, and it shines a bright light on Cohasset's natural beauty.

But, rain or shine, it's the people who make it happen and it's the people who make the event such a pleasure to be associated with, be it as a competitor, cheerleader, or spectator. (And having the CHS cheerleaders there was a very nice touch. I hope the girls had fun because it was much appreciated by everyone who crossed the line.)

I hope this is just the beginning of this event's long history in Cohasset, and that when the fourth volume of Cohasset's history is written, the Cohasset Tri will be a featured entry.

A Cohasset horror story?

'Found footage' film fuels internet rumors

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

An independent horror movie with Cohasset in its title is courting some controversy online.

Claiming to contain "found footage" of three murders that occurred in 2009 right here in Cohasset, the documentary "Cohasset Snuff Film" suggests that horrifying events took place in a sleepy Massachusetts town that were quickly buried by town officials wishing to obscure the truth.

Not so fast.

Those who live in town know the truth: there is no "real" Cohasset snuff film, and there were no actual murders. The indie horror film of the same name is a work of fiction directed by a New Hampshire native who picked Cohasset as his movie's setting because his grandmother owned a home in town that he visited as a kid; also, he once lived on Cohasset Street in Van Nuys, Calif. (interestingly enough, there is also a Cohasset, Calif.). The film was made by a small crew in a few choice locations in and around Cohasset last August.

Whether intentional or not, the film's trailer has elicited plenty of questions online, from the trailer posted on Youtube.com to horror movie blogs and the film's own Facebook page. Those who view the trailer are asking: Is this for real? Or is it fiction based on true events? And if these murders happened, why doesn't anyone seem to know about them? Promotions for the film even go as far to say that a Google search for the murders won't render anything because town officials have worked so hard to bury the story and pretend the crimes never happened.

But that's all part of the marketing.

Another part of indie film marketing 101? Telling film industry bloggers and reporters that town officials were trying to block the movie-making process because "people in Cohasset are in a panic."

The director of "Cohasset Snuff Film" stated in multiple interviews that town officials, including the police department and "a high-ranking school official" contacted him with their concerns over the film creating a local uproar that could possibly "incite a homicide." Bold claims, and a bold attempt to blur the lines between fact and fiction. So what really happened in Cohasset last summer?

The real story is this: California-based filmmaker Edward Payson found a horror movie script on Craigslist.com that caught his eye. After rewriting it, Payson decided to place the setting in Cohasset, Mass. and film some of the movie on location. The director put together a three-man crew and filmed in California, New Hampshire and, yes, Cohasset; production took place last summer.

This is not the first time Hollywood has flocked to Cohasset. "The Witches of Eastwick" was famously filmed in recognizable locations around the village in the summer of 1986, and locals enjoyed regular sightings of stars Cher, Michelle Pfeiffer, Susan Sarandon and Jack Nicholson. The 1992 comedy "HouseSitter," staring Goldie Hawn and Steve Martin, also filmed scenes in Cohasset. The last time a movie came to town was in October 2010; the independent film "Sunny Side Up" starring Parker Posey filmed scenes on South Main Street in the village, the Red Lion Inn and at JJ's Dairy Hut on 3A.

Unlike the Hollywood productions that took over the village before, Payson's small-scale production is calling attention to Cohasset for altogether different reasons. Lacking the big budget and the star power, part of the indie horror film's appeal is the question as to whether or not the events of the film actually transpired. With the box office success of horror films like the "Paranormal Activity" series and its predecessor, "The Blair Witch Project," "found footage" films have a become a popular sub-genre in the horror movie realm. Blurring the lines between fact and fiction is what the director hopes will drive horror movie fans to check out his film.

He also hopes the film, rather than attract negative attention because of the title and dark subject matter, will help put Cohasset on the map.

"I honestly hope this becomes Cohasset's Blair Witch Project," said Payson.

The "Cohasset Snuff Film," an independent horror movie, will make its debut in select theaters on Halloween 2012.

Synopsis: "Cohasset Snuff Film"

The below synopsis for Edward Payson's "found footage" indie horror film reads like a news story, but is in fact a work of fiction: "In 2009, the small town of Cohasset, Massachusetts was rocked with tragedy. A 17-year-old high school senior named Collin Mason murdered three classmates. All the murders were videotaped and uploaded to the Internet via bit torrent sites and for three days, the world viewed the murders of these three innocent teens. Through legal action, the parents of the victims were able to remove all footage from the Internet and the town tried to save face by pretending it never happened. Bootleg copies of this footage are still passed around and downloaded through illegal means. The impact of this video is still being felt in Cohasset today. The video has become infamous, and is now referred to as 'The Cohasset Snuff Film.'" – The Internet Movie Database, imdb.com

'High-ranking official'

Didn't notice the ragtag film crew around town last summer? The matter never came before the Board of Selectmen or School Committee, though the crew filmed scenes on the high school grounds. Payson said he did not need to seek any permits to film in town because it was such a small-scale production; he said he filmed mainly in the woods, outside of buildings including the First Parish Meeting House, and along the seawall near the Atlantica (Payson added that he was careful not to film any signs with establishment's names). However, Payson said in an interview with morehorror.com that the school official who contacted him "hinted that the school would take legal action against us."

In a phone call from California, Payson did not want to state exactly who this high-ranking official was. The Mariner called Superintendent Barbara Cataldo, who confirmed that she did, in fact, call Payson to comment on the film, but denies stating that locals were panicking; rather, Cataldo said she expressed concern because one character in the film had the same name as a town employee.

"I didn't talk to the director at all," Cataldo said in a phone call. "Nobody here in the school is contacting them...We've known about it, but we didn't do anything about it."

The superintendent explained that she was notified a film was being made, and while some of it was apparently shot on school grounds, the crew did not film inside the Middle-High School. While Cataldo said she never spoke to the director personally, "I did send them a heads up because the main character's name" was the same as that of a Cohasset town employee.

Other than that, the superintendent said she had no other concerns about the film, and certainly wasn't worried about it causing any panic.

"The people of Cohasset are very intelligent and can make their own assessment," said Cataldo. "They know nothing like that happened here."

Payson's commentary on the matter matched Cataldo's – somewhat. While he also stated that he did not speak to the superintendent personally, he said that she left him a message: "I actually saved the voicemail."

"Someone that was very nice, very high-ranking, called and said that some people in Cohasset were in a panic," Payson said in a phone call, adding that he had the film's producer call her back. The official allegedly told the producer that Cohasset's police department flagged the film's Facebook page because "someone in the school district had a similar name or something," Payson said. "It was nothing big, but they said there might be a problem."

Deputy Police Chief William Quigley denies this claim. "We haven't flagged anything," he responded to the Mariner in an email. The deputy chief explained that the department learned about the movie back when it was being made, but "it really has not been an issue.

"It's just a person and an art project," Quigley added. "Nothing more."

Why Cohasset?

Despite the slight local controversy, Payson said that when choosing Cohasset for his film, he had the best intentions in mind. After coming across the script on craigslist.com in 2009, searching for a senior thesis project for film school, Payson purchased the "snuff film" story, which at the time did not have a town in the title.

"The original story didn't have a set place, but it was supposed to be somewhere in New England," said Payson. "I love everything about New England," the director, who hails from New Hampshire, added. "Everybody shoots in California, where I'm living now, but I didn't really want to do that, especially for a school film."

Payson said he chose Cohasset in particular because his grandmother owned a house here, which he visited as a child. He also lived on Cohasset Street in Van Nuys, Calif., so the choice seemed serendipitous. It was the town's architecture that really sold the director.

"Cohasset, being a very small town and a very rich town, has everything there as far as architecture" that he wanted to film, said Payson, which he added is a stark contrast from schools in California that have "barbed wire and metal detectors."

As he researched the town, Payson quickly discovered that Cohasset had caught the eye of Hollywood filmmakers before. After learning that "The Witches of Eastwick" was filmed in Cohasset, and that actress Kate Bosworth once called the town home, Payson concluded, "It's like the New England Beverly Hills."

Wanting to pay tribute to classic colonial New England towns, Payson said that he also wanted to tell a good story.

"I really, really liked the idea," Payson said of the horror movie script he purchased. The director decided to give the movie "a documentary feel, rather than just the killer story."

The director also wanted to imbue the dark film with a positive message about finding hope amid the challenges of high school and teenage angst.

"Although it is very gruesome and kind of pushes the boundaries, it does, in the end, have a good message people will learn from," he said.

"All the time, in small towns and everything, high school is a brutal, brutal place. 'If you're not in my clique, you don't exist to me,' is pretty much how it is in high school... People will do anything to fit in."

The director explained that he hopes his film will get students to think twice about mistreating their classmates, warning against the cruel, clique-centered mentality that can turn "someone brooding into a killer or a recluse.

"It's not going to be just a slasher film," Payson concluded. "There are a lot of things that make you think in there."

He also said that he hopes the people of Cohasset will embrace the film rather than judging it by its title.

"I think people are thrown off by the name 'snuff film,'" Payson admitted. "Usually that isn't a good term to put in your title, but in this case it works. The content is what [people are] worried about because they haven't seen it yet."

"The Cohasset Snuff Film" premieres on Halloween night in Los Angeles and will show at select theaters in Boston, New York City, San Francisco and Tampa that same week. But what the director really wants? A Cohasset premiere.

"If the town of Cohasset would let us, I would love to have a screening in Cohasset to coincide with the L.A. premiere," said Payson.

Found footage

Marketing efforts for the film on the following websites propitiate the idea that the "Cohasset Snuff Film" contains actual footage from real-life murders.

Calling the film a documentary:
"Fact or fiction? You be the judge on this one. Apparently the town of Cohasset has tried to cover up the story regarding the Colin Mason murders and trying to find any truth on the subject is a hard task in itself. However, a documentary film began chronicling the murders but was never finished and reportedly destroyed. That is until now... Edward Payson has out together the footage for the upcoming documentary 'The Cohasset Snuff Film' and we have the first official trailer which you can view below. Go check it out and see what you make of the story." – horrormovies.ca

Thinking it's based on a true story:
"Now this film might be a little different then the normal trailers I post, just because according to the Facebook page of the film, it says that this film is based on a True Event. I tried to look it up but could not find anything. However on their page again I came upon this post. 'Some may wonder why Collin Mason's story is not an easy Google search away. They wonder why his story has never been on any news programming? The reason is...The small town of Cohasset tried to bury the crime, pretending it never happened. A documentary was to be made about the Collin Mason Murders but the documentary was never finished and the footage ordered destroyed. It went unfinished until now...' So is it based on a true story? I am not sure but I cannot say it is not either. I will say that the movie looks pretty twisted and if this did happen, more people definitely should be aware of what happened." – horrorsmorgasbord.com

Concerned about public perception:
"This? looks so EPIC! I bet the only dislike is from the town itself!"
"umm... is? this a real snuff film, and if so, you people are sick." – Youtube.com commenters

Town Manager that same month.

The selectmen make committee appointments and reappointments at the start of each fiscal year. Two weeks ago, the board voted to appoint or reappoint any current board members with uncontested seats. The only committees with contested seats were the Con Com, Zoning Board of Appeals and the Harbor Commission. Of these three boards, the Con Com had the most new applicants, with five citizens submitting letters of interest to be appointed to the board.

It took the selectmen a few moments to appoint the new Con Com members; selectman Martha Gjesteby made a motion to reappoint Karoff and appoint J. Patrick Kennedy, an attorney with property law experience; no one seconded. Selectman Leland Jenkins then made a motion for to appoint Kennedy and Dr. William Henry, a veterinary surgeon. No one seconded this motion, either.

Selectman Fred Koed suggested the board vote on each applicant separately; he then motioned to appoint Kennedy, and the board voted unanimously to do so. Gjesteby again motioned to reappoint Karoff, but again, no one seconded. When Jenkins again motioned for Henry, chairman Paul Carlson seconded, and the board voted 3-1 in favor with Gjesteby dissenting (Selectman Diane Kennedy was absent, but would have recused herself from voting to appoint J. Patrick Kennedy, her husband).

In addition to Karoff, Kennedy and Henry, two other applicants vied for the Con Com open seats: E. Briscoe Rodgers and James Fox. Last week, the selectmen voted unanimously to reappoint Con Com chair David Farrag to a full three-year position.

Last year, a more significant shakeup occurred on the Con Com when the selectmen unseated three veteran members who were up for reappointment. At that same time, Karoff was then demoted from his full membership to a one-year associate position.

The selectmen were split 3-2 on the reappointment vote. The decision led to 120 residents signing a nine-page petition opposing the vote, asking the selectmen to rescind the new appointments, reinstate the ousted commissioners and apologize publicly.

Selectman Paul Carlson said at the time that the board could not undo its decision. "We cannot have a system of automatic, lifetime reappointments simply because the appointees wish to be reappointed."

Karoff said in a phone call on Wednesday that he had received a lot of sympathetic phone calls from folks who watched the selectmen's meeting or heard the news. While Karoff admitted that he was disappointed he won't serve on the Con Com this year, he also said, "I'll live to fight another day."

The longtime commissioner, who is 82, had told the selectmen that his age would not impede him from continuing to serve on the board, adding that he has retired twice but doesn't like it. He also told them he rarely misses a meeting. Karoff said the following day that he was a bit shaken up by the selectmen's decision.

"It's uncanny to learn that of the candidates, one who had eight years experience, was a vice chair and a full member, and was asking to go back on as an associate member, which has to be appointed each year, was simply not voted upon, when someone who asked and had no experience...It's a strange set of affairs... Some of the people that have been appointed... although they're nice guys, come unprepared and with no experience."

Keeper of the clock

In another matter, the selectmen received two applications for the "Keeper of the Clock" position, a role that involves maintaining the First Parish Meeting House's clock. Ted Carr, former selectmen chair and current member of the Economic Development Committee, applied, as well as Mary Kate McKinnon. However, the role has been performed informally by Norwell resident Noel Ripley, Jr., who took over the task after his father passed several years ago. Servicing the clock has been a family tradition.

Carlson said that if what the Ripley family has been doing all these years has been working, "why fix it?"

Gjesteby agreed that "it would be prudent" to continue allowing Ripley to maintain the clock. "You have to have someone agile enough to climb up" and service the clock, she explained. "This is not a political job; it's an active job."

Carlson called Ripley's work "a labor of love."

Rather than mess with tradition, the selectmen decided to take no action on the matter, and did not make an official appointment for the keeper of the clock position.

INVESTIGATION

third party witness (Deputy Quigley). If Chief DeLuca would have spoken to either (police union president) Officer (Patrick) Reardon or (town manager) Milanoski, this incident could have been avoided."

Background

DeLuca accused Milanoski of interfering with an internal affairs investigation by attempting to influence the police union's president, Officer Patrick Reardon. The complaint was outlined in a letter to the selectmen, which DeLuca wrote on Friday, May 25, the same day he was placed on paid administrative leave.

It started with an incident on May 19, Town Election day. Sgt. Jeffrey Treanor had parked the police Humvee on the common the night before with a banner asking voters to support manning the police station 24/7.

According to the investigator's report, Milanoski called DeLuca at 7:15 a.m. on May 19 and asked the chief to have the banner removed; the chief then called Treanor, who drove the Humvee back to the police station, swapped it for another department vehicle, and drove that back to Town Hall. He then placed the banner on his personal vehicle. The switch took him all of nine minutes, but Treanor said that he did not have permission to use the Humvee.

The investigation into Treanor's actions was completed on May 24, according to reports. DeLuca reviewed Lt. Lennon's May 23 report and asked him to resubmit it to include the "use without authority" offense.

In a phone interview on Thursday, Deputy Chief William Quigley said " officer has been disciplined and the matter is closed right now."

According to the investigator, this is a misdemeanor punishable by up to two years in the state's House of Correction. Sjoberg wrote that in his opinion, "Chief DeLuca was not following proper procedures in ordering the officers to write to/from reports of an issue which included a criminal offense without having previously advised them of their rights not to incriminate themselves."

Questions arose during the June 19 selectmen meeting as to whether an internal police investigation was under way when Milanoski talked to Reardon on Monday, May 21 and, if so, when this investigation actually started.

The investigator's report came to the conclusion that the investigation got started on Wednesday, May 23 because this is when DeLuca ordered Lt. Lennon to conduct an internal affairs investigation. It also lists DeLuca as the complainant, not Milanoski. Milanoski, meanwhile, stated that he had no knowledge of an internal investigation when he spoke to Reardon on the phone that Monday. The following day, May 22, he wrote an email to Town Counsel planning to extend the chief's contract, which he provided to the Mariner.

DeLuca's response to Milanoski's denial, according to the investigator's report, was that Milanoski should have been aware; "he was the one who made the complaint."

The investigator then asked DeLuca if Milanoski had filled out a complaint intake form; the chief said no. DeLuca was then asked if he had officially informed Milanoski of the pending investigation or had updated him on the findings; he stated that he had not.

At the crux of the issue is where DeLuca interpreted Milanoski interfering with the internal investigation. According to the report, DeLuca found out about a conversation between Milanoski and Reardon, which involved a discussion about the incident with Treanor, via an email report from Deputy Chief William Quigley.

According to the report, both Reardon and Milanoski said the possibility of having the police union reimburse a portion of Treanor's overtime costs was discussed in a phone call on Monday. Reardon said he interpreted that as a mere suggestion at a "possible sanction." He also said that he first officially learned of the internal investigation of Treanor on Wednesday, May 23, when Lt. Lennon informed him.

Milanoski said he became aware of the internal investigation on Thursday, May 24, he stated, "when officers came to his office to make complaints about the chief." The town manager's sole reason for calling DeLuca to complain about the banner was to get it taken down, he said.

The investigator told DeLuca that his interpretation of the conversation between Quigley and Reardon was hearsay, "and would not be admissible in a criminal court."

Conclusion

Town Counsel Peter Berry suggested during the selectmen meeting that no further action was required, "because [DeLuca's] complaint is unfounded."

DeLuca's attorney, McNeeley, attempted to speak, but was given the gavel by selectman chair Paul Carlson, who said that the board was not taking any public comment. McNeeley responded that he represented the chief, but Carlson told him, "You're out of order."

The selectmen then voted 4-1 to accept the results of the investigation and to take no further action. Gjesteby was the dissenting vote, while selectman chair Diane Kennedy participated remotely; she was out of the state and called into the meeting. The board had to vote to allow remote participation at the start of the meeting, per the state's Open Meeting Law.

McNeeley said in a phone call that he has yet to receive a list of the allegations against his client. Berry said that Town Counsel will notify DeLuca and his attorney once the investigation is complete, if "they have any merit." He added that under the chief's contract, he has a right to a full hearing before any decisions are made.

DeLuca's attorney is unhappy with the investigation into Milanoski, stating that he felt it was biased.

"All the chief was looking for was a fair and impartial investigation, and nothing else," McNeeley said. "That didn't happen... Why town counsel was prosecuting the case, defending the town manager throughout the report, doesn't made sense to me. Then the chief's advocate couldn't speak; I thought in America, that's what we do. I don't think it was a fair hearing...I don't think the facts were presented clearly."

McNeeley went on to say that he does not think Milanoski is innocent.

"The town manager made the complaint himself on the 19th to the chief complaining about police misconduct," DeLuca's attorney said. "For the town manager to say he didn't know there was an internal investigation was ludicrous; he made the complaint," adding that the internal investigation started right after Milanoski called the chief. "I don't know how he could say there wasn't one going on. If he didn't [know about it], why did he call the union president and try to resolve it?"

When asked about McNeeley's comments, Berry responded, "The chief's attorney didn't have any direct knowledge of any of the facts underlining this particular incident; therefore the [selectmen] chair felt it wasn't appropriate to take further statements...it's his right under Open Meeting Law. Chief DeLuca was given his opportunity to give all the information he wanted us to hear."

As to whether or not the investigation was fair, Berry said that he thought it "absolutely" was, explaining that Town Counsel hired the investigative firm because if the selectmen did it, it would be a conflict of interest.

"The selectmen are the ultimate decision makers here," Berry said, explaining that if the chief is ever disciplined, his contract allows him the right to appeal it with the selectmen. Therefore, "for them to go out and hire investigators wouldn't be appropriate. We provide a buffer."

The investigation into the union allegations against DeLuca is still underway, but Berry said that he doesn't "think it will be extended much further. The investigator has concluded all of the interviews with the persons involved in these allegations; he's now analyzing the evidence, determining which allegations have merit."

In the meantime, the town's attorney said he hopes people will wait until all the facts come out before jumping to their own conclusions.

"This is very trying for the town. There's a lot of speculation out there," Berry said. "I urge people to wait to see what develops out of this and not be speculating about things they may not know factually."

selectmen when the contract was signed (Gjesteby unseated then-chair Ted Carr during the May 19 Town Election), brought up the error during the Tuesday, June 19 board meeting.

Milanoski, an economic development consultant, has been serving as acting town manager since February, after the board suspended then-town manager Michael Coughlin. Following Coughlin's removal without cause in March, Milanoski was appointed interim town manager and will serve in this role until June 30, 2013.

Milanoski was an unpaid volunteer during his first two weeks as town manager; after that, the selectmen voted to keep him of for another month, during which he received a weekly stipend of $2,000. On March 20, the selectmen voted to extend him as interim for another 15 months; according to his contract, he is being paid a salary of $112,500 for the remainder of the current fiscal year (which ends June 30, 2012) and will receive $132,500 for fiscal year 2013. During that March 20 meeting, the selectmen stated that they would discuss Milanoski's salary during executive session, per Town Counsel's recommendation.

Milanoski's contract was signed by the selectmen on April 3 during an executive session under exemptions 2 and 3 for the purpose of negotiation with nonunion personnel. According to the meeting minutes, the board came out of executive only for purposes of adjournment; that meeting was adjourned at 11:44 p.m. Judging from the minutes, Milanoski's contract was not discussed publicly at that time.

The selectmen convened the following week on April 10, but according to those minutes, the town manager contract was not discussed, at least not in open session. That meeting also included an executive session at the end under exemptions 2, 3 and 6.

According to the state Attorney General's Open Meeting Law Guide, "while a public body may negotiate with nonunion personnel or conduct a collective bargaining session with a union in executive session, and may even agree on final contract terms in executive session, the public body must vote to approve or ratify any contract or collective bargaining agreement in open session before it can take effect."

The Mariner previously asked the selectmen chair if, in fact, Milanoski's contract had been ratified publicly. Carlson said he didn't know, but that the board would look into it. He said after Tuesday's selectmen meeting that it took a while to go through the various meetings' tapes, but that he was glad the matter was finally resolved.

The selectmen voted 3-1 to approve Milanoski's contract. Selectman Diane Kennedy was absent, while Gjesteby was the dissenting vote. She declined to comment on why she opted to vote "nay."

AMERICAN LEGION BASEBALL

A view from the top

Post 118 leads league in early going

By Mark Ducharme
The Cohasset Mariner

Cohasset American Legion Post 118 baseball general manager Scott Arnold likes the view from the top in Zone 6 East.

Post 118 would like to have that view when the regular season is done.

"I started this program," said Arnold. "And I will see it to the end. We have been able to make it better each year. The one thing that we have not done is win the league title and that is our goal for this year."

Cohasset's run last year was not all that bad. In fact it was a great run as they finished third in Zone 6 East and won its crossover playoff series to qualify for the states. They were able to win their bracket in Braintree and qualify for the State's Final Eight.

The good news for Cohasset is that they have their first nine back from last year and they added some players to their roster.

"We lost some players," said Arnold. "We have a couple with injuries. We have added eight new players. We have added some good pitchers to our team."

Post 118, which has home games with Hyde Park on Friday and Stoughton on Monday and a game at Holbrook on Thursday is battling with Weymouth, Braintree and Morrisette in the early going for the top spot in the league. Cohasset had its game with Morrisette postponed due to a thunderstorm at Adams Field in Quincy.

COHASSET TRIATHLON

Thought you should know

Notes from the Cohasset Triathlon

By Bill Burnett
For the Cohasset Mariner

This was the 6th annual triathlon

Sunday, 850 athletes competed from over 27 different states – 15 percent of the race field included athletes who live in Cohasset

Notable athletes include US Senator Scott Brown, 10-time Olympic medalist Gary Hall Jr, and Dick/Rick Hoyt. This was Gary's first ever triathlon.

The weather conditions were perfect. Calm wind, sunny blue skies, and the water was flat and about 66 degrees

There were 10 waves of athletes - the last wave included a 1-mile open water swim

The energy and vibe around the event was like no other

We worked hard this year, as we do every year, to minimize the impact on our community. Our last athletes were off Main Street before 9:45 a.m.

The event raised over $110,000 for Type 1 diabetes making the grand total since the inaugural event over $850,000.

The event also supports local initiatives including the Cohasset Food Pantry, the Cohasset Share the Road project, and the Sandy Beach Association

YOUTH BASKETBALL

Registration still open

Cohasset youth summer basketball registration open through Aug. 2

Registration still is open for the popular Cohasset Basketball Boosters summer basketball program which runs through August 2.

Each age group now plays two nights per week for the six week session. The cost per child is just $50 and all sessions are at the CHS gym. (Please note that there will be no sessions on the nights of 7/3, 7/4, and 7/5).

The schedule is as follows:

— Boys in rising grades 4 and 5 on Mondays and Tuesdays from 5:00-6:30;

— All girls (rising grade 4 through high school) on Mondays and Tuesdays from 6:30-8:00;

— Boys in rising grades 6 and 7 on Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5:00-6:30;

— Boys in rising grades 8 and High School on Wednesdays and Thursdays from 6:30-8:00.

Each girl and boy must bring their own ball and each should wear a reversible shirt. (Please note: There will be no shirts given out for the summer program).

Full details and the link for on-line registration are at http://www.cohassetbasketball.com/.

YOUTH SOFTBALL

The Girls of Summer return to Freedom Field

The CYBSA is proud to announce that they will be fielding a U14 softball team in the competitive South Shore Summer Softball League this summer.

This is a local travel team that plays against teams from all over the South Shore. The league is competitive, but the team is seasoned, returning from playing in the league last summer. The girls will be led by the dedicated coaching team of Amy Brash, Jill Lawlor, Lee Stone, Tony Talacci and Peter Vitello.

The season kicked off with an exciting win over Kingston on June 21. Come out and watch the dirt fly as the girls steal bases at Freedom Field in their home games on Tuesday June 26, Tuesday July 13, Thursday July 19 and Tuesday July 24.

All-Star Weeknight

Great evening

CYBSA would like to congratulate this year's 2012 Major League All Stars for what turned out to be a great evening of competitive baseball for the 26 all-star players.

The town of Cohasset gets a shout-out for allowing CYBSA to continue the tradition of playing this special game at the Barnes Complex at night under the lights, which were generously donated by Bay State Equipment

The Chinese say, "It is not the destination that is important, but the journey."

Bob King grew up in Weymouth in the 1950s and spent his summers playing baseball at Legion Field.

But when his father took up golf and needed a caddie, King followed his father to South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

He knew his baseball days were numbered when he showed up late to play in a Babe Ruth League All-Star game because he was at the golf course.

"At first I was a terrible golfer," King recollected. "But I took lessons from Mr. Gianfrante and I got better."

King was good enough to play competitive in the old local tournaments, such as the Kirouac, and he won a couple of South Shore Country Club championships later in life. Now in his mid-60s, the retired CPA still has a single digit handicap and is a threat to win most tournaments at his club.

One reason his game stays sharp is because he has a home field advantage. He built a putting green and turned it into a par-3 hole at his home in Duxbury.

One of King's secret pleasures is simply looking out his window and seeing his nicely manicured putting green and short fairway.

It was a labor of love.

It was in the making for more than a decade.

Previously, "there wasn't much topsoil and it was very dry and it has a southern exposure, and when you were done mowing the yard, you had to take a shower because you were covered in dirt," he remembers.

His first idea was to put in irrigation and some seed and grow a nice yard of grass.

But being a golfer, his plan quickly expanded. Why not build a putting green so he could work on his chipping and putting?

So one summer King hired a Bobcat operator, at $275 per hour, and leveled 60,000 square feet of his land. Then he purchased 300 yards of loam. A caravan of huge 10-wheel trucks came in and dumped it on his property.

King figured if he seeded it in September, nature could be his watering system until the spring, when he would have a proper irrigation system installed.

Golf superintendents he knew suggested he use a dwarfed blue grass. A 100-pound bag cost him more than $500. It took him more than a week to put it all down.

Problem was the South Shore had the warmest fall in 20 years and he was panicking.

First, he went to the Job Lot discount stores and purchased all the cheap hose he could find. He also purchased "something like 80 sprinklers." He had his makeshift watering system connected to his town water and they went from morning, noon and night. "After six weeks I got the water bill. It was over $1,500," said King.

His next step was to drill a well, which meant going through the town permitting process. When that was accomplished, he hired a Plymouth company to drill his well.

Bob King appreciates good greens. He understands what green superintendents have to do to keep their putting surfaces fast. COURTESY PHOTO

They hit water in 20 feet, "but he really didn't draw much," said King, "so he asked to drill another one, 15 feet away. He went down 45 feet and hit water again and it was a very good flow. Since then, I've never had a problem with water." Cost to drill and set up a pump: $4,500.

But the next spring King had grass growing.

That means he needed to cut it. But you can't cut greens with an ordinary lawnmower. You needed a greens' lawnmower.

"After asking around, I found out that this green keeper in Hyannis had an old mower he was willing to sell. He said I could have it for $1,000. So I went down to the golf course and bought it."

When King mowed his green, he was astonished. "It looked tremendous. I didn't think it would come out so good, but it did. I was amazed."

Next step? If you are going to practice your putting, you need a hole and a flagstick.

"I was told about this warehouse on Cape Cod, off of Exit 2. I went there and it had everything I needed. Fertilizer, hole-cutters, flagsticks and it even had titanium cups. I bought everything I needed there and it wasn't too expensive."

King put in his hole and his flagstick and just admired it.

"It was too pretty to practice on," said King, who still had plenty more room in his back yard.

So he started building a fairway and tees, 100 yards, 150 yards and 200 yards from the green.

King got an education, albeit an expensive one, on golf agronomy. And you can bet he had has much fun building his green as he does when he practices on it.

Herbie Aikens qualifies for U.S. Amateur Public Links Championship

Herbie Aikens is a qualified success when it comes to USGA tournaments. DAVID COLT PHOTO COURTESY OF THE MASSACHUSETTS GOLF ASSOCIATION

For the fourth time in four tries, Herbie Aikens of Kingston has punched his ticket to a USGA Championship.

The Pinehills golfer captured one of two spots available at the U.S. Amateur Public Links qualifying tournament held last week at George Wright Golf Course in Hyde Park.

This marks the fourth straight USGA Championship that Aikens has qualified for dating back to May 2011 when he qualified for the 2011 U.S. Amateur Public Links Championship. He went on to also qualify for the 2011 U.S. Amateur Championship and the 2011 U.S. Mid-Amateur Championship.

"For the event itself I am going out with confidence but I also know how tough the field is," said Aikens, who advanced to the Round of 16 at the 2011 U.S. Amateur Public Links Championship. "Like events around the state, I am always trying to improve on what I have done in the past so I will look at this no differently. Advancing to the Round of 16 will not be easy, but I am excited for the opportunity to try."

On this day, Aikens gave himself a cushion during the morning round, by firing a Round 1 best score of 2-under par 68.

Following his first nine holes (he began on the 10th hole), it didn't look so rosy for Aikens as he made the turn at 2-over par 37. His second nine of the morning was a different story as Aikens made birdie on the first, second, third, sixth and seventh holes en route to a score of 2-under par 68.

During the afternoon hours, Aikens carded a 2-over par 72 which proved to be just good enough to secure the second and final qualifying spot.

"It was a tale of two different rounds," said Aikens. "The first round I putted very well and sank a lot of key putts... and in the afternoon for the most part I hit it better tee to green but didn't make any putts."

One day earlier, Aikens spent the afternoon with Frank Vana Jr. (Marlborough CC), the nine-time Richard D. Haskell MGA Player of the Year who has competed in 27 USGA Championships over the course of his career.

"I had a calm feeling with me today because I played a practice round (for the Northeast Amateur) with Frank Vana and I was able to ask him some questions on how he handles his game mentally," said Aikens. "His advice proved to be very important to me today. I found myself going back to some of the things he told me last night and it made a big difference."

Family first

Greg Chalas of Thorny Lea is following in the footsteps of his father, Bruce, a long time competitor in the local golf scene. The young Chalas, earned medalist honors last week at Kernwood Country Club in Salem in a qualifying tournament for this year's State Amateur, which will be held July 9-13 at Tedesco Golf Club in Marblehead. The younger Chalas is a former Stetson University golfer, who now serves as an assistant golf coach – alongside his father, who is the head coach – for the Boston University men's golf team. This marks the second straight year that Chalas has advanced to the championship. Chalas fashioned a 2-over 72. Other local qualifiers included Matt Vaughn of Wampatuck, Paul Lacamera of Plymouth and Paul Heffernan of Charles River . . . The South Shore Country Club Four-Ball Champions is being moved entirely to a weekend tournament this year. It will be played Aug. 4-5. There is a men's tournament and a women's division. The men's championship will be split into gross and net flights. The gross will be for players with a combined handicap of 16 and under while the net is 17 and over, playing at 80 percent. Those interested, contact head professional Joe Keefe (jkgolfpro@pga.com) for more information. All proceeds go to the Hingham Fourth of July Parade Fund.

Parental approval

The New England PGA held a Parent/Child Championship at Nashawtuc CC in Concord on June 18. Nathan and John Ingram of Plymouth won the 11-and under age division while Norwell native Steven Aicardi and his son, Nicholas, took second with an 84. Abington's Leon and Carl Djusberg tied for second in the boys' 12-13 division with Andrew and Charles Giacchetto of Canton. Both teams had 78s. In the girls' 14-18 division, Mackenzie and Geoff Millerd of Hingham were champions with an 84. Duxbury's Kaylee and Russell Jones were second with an 87 . . . Congratulations to Doug Perry of Marshfield, who scored a hole in one on No. 14 at Widow's Walk Golf Club in Scituate. Perry, playing the silver tees from 147 yards, used an 8-iron for his ace. He was playing with Colin Dowd, Max Hemmingway and Henry Flynn . . . They held a Skins Game during the most recent Ladies Day at Hatherly Golf Club. Sue Beldotti's net 3 earned a skin on the second hole. Ellen Dunn's net 1 on No. 4, Maryellen Kelley's net 2 on No. 5, Julie Maguire's net 3 on No. 7, Peggy Murphy's net 1 on No. 8 and Margie White's net 3 on No. 17, also earned skins . . . Fifteen-year-old Adam Winiarz of Norton, will be attending The First Tee Life Skills and Leadership Academy.

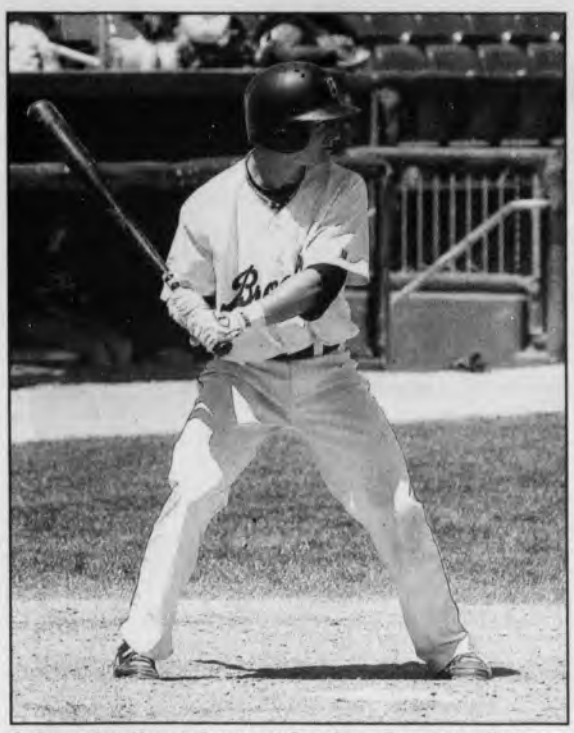
McCunney hits for cycle in 19-0 win

The Cohasset Mariner



Cohasset's Rob McCunney (Fordham) became the first player in Futures Collegiate Baseball League (FCBL) history to hit for the cycle as the Brockton Rox cruised past the Wachusett Dirt Dawgs, 19-0, on Wednesday night at Doyle Field.

Brockton rattled off a season-high 23 hits in the win, including 12 for extra bases. The 19 runs were also a season-high for the Rox, who upped their record to 6-8 on the year.

McCunney put together one of the finest performances in FCBL history, going 5-for-5 at the dish with a single, two doubles, a triple, and his second homer of the season. The Cohasset native also tallied three RBIs and a game-high five runs scored in the rout.

Luis Gonzalez (Concordia) went 3-for-5 with two homers, six RBIs, and two runs scored, while Vito Perna (Southeastern Louisiana) finished 2-for-4 with a homer, three RBI, and a pair of runs scored. East Bridgewater's Greg Baggett (Bentley) was outstanding as well for Brockton, as he went 2-for-6 with a homer, an RBI, and four runs scored.

Norton native Sean Ryan (Wheaton) went 2-for-4 with two doubles and an RBI, while Tanner Reibenspies (San Diego State) finished 2-for-5 with a double, an RBI, and a run scored. A.J. Lardo (Maryland) and Scituate native Jordan Berry (George Washington) each finished with a pair of hits for the Rox, while Berry added a pair of RBIs and a run scored.

"Every team in the district is going to be a tough test," Arnold said. "We won our south sectional last year and we have added depth to our pitching staff. We have had a complete game in every one but the opener and against Hyde Park. It was 100 degrees in the Hyde Park game and we brought in a pitcher to close the game."

The lineup in the field is deep in talented with Rich Roche back behind the plate, Tim Kessinger, who played at Sailsbury returns as does Cohasset High's Jamie Timothy at third and Jamie Faber at second.

Two former Scituate High players are back. David Podurgiel will play shortstop and Cooper Davis is playing first.

Jordan Jenkins, Chase Michaud, Chris Smith and Connor Gibbons are the heart of a strong pitching staff.

"Chase pitched well in the opening game of the season (against Weymouth)," said Arnold. "Our offense was flat in that game."

They have also added Cohasset High's Terrance Doonan (second base) and Chris Murphy (first base) as well as Jake Brady (infielder) and Chris LeClair, who are both from Scituate High to give them depth.

Girls U14 closes another winning season

Cohasset advances to Coastal League semifinal

The Cohasset Girls U14-1 team ended an exceptional season June 16 after advancing to the semifinals of the Coastal League playoffs. The girls lost a tough game to Duxbury who went on to win the League Championship.

In the regular season, the girls ended with an 8-1-1 record, a testament to their skill and hard work.

The team was supported by a strong midfield group: Dulaney Bernstein, Nikki Federle, Rebecca Fredey, Alex Lassman, Sophie Matthews, Lauren McManus, Ryan Spicer and Sophie Wolfe.

Offensively, Shea Kearney, Abby Osmanski and Cameron Rawson added their speed and power and defensively, Kate Gibbons, Kara Nelson, Julia Richardson, Emily Rosano and Megan Rosano relentlessly cleared the ball. Many of the girls proved their versatility as soccer players and covered different positions, including goalie. The team weathered the loss of Kerry Dunn at the end of the season, due to injury.

The girls were led by the dedicated coaching of Mark Richardson, Steve Matthews, Steve Fredey and Mark Federle. Coach Richardson has coached many of these girls since they were U12s and his leadership, patience and soccer talents have been a real asset to the Cohasset Soccer Club.

During the time this group of girls has been playing U12 and U14 travel soccer, they have achieved a 29-5-6 record in the Coastal League and gone to the Coastal League playoffs in three out of the four years.

This amazing run bodes well for the future of Cohasset Soccer as a number of the girls head to High School to play next year.

YOUTH SOFTBALL

Cohasset Angels second in the Spring D4 League

The Cohasset Angels D4 softball team finished a great playoff run with a nail biting loss to Norwell 2 (11 – 10) in the league Championship game. The Angels had a great season, finishing with a 7-3 record in the regular season. They won the first two rounds of playoffs beating Hingham 1 and Hingham 2.

Much of the team success was due to the fast pitch skills of pitcher, Sami Janssens throwing to the agile Katie Talacci in the catcher's position. Providing support in the infield and outfield were Caroline Adams, Olivia Brash, Brigie Driscoll, Betsy Faherty, Morgan Healey, Sophie Matthews, Anne Marie Miscioscia, Erin McElhinney, Emily Ryan and Julia Stanganelli. The girls played aggressively on the offense, making big hits and running fast to steal bases.

The girls' success can also be attributed to the skillful and dedicated coaching team of Amy Brash, Jill Lawlor and Tony Talacci. The coaches worked hard with the girls this season on their batting, infield plays and sliding skills and all of the girls ended the season playing at a much higher level.

The D4 Spring Softball league is for girls 14 and under. The league included two teams each from Cohasset, Hingham and Norwell.

CEF and HEF volley for schools

For the first time, Cohasset Education Foundation and Hingham Education Foundation teamed up for a joint fundraiser. Both nonprofit foundations raise money to help enrich the curriculum in their school districts.

The joint fundraiser consisted of a tennis tournament hosted by Bud Schultz, owner of Cohasset Tennis Club. Four doubles teams from each town competed against one another to determine the "town" winner. The final match-up was Hingham's Mary Semjen and Amy Bryant against Cohasset's Elaine Cosseboom and Mary McGoldrick. After going to a tiebreak, Hingham's Amy Bryant and Mary Semjen won.

The men's Pro-Am tournament consisted of three doubles teams from each town. In the finals the Hingham team of Oscar Jara and Patrick Milligan topped the Cohasset team of Brain Shea and Seth Ferricane.

The event raised $3,500 for CEF and HEF. Both foundations look forward to continuing this tennis rivalry in the future.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Berklee Stars strike right notes

BETH MACLEOD LARGENT

As Director of Performance at South Shore Conservatory, I have the opportunity to meet and listen to a lot of aspiring performers. They all come with an energy and enthusiasm, hopeful for a future on the stage. So, when the Conservatory decided to partner with Berklee College of Music to bring some original, innovative, cutting edge music to Hingham, I couldn't wait to hear these soul- and R&B-inspired acts. And they did not disappoint! After listening to each act, all I could think was "Wow, these guys are the real deal! Sign them up!"

That's how our new Friday night series, Berklee Stars at SSC, was created. These young performers are Berklee's most promising musicians, names we're sure to hear about for years to come. All of them are committed to careers in performing and are driven to have their individual voice heard. Their music is a great mix – some real soul with powerful vocals backed by horns and some singer/songwriters. Each act comes with its own unique style.

From an educational standpoint, this series provides opportunities for both Berklee and Conservatory students. Berklee students are able to experience performing in the open air, and

Please join the Conservatory for Berklee Stars at SSC, which starts on Friday, July 6, with The Soul of a Man.

Conservatory students (who attend for free) have a chance to see what might be the next step for them should they decide to pursue music as a career. Additionally, Berklee audio recording students will work with instructor Jeff Largent as sound engineers for this unusual outdoor venue. Ordinarily, this type of hands-on training is difficult to come by, so we're excited to be able to offer this opportunity. I'm told that there's a waiting list of students for this recording gig.

If that wasn't enough excitement, we have partnered with WATD to live broadcast all four Friday night performances. It's a first ever for SSC! We are super excited about this aspect of the series, as its gets this fabulous music out to others who might not know about it or cannot attend. Even the audience will be in on the action through live interviews. This creates an incredibly charged atmosphere.

This week I'll be meeting these performers in person as I make my way to Berklee to shoot some promotional spots for WATD. I look forward to meeting each of the performers, and watching how things progress from load in to sound check to performance. I love that our audience will hear a new musical vision before the general public does – discovering talent is exciting.

Please join us for Berklee Stars at SSC, which starts on Friday, July 6, with The Soul of a Man. Other acts will include Cameron Gilpin on Friday, July 13, Amelia Ali on Friday, July 27, and Joanna Teters and Mad Satta on Friday, Aug. 3. For more information, visit www.sscmusic.org/berklee_stars.html. To order tickets, visit www.sscmusic.org or call 781-749-7565, ext. 22. Berklee Stars at SSC is sponsored by William Gallagher Associates.

Beth MacLeod Largent is the Conservatory's Director of Performance. She is also a vital part of South Shore Conservatory's voice department, both as an educator and a musician.

SOUTH SHORE ART CENTER

Polomis paintings on exhibit through Aug. 31

The South Shore Art Center presents an exhibit by artist Ted Polomis at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, July 2 through Aug. 31. Gallery hours are Mondays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays 10 a.m.-8 p.m., Wednesdays and Fridays 10 a.m.-5 p.m., and Saturdays 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Polomis is a realist painter working in the medium of oils. He attended The Rhode Island School of Design and was elected to the European Honors Program in Rome, Italy, where he spent his junior year. He visited every museum and collection he could, not only in Italy, but 13 other countries as well, so that he could study the works of the Great Masters.

He paints from his home studio in Marshfield Hills. Working exclusively in oils, he creates paintings with a sophisticated sense of balance and depth. He is captivated by the interplay between objects and their environment, and the quiet harmony that results from balancing form, color, light and shadow. His works have received numerous awards, and have been featured in many publications including American Art Collector, International Artist and The Artist's Magazine.

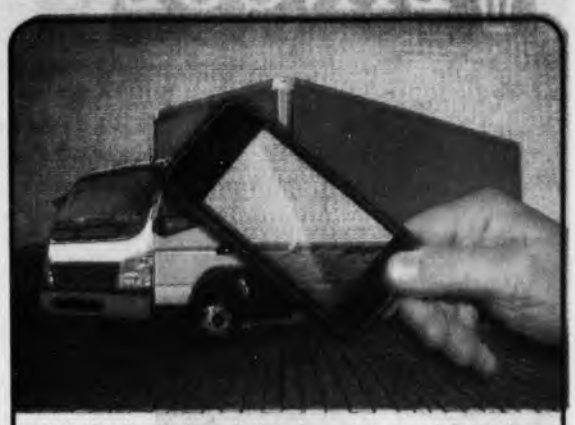
'Conversations in Stitch' exhibit on view at SSAC

South Shore Art Center is mounting an exhibition of work by 10 Midwestern artists in an exhibition titled "Conversations in Stitch: On Abstraction." The show continues through July 8.

Artists in the fiber show include Astrid Bennett, Pat Bishop, Shelley Brucar, Jennifer Conrad, Clairan Ferrono, Linda Witte Henke, Pat Kroth, Casey Puetz, Gwyned Trefethen and Laura Wisilowski. Curated by Gwyned Trefethen, this exhibition showcases a diverse collection of contemporary fiber art by members of the Midwestern Fiber Artists Coalition.

The Dillon Gallery will present the work of South Shore Art Center summer faculty. Artist in Residence, Katherine Morrison, will be featured in the Manning Lobby.

South Shore Art Center is at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and noon to 4 p.m., on Sundays. For more information call 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org.



Carillon summer recital series continues Sunday July 1

The 88th Annual Summer Recital Series on the Cohasset Carillon continues July 1 at 6 p.m. On eight consecutive Sundays this summer, hear carillon players from all over the world play St. Stephen's treasured instrument. The Recital Series is the longest running continuous carillon concerts in the North America, dating back to the carillon's installation in 1924.

The best place to listen to the carillon is on the grounds of the Cohasset Common. So plan on a picnic with the family ever Sunday at 6 p.m. from now until Aug. 12. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower is offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

The Cohasset Carillon (speaking in superlatives) is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England.

GIMME SHELTER

Beautiful baby kittens available

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to feature two beautiful black baby kittens.

These two were rescued from the outside by one of our dedicated volunteers. They are currently being fostered by our adoption coordinator. They love to be held and purr up a storm.

If interested in adopting this pretty pair, please call Judy at 781 534 4902 for more information and for the opportunity of meeting them.

Please visit the shelter where you can meet all of our very adoptable cats.

While you're at the shelter you can meet these two baby kittens and all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

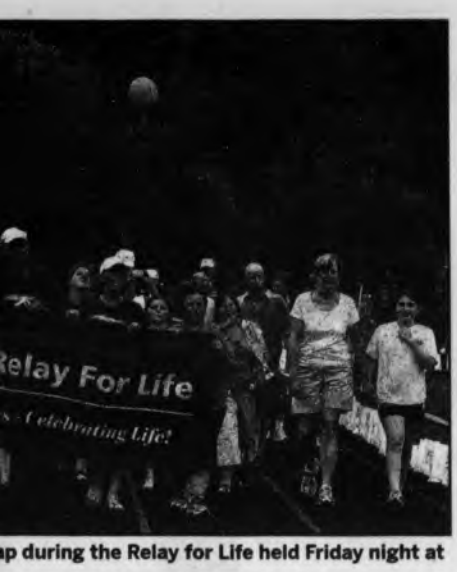
You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org. HSAR sends out a huge thank you to its many supporters.

BENEFITS CMI

Register now for Hubbard Memorial 5K

Register now for the Hubbard Memorial 5K Fun Run on Saturday, July 21st, to benefit the Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI). This CMI "fun"-raiser is dedicated to the memories of Jack and June Hubbard. Jack Hubbard was a CMI founding member and an avid rower. June Hubbard, his wife, shared her husband's love of the ocean and was a dedicated volunteer and active member of many local organizations. Proceeds of the event support CMI's mission to provide a community rowing program for all, revitalize small boat woodcraft, and raise awareness for Cohasset's special place in local maritime history. The race starts and finishes on Cohasset Common.

Entry fee is $25, Family entry fee (maximum of 6 members) is $75. All participants will receive a commemorative race T-shirt. Register on-line at rowcmi.com.



To sponsor, or volunteer, please contact Ed Baldry 781-383-8555, ed.baldry@icdfunds.com or Karen Hall at 781-374-5152 at karen.hall@icdfunds.com

CMI is committed to providing safe and rewarding race opportunities to all club members. CMI strives to develop and promote sportsmanship, fitness, rowing skills, teamwork, and friendship for youth and adult rowers, of all skill levels, through participation in safe and challenging rowing events were competing to the best of one's abilities and inclusiveness are equally valued. Cohasset Maritime Institute is a 501c (3) non-profit charitable organization.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 9, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You clever Ewes and Rams love nothing more than to rise to a challenge. So, by all means, if you feel sure about your facts, step right up and defend your side of the issue.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You've done some great work recently. Now it's time to reward yourself with something wonderful, perhaps a day at a spa or a night out with someone very special.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You love to talk, but don't forget to make time to do a little more listening, otherwise you could miss out on an important message someone might be trying to send you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your aspect indicates some uncertainty about one of your goals. Use this period of shifting attitudes to reassess what you really want and what you're ready to do to get it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your social life is picking up, and you'll soon be mingling with old friends and making new ones. But 'twixt the fun times, stay on top of changing workplace conditions.

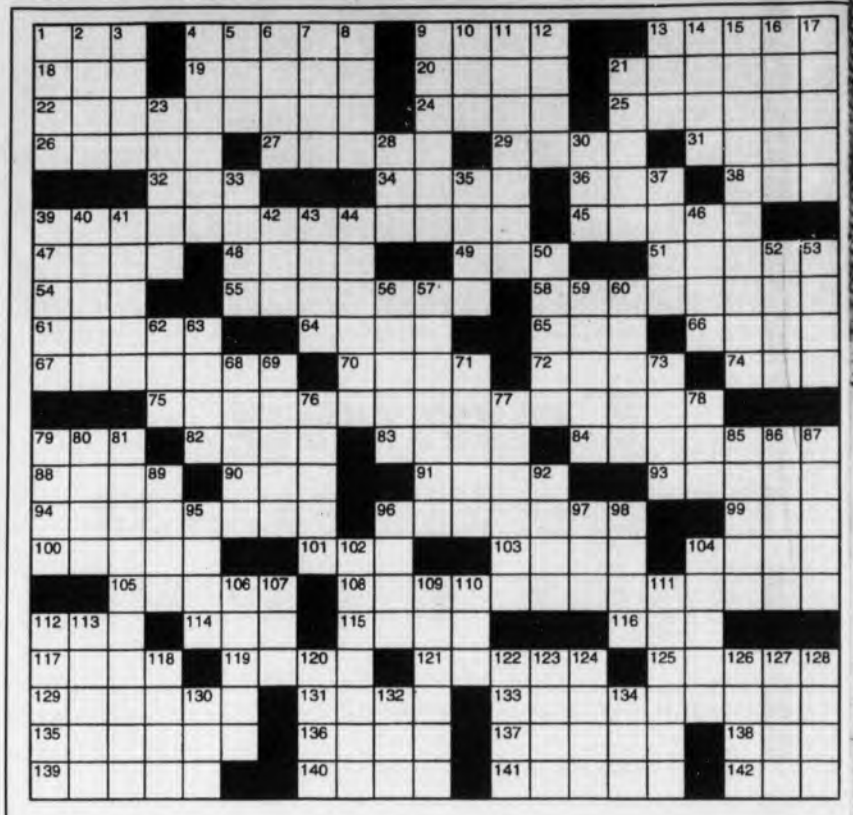
VIRGO (August 23 September 22) A trusted friend offers understanding as you vent some long-pent-up feelings. Now, move on from there and start making the changes you've put off all this time.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might well feel uneasy as you face a difficult situation involving someone close to you. But you know you're doing the right thing, so stick with your decision.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You're a good friend to others. Now's the time to allow them to be good friends to you. Rely on their trusted advice to help you get through an uncertain period.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Family and friends are always important, but especially so at this time. Despite your hectic workplace schedule, make a real effort to include them in your life.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) That project you've been working on is almost ready for presentation. But you still need some information from a colleague before you can consider it done.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't let those negative attitudes that have sprung up around you drain your energies. Shrug them off, and move ahead with the confidence that you can get the job done.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Aspects favor some dedicated fun time for the hardworking Piscean. A nice, refreshing plunge into the social swim can recharge your physical and emotional batteries.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love to travel and be with people. You probably would be happy as a social director on a cruise ship.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

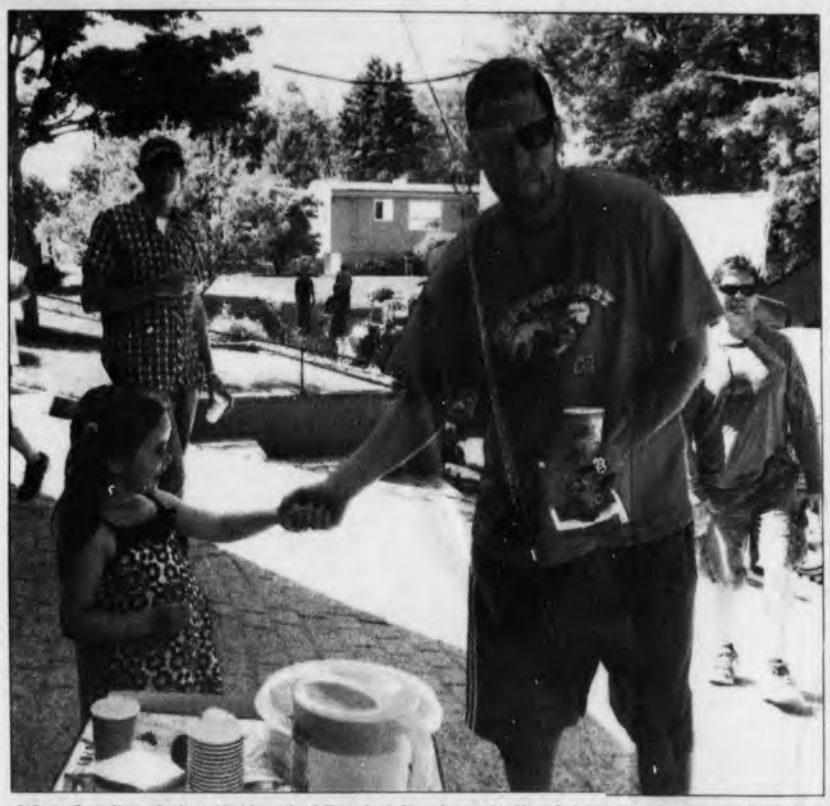
HOLLYWOOD EAST

'Grown-Ups' almost filmed here



By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

With its quintessential New England common and scenic coastal views, Cohasset has long called out to Hollywood as an ideal movie-making location. Longtime residents recall film crews taking over town during the making of movies such as 1987's "The Witches of Eastwick," starring Cher and Jack Nicholson; 1992's "HouseSitter," with Goldie Hawn and Steve Martin; and the 2011 independent film "Sunny Side Up," featuring Parker Posey.

Given this history, it's no surprise Cohasset officials made a bid to have the Adam Sandler comedy "Grown-Ups 2" film here in town.

While the town ultimately lost out to the North Shore communities of Newburyport, Swampscott and Marblehead, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said Cohasset was the runner-up.

Eagle Scout builds eco-friendly dock

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Like other Eagle Scouts, Cohasset Troop 28's Jack Thomae completed a project that gives back to the local community. But Thomae's project to become an Eagle Scout has a unique, environmentally friendly twist.

In October 2011, Thomae worked alongside his father, Martin, Roger Hill of King Street Boats, and 10 of his fellow scouts to build a new dock for the Cohasset Maritime Institute. But this isn't just any old dock — Thomae's 12 by 8 foot creation is built from sustainable, recycled and recyclable materials.

The dock was made with Forever Wood, which consists

AEC to present solar panel plans

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Here comes the sun.

The Alternative Energy Committee is having a busy summer, working to bring solar power to Cohasset. The AEC took the latest step in that direction last Friday, when the group made a long-awaited site visit to the National Grid solar array on I-93 in Dorchester (the committee had a visit scheduled for the spring that was rained out).

The AEC plans to make a presentation on what they have been working on and what their future plans are to the Board of Selectmen soon; the committee asked to be on the Tuesday, July 10 agenda.

The initiative to develop solar energy in Cohasset has been a discussion topic for years, but plans for solar panels truly got underway during last December's Special Town Meeting, when voters approved articles allowing the town to lease the roof of the Middle-High School and the capped landfill located at 81-91 Cedar Street for the installation of solar arrays. The AEC has been working alongside the School Committee to get solar panels on the school roof. In May, members from both committees met with representatives from solar energy vendors and conducted a walkthrough of five potential sites for solar panels.

Developers who surveyed the sites determined that both the roof and the landfill are viable locations for solar arrays, said AEC co-chair Tanya Bodell. The next phase of the plan is to draft a request for proposals (RFP) and go out to bid for solar energy developers. Bodell said that the AEC would like to hire special counsel to help

Dogs can distract from safe driving

What
With the summer weather upon us, Cohasset police are noticing more often around town drivers with dogs in their front seat or even in their laps. Many drivers may not realize that having your dog in the front seat unrestrained puts their dog, themselves and others at risk and can be illegal.

Why
The most important concern is the dog can be a physical impediment to safe driving. It is covered under Chapter 90, Section 13, Impeded Operation, that states, "No person, when operating a motor vehicle, shall permit to be on or in the vehicle or on or about his person anything which may interfere with or impede proper operation..." It is a civil infraction, punishable by a $35 fine.

More
It's not just the large dogs, even small dogs can create a danger for the driver as they can climb obstruct your view or interfere with your ability to use the steering wheel, windshield wipers, turn signals or the brake or gas pedal They can be as much of a distraction to you and just as dangerous as texting driver. Secondly, you may be placing your dog at risk.

Incidents
Cohasset has had two dogs killed in past years. One from the air bag and the other dog was killed from impact with the steering wheel (the driver had the dog on his lap). Both incidents occurred in high-speed collisions on Route 3A, Deputy Chief William Quigley said.

"Just the other day I saw a local man driving with a small dog. The dog was actually standing in the rear window of his car," Quigley said. "Operators have to realize that anything that is loose in the passenger compartment during a crash becomes a javelin upon impact, and will be thrown violently toward the location of the impact. A small pet doesn't stand a chance — even in a low speed crash."

Head out window
As much as your dog enjoys having his head out of the window, this can be a distraction for other drivers who could veer off course when turning to look at your dog. Another problem here is that the dog can easily get injured when hit by insects or stones thrown up from the road — you only have to note how hard things hit your windscreen to imagine what would happen if something hit your dog in the eye.

Restrained
Many people have a dog screen set up to keep their dog in the back of their SUV that protects them from interfering with the driver and away from the airbags. MA law (Chapter 90, Section 22H) also requires dogs to be secured when riding in an open bed of a pick-up truck with a harness or other manner.

CPA legislation changes on deck

Amendment to recreation rules

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"This will allow us to do projects we weren't able to do before. We can do major capital improvements or rehabilitation."
Russ Bonetti, CPC chairman

Cohasset's Community Preservation Committee reveled in some goods news late last week: the state's fiscal year 2013 budget was approved by both the house and senate on Thursday, June 28, including new CPA (Community Preservation Act) legislation with changes to the act's recreation rules and $25 million for the statewide CPA trust fund. The bill is now before Governor Patrick, and CPA supporters are hoping he will sign it.

What does this mean on the local level? Cohasset's CPC chairman Russ Bonetti explained that the proposed legislation would allow the CPC to get involved in projects for existing recreational properties that were not acquired through the CPC, such as Cohasset's Sailing Club. The Sailing Club approached the CPC in the winter to request CPA money to help pay for its planned new clubhouse on Government Island. The CPC was unable to approve the funds because the Sailing Club was not acquired through the CPC, which is required for using CPA funds. Bonetti left the door open for the Sailing Club at the time, but added that he could not make any promises. The approval, however, seemed like a no-go for the CPC.

Now, things could change.

"This will allow us to do projects we weren't able to do before," said Bonetti. "We can do major capital improvements or rehabilitation."

Prior to this change, "this has been a problem in many communities who have plenty of existing, older rec properties," Bonetti said. "I'm glad to see the changes to the recreation portion of the CPA. There are a lot of towns like Cohasset where we have existing recreational facilities that can stand some work without taking on new properties."

There are currently 148 communities in Massachusetts that are members of the Community Preservation Coalition, which use the CPA to preserve open space and historic sites, create affordable housing, and develop outdoor recreational facilities.

Right now, the bill's $25 million is a one-time transfer, but both the house and senate have indicated their intention to provide the same amount from the budget surplus on a yearly basis, according to the Community Preservation Coalition.

Bonetti said that the $25 million the state is transferring to the CPA fund should be a "great help" for local communities as well. However, the CPC chair added that he doesn't look at this amount as a "slush fund." Those applying for CPA grants will likely have to contribute some money as well.

The legislation change is good news for Cohasset's CPC because they are considering a few proposals over the summer, including a fencing restoration request from Central Cemetery. The CPC will likely spend the summer working on CPA grant requests for the fall Special Town Meeting.

The issue of what CPA grants could and could not fund came up during the spring Annual Town Meeting. On Sat., May 12, Town Meeting voted to approve $65,000 in Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds to pay for window restoration at the First Parish Meeting House, despite town-wide debates over whether the matter violates the separation of church and state. Voters also supported four other recommendations by the Community Preservation Committee (CPC), including a $15,000 appropriation to repair the Meeting House clock (the building is owned by First Parish while the clock belongs to the town) and the purchase of two parcels of land off Forest Avenue (known as the Bread and Cheese swamp) using $50,000 from the CPA's Open Space Sub Account and another $50,000 in undesignated CPA funds.

During discussion on the CPC's Town Meeting warrant articles, some citizens asked about whether the CPA funds could be used on town parks, playgrounds and recreation facilities.

Now, the CPC must wait and see if the Governor approves the bill; he has 10 days to review and consider amendments to the bill. In the meantime, Cohasset CPC members are doing their part to ensure Patrick signs the bill.

"I think pretty much everybody on the committee called or emailed him," said Bonetti.

More to come in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

CPC: Bill History

The Community Preservation Coalition has been advocating for passage of An Act to Sustain Community Preservation — a bill designed to stabilize and strengthen the Community Preservation Act. The bill cleared an important hurdle in early June 2011, when the Joint Committee on Community Development and Small Business gave it a favorable recommendation. The bill was then forwarded on to the House Committee on Ways and Means, and became known by its House number, HB 765. The bill was then filed as an amendment to the House version of the FY 2013 state budget in April 2012, passing with a change to the funding source. The Senate changed the funding source yet again, and passed the legislation as part of its budget debate in May, 2012. The two versions were reviewed by a conference committee, which revised the funding source yet again, with the final version including a one-time $25 million transfer to statewide CPA Trust Fund in the fall of 2013. The House and Senate voted to approve the conference committee report on June 28, 2012 and sent it to the Governor for approval.

CPA Funds

The Community Preservation Act was signed into law about 10 years ago and from that point on, some 148 cities and towns, including Cohasset, have adopted the legislation allowing them to obtain Community Preservation Funds to purchase open space, rehabilitate historic structures, and develop affordable housing.

CPA funds are generated from two sources: a town real estate tax surcharge (1.5 percent in Cohasset) and some level of state match, determined from year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).

The Community Preservation Committee reviews projects and makes recommendations to Town Meeting, where voters have the final say.

POLICE BEAT

Head-on crash on Route 3A

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

At 5:29 p.m. on Wednesday (June 27), police responded to an accident near 580 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Police said a 2006 Audi sedan, operated by a 21-year-old Cohasset man, was headed north on Route 3A when the operator dosed off, crossing over the solid, double-yellow centerline, hitting a 1998 Lincoln Continental head-on. A 74-year-old Cohasset woman operated the Lincoln. A third vehicle, a 2009 BMW sedan, operated by a 60-year-old Scituate man, who was behind the Lincoln and also headed south, was clipped in the accident and hit by debris, police said.

The Audi and Lincoln were both totaled. Both drivers were transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. The BMW did not have to be towed and that operator did not report any injuries, police said. The 21-year-old driver of the Audi is being charged with operating with a suspended registration, failure to stay in marked lanes and failure to wear a seatbelt.

Stopped

Cohasset police assisted the State Police in stopping a 2004 Chevrolet Malibu on Monday (June 25) at West Corner around 9:37 p.m. Police said the car had been involved in a hit and run accident near the beach by the Carousel. Hull issued a BOLO (Be on the Lookout) to area towns and Cohasset stopped the car, which was driven by a 50-year-old Scituate woman. The State Police that patrol Nantasket Beach took over the scene.

Larceny

A 36-year-old cook at the Red Lion Inn reported on Tuesday (June 26) that he had left his iPad on the bar when he went into the kitchen and when he came out, it was gone. There are no suspects at this time, police said.

Scam

An 83-year-old woman who lives at the Harborview Apartments reported to police on Tuesday (June 26) that she had received a strange phone call that was a likely scam. The caller, who did not identify himself, was trying to sell her medical equipment and wanted her credit card number. She hung up on him, police said.

Alleged assault

A now former employee of a local business, who is 23 and from Scituate, reported to police that a 50-year-old male employee had assaulted him during working hours. He reported the man pushed him and pulled his shirt over his head. The alleged victim did not want to pursue charges and is no longer working there, but wanted the incident documented.

Red light

Police responded to a two-car accident at 6:14 p.m. on Tuesday (June 26) on King Street (Route 3A). Police said a 2012 Volkswagen Jetta, operated by a 71-year-old Needham woman, was headed south and ran the red light by Stop & Shop, according to witnesses. A 1998 Mercedes Benz, operated by a 54-year-old Norwell woman was traveling from upper King Street through the green light and broadsided the VW. The Norwell woman was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. Both cars were towed. The Needham woman was cited for a red light violation, police said.

Shuttle

At 11:27 a.m. on Wednesday (June 27), a parking lot accident was reported. Police said the Cohasset senior shuttle van struck the side of a 2008 Nissan Altima parked near Starbucks at Tedeschi Plaza. A 53-year-old Cohasset woman was operating the van. Papers were exchanged, police said.

Shaw's lot

At 9:30 p.m. on Saturday (June 30), an accident in the parking lot by Shaw's was reported. Police said a 58-year-ol Scituate woman reported that her 2005 Lexus SUV was parked in the lot while she went shopping for about 20 minutes. When she came out, she noticed damage to the rear of the vehicle on the driver's side. There were no witnesses and the incident was not caught on surveillance video, police said.

Junior operator

When police stopped a 2000 Toyota Camry with three occupants at 10:41 p.m. on Friday (June 29) on Depot Court, two female passengers in the car got out and ran off. The driver, a 17-year-old girl from Weymouth, had just obtained her license. Police cited her with a junior operator violation (newly licensed teens have passenger restrictions) and said her license would be suspended as a result.

Dog incidents

Last Saturday, a letter carrier reported a dog bite on her left wrist that occurred while she was delivering mail on Sohier Street. In an unrelated incident on Sunday (July 1), a mother reported a loose dog jumped on her son, scratching him. The animal control officer is following up on both reports, police said.

Raccoons

Police said three raccoons that appeared to be a family (two youths and one adult) were hit by a car and killed on Sohier Street last Monday (June 25).

SOLAR POWER

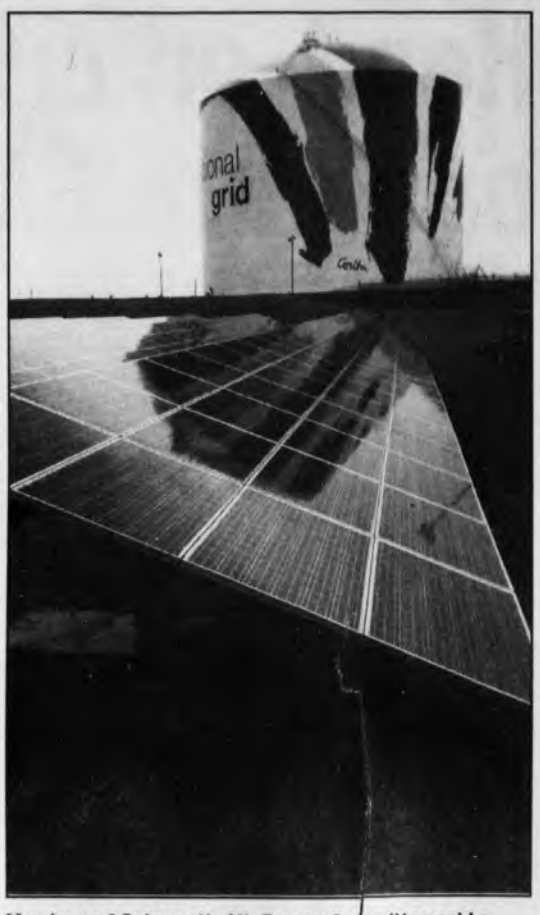
with the RFP, and will pose the question to the selectmen.

That's the next "big milestone" for the committee, said Bodell: "Sending out the RFP, asking developers to bid to develop a solar array on town property to assist us with lowering our town electricity costs."

The site visit to National Grid's solar array gave the AEC a sense of what a similar setup could look like in Cohasset. Bodell called the visit "very insightful." The tour was provided by Fouad Dagher, manager of new products and services at National Grid; AEC members in attendance were Bodell, co-chair John Herth, Steve Wenner and Marie Caristi-MacDonald.

"It was great to see an actual array up and running, and wonderful to hear the logistics that went into it," Bodell said. "We obtained some nice information from National Grid — how long it took them to put out their RFP, for the develop to get a site permit, and to start construction. That information will be incorporated into our roadmap."

National Grid has a 1.2 megawatt array, which is around the same size the AEC hopes to install in Cohasset between the landfill and school roof.



"It was a very nice visit," Bodell said, "not just to see a real world solar array, but to get insight from somebody who's been through the process so we can properly manage expectations for ourselves and our town."

The AEC received similar guidance from the town of Scituate, which successfully installed a solar array. Bodell and other committee members met with Scituate's superintendent of the Department of Public Works, Al Bangert, last November, who provided a copy of Scituate's RFP as an example. The committee learned from Bangert at the time that Scituate has been able to save around $250,000 on electricity each year, although the figure has varied from year to year. Bodell said at the time that Scituate anticipates saving around $3.5 million over a span of 20 years.

Cohasset's AEC hopes to realize similar savings.

"There's optimism among the committee," said Bodell. "This is a great endeavor for the town to pursue."

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

MOVIE

"We came just shy of winning the bid," said Milanoski.

The effort to get the movie made in Cohasset was led by Supt. of Schools Barbara Cataldo, along with Milanoski and Ted Carr, then-chair of the Board of Selectmen who now sits on the town's Economic Development Committee. The three submitted a proposal chockfull of photographs of Cohasset landmarks to Sandler's production company, Happy Madison Productions, outlining why Cohasset would be a great choice for the film.

"Countless features of this charming town offer optimal scenery for creative and comprehensive filming rights," the proposal, dated Mar. 3, 2012, stated. "Advantages of filming in Cohasset include 24-hour permits with a personal liaison to ensure uninterrupted filming."

Several members of the "Grown-Ups 2" crew, including location provider Charles Harrington of Columbia Pictures, director Denis Dugan, and producer Barry Benardi, visited town on Feb. 23, and Cataldo gave them a tour.

"It was a week in the limelight," the superintendent said. "It was a lot of fun being with these guys; I showed them around, I went out to eat with them... I went out of my way to make this happen and felt they would support us, but it didn't work. We sent Adam Sandler a t-shirt and a letter on why he had to come to us."

Cataldo isn't crying over missed opportunities, however. The superintendent is determined to try to bring Hollywood to Cohasset again.

"It didn't happen this year; it wasn't meant to be... but I won't give up on that end of it," said Cataldo.

Milanoski said that he's proud of Cataldo's efforts.

"Barbara did an awful lot of work — she was the point person on developing that proposal, and Ted Carr helped her," the town manager said, adding that he isn't giving up on another potential film project in the future, either.

"We're going to try" to bring another Hollywood production in, Milanoski said. "It's good for the community to explore these options."

Carr said that since he recently joined the economic development committee, he sees a Hollywood film as a golden opportunity for Cohasset.

"That's one of the main reasons I've joined the committee," said Carr. "We plan to prepare the town for a future movie opportunity... I think there's a lot Cohasset can offer." The committee is also recruiting new members to help work on economic development projects. "There are many things coming that are opportunities we need to take advantage of."

While Cohasset lost out on the bid for "Grown-Ups 2," a popular reality TV show recently filmed an episode right on the common. Celebrity chef Gordon Ramsay filmed an episode of "Kitchen Nightmares" at Barefoot Bob's in Hull; the restaurant's food truck made a stop in Cohasset on Wed., May 16, with Ramsay serving up chowder and fish and chips to Cohasset residents who gathered around— and signed a release so they could be on camera. Carr, who was selectmen chair at the time, authorized the film crew to set up shop that day.

Neighboring Hingham is also trying to get in on the Tinsel Town action; officials there have made overtures to the Mass. Film Office that Hingham is a film-friendly town. Hingham selectman Laura Burns has even cited Cohasset as an example of a nearby town that large-scale productions have utilized in the past, putting the small seaside town on the map.

Nearby Marshfield is getting ready for its close-up thanks to part-time resident Steve Carrell of "The Office" fame, whose new movie "The Way, Way Back" is being filmed locally. Carrell and his wife, Nancy, own the Marshfield Hills General Store.

But Cohasseters know Mrs. Carrell as one of their own. The actress, formerly known as Nancy Walls, hails from Cohasset.

As for Cohasset's future film aspirations, the indie horror flick "Cohasset Snuff Film," shot by a three-man crew last summer, will debut on Halloween night in select cities, including Los Angeles and Boston. The "found footage," documentary-style film could draw attention to the small coastal town in a whole different way, compared to other movies shot in town.

Perhaps Cohasset officials and film fans can hope for a "Grown-Ups 3."

OLD COLONY SQUARE

New space for playtime

Play space designed for preschool age children

By Jenny Magruder
jmagruder@wickedlocal.com

A year and a half ago, sisters Amanda Zani and Tamsin Garside of Hingham were sitting inside with their children and staring out the window on a rainy day. They wanted to take their kids somewhere, but they could not think of any options for preschool age children, except for places that required membership or an appointment.

For their families – and others in their circle – there was also an issue with space.

"We used to have a playgroup of seven moms with seven kids," Zani wrote in an email. "But then that grew to 14 kids, and a house just did not have enough open space for them to play inside."

Frustrated by their lack of options and space, Zani and Garside decided to do something about it.

"We wanted to create a place that would facilitate spontaneous play dates and unstructured play," she said.

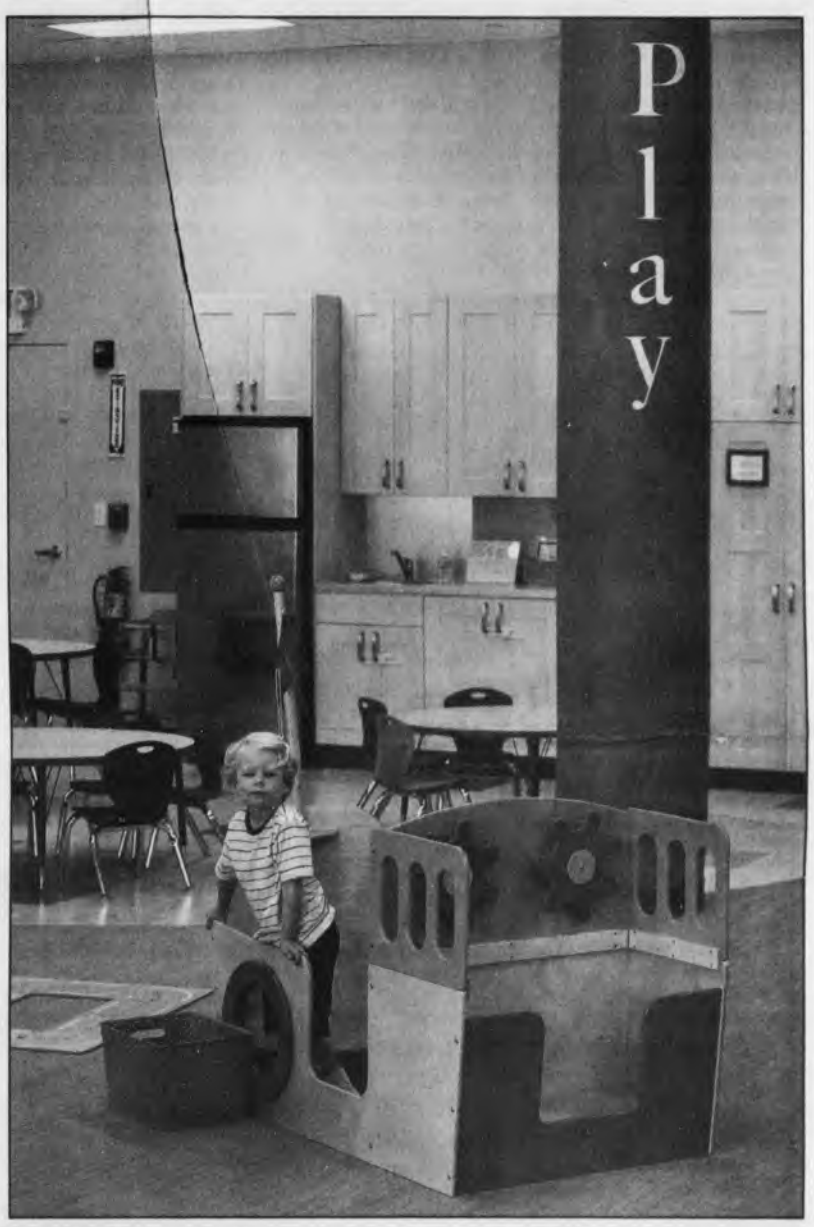
With this, Playdipity was born.

Their first priority was to find a great location. After searching around Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, and Hull, Zani and Garside decided on a space inside Old Colony Square.

"We loved the newness of the location. Plus, it is centrally located in Cohasset, with access from 3A and the train station," Zani stated.

This brand new location allowed Zani and Garside to have a fresh space to create their vision. They put down mats in the play area and installed indoor jungle gyms, with a special one just for toddlers – and of course, a lot of toys.

Zani and Garside also had caregivers in mind when creating Playdipity. They installed a kitchenette so that caregivers can bring their own food and prepare it for their children if they plan on staying for a while. Although it is parent supervised, it provides a large space to facilitate open play for children, and allows parents to relax and socialize and not have to worry about their kids disappearing from sight.



Along with regular playtime, Playdipity also offers a great venue for birthday parties on the weekends. There are three party packages to choose from, ranging in price by how much they offer. All of the packages at a minimum guarantee an hour and a half of playtime with exclusive use of the playroom and kitchenette, a party for 12 children, and a party coordinator that will help set up, clean up, and run your party. Add-ons available include decorations, party favor bags, cupcakes, and pizza.

For more information, visit the Playdipity website at www.playdipity.com or call 781-923-1749.

AROUND TOWN

Baby boom for Cohasset grandparents

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset, how is everyone this week? I hope that everyone enjoyed this past week and their 4th of July. The weather has been nice for the most part, warm with only a few showers and thunderstorms, certainly nothing to complain about, that's for sure.

As I tend to do each time Summer rolls around, I am going to remind all of us,(myself especially as I cannot believe that this is July 6th) to remember how fast this season seems to go by. We wait for it to come and then before we know it, the 4th of July is here, then the rest of the summer just goes way too fast. Take the time to enjoy even the smallest of moments, like the fact that at 8:10 at night, you are still outside with the kids, watching them play as the sun is just starting to set for the night or, take a splash with the family at the beach when you normally would say forget it, like rig-ghhhtttt NOW, ready...set...go! Or, grab a good book, get a glass of lemonade or better yet, a glass of wine and go sit outside and read a few chapters.

Whatever it is that you do, enjoy it and relax just a little, tomorrow comes way to fast and the minutes and moments that happen now, are memories before we know it. I am determined to find some way to stress less, enjoy more and create more enjoyable moments to remember...I challenge all who are reading this right now to join me in my challenge, it sounds like a lot of fun with a really great town! Now, on with the news...

Cousins

We all know the saying "Thank Heavens For Little Girls" and for all these families, that is so very true. Congratulations to all of you on the addition of sweet babies!

• Will and Kristen Banning announce the birth of a daughter, Grace Pauly Banning, on May 31, 2012, at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth. She weighed 9 pounds, 5 ounces, and was 21.5 inches long.

Big sister Ella, 2-years-old, welcomed the new arrival.

Grace Pauly Banning arrived on May 31. Grace, along with cousins Chloe and Charlie, are great-grandchildren of Frank and Anne Evans! COURTESY PHOTO

Paternal grandparents are Martha and Bill Banning of Overland Park, Kan., and maternal grandparents are Rosemary and Mike O'Connell of Cohasset.

• Derek and Courtney Heald of Scituate announce the birth of a daughter, Chloe Beatrice Heald, on May 7, 2012, at South Shore Hospital. She weighed 8 pounds, 5 ounces, and was 19.5 inches long.

Chloe was welcomed home by her brother, Jack, 2-1/2 years old.

Paternal grandparents are Gerri and Ron Heald of Tewksbury, and maternal grandparents are Jane and Ed Goff of Cohasset.

• Adrienne and Matt DiFonzo of Natick announce the birth of their son, Charles Stephen DiFonzo, on May 3, 2012, at Newton-Wellesley Hospital. He weighed 9 pounds, 9 ounces, and was 21 inches long.

Paternal grandparents are Maureen and Alan DiFonzo of Hopedale, maternal grandparents are Priscilla and Stephen Sullivan of Cohasset.

Charlie is the first grandchild of Shirley DiFonzo of Hopedale, and the fourth grandchild of Nora Sullivan of Quincy.

All three of the new arrivals are the great-grandchildren of Frank and Anne Evans of Cohasset.

So sweet!

Lilly-Jayne Eleanor Mathieu was born on June 26, 2012 and weighed 7 pounds, 15 ounces and was 20 inches long. Lilly joins Mom (Amanda), Dad (Brian), and big sister Christina, who is 8 years old, all from Cohasset. The proud grandparents are Judy and Dan Cellucci of Cohasset and Susan Mathieu of Millbury, Mass.

Where's Waldo?

We have a question to ask of everyone in town? Where's Waldo? Believe it or not, he is in Cohasset, of course! Waldo is turning 25 this year, and to celebrate, the famous fellow in the striped shirt and black-rimmed specs is visiting 20 different Cohasset businesses all through the month of July. Those who spot him can win prizes, including buttons, books and more.

Anyone who wishes to participate can pick up a "Find Waldo in Cohasset!" search list with the names of all the businesses, and collect an "I Found Waldo at _____" card for each Waldo they spot. Collecting cards in 16 or more businesses and turning them in at Buttonwood Books & Toys will win a Waldo button (or a prize) and an entry for other, larger prizes to be drawn at a Waldo party on July 31. The Grand Prize is a complete six-volume set of Waldo books.

For more information about hunting for Waldo in Cohasset, call Buttonwood Books & Toys at 781-383-2665.

Library

Here are a few events that are taking place at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library coming up soon. Reference Librarian, Gayle Walsh, will help you learn the basics of internet searching at a free workshop on Wednesday, July 11 at 10:30 am. Here you can explore the library's website and use Google to search for interesting sites. This free, hands-on workshop is for beginners who have had some computer experience. Space is limited to 6 people and you may register online or call the reference librarian at 383-1348.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all of your news for next week no later than Tuesday by 5:00 pm.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

Beat the summer heat

And other green living tips

ERIN DALE

Looking for new ways to conserve energy this summer? Need an easy eco project around the house? Our panel of local green experts returns this week with ideas to make the most out of summer— in the greenest possible fashion.

Energy savers:

"Conserve energy by purchasing major appliances with an Energy Star rating. Compared to a 1990 model, an Energy Star-qualified refrigerator would save enough electricity to light a home for more than four and a half months."

"We've all heard about how the new compact fluorescent bulbs can save money with energy cost, but consider what kind of bulb you replace with. A bulb that has a 'daylight spectrum' color temperature of lighting can be the best choice. In a business setting, daylight spectrum can offer workers less fatigue, eye strain, headaches, and a safer work environment with less injuries and time lost due to health issues for a variety of reasons. For the business bottom line, this small change to a daylight spectrum/energy saving bulb is a win-win and can boost productivity levels, which generates to increase the bottom-line. Introduce a bit of fresh air and really watch productivity levels rise."

"Turn off the heat dry feature on your dishwasher. You can drastically reduce the energy it takes to run your dishwasher if you turn off your heat dry button or turn on an air dry button—how much depends on your make and model. Couple air-drying with only washing full loads, not pre-rinsing your dishes, and using an eco-friendly detergent.

"Use a HEPA filtered vacuum. HEPA stands for High Efficiency Particulate Air. HEPA filters are designed to trap small particles, pollutants, dust, and allergens that would normally remain in the air we breathe inside our homes. Basically, they clean the air we breathe and improve the quality of indoor air. If you have serious asthma and allergy issues, you may want to look into a commercial grade vacuum with a HEPA filter."

— Paula Keif, Owner/Green Industry Expert, Green Koala & Go Green Web Directory-Marshfield MA, www.greenkoala.net

Home improvement:

"There are many different ways to be a little more eco friendly when working on a home improvement project. We always bring our own drop clothes to a job site and obviously use those over and over again. If you decide to start a painting project at home rather than buying the plastic drop clothes and creating more waste, look through your linens. Do you have old blankets or sheets that you do not use? They make great alternatives for smaller projects and can be stored in a garage or shed and used time and time again.

We use paint thinner over and over again for all different projects. Have you ever noticed that over time you will end up with paint sludge that settles on the bottom of the container? You do not have to throw the paint thinner away at that point. Try pouring the clean solvent off the top and store that in a clean container. Take the paint sludge on the bottom and dispose of that."

— James Wolfe, Owner, Wolfe Painting Company, Cohasset, www.wolfepainting-co.com

Easy eco decoration:

"At some point, a cotton button-down shirt wears out its welcome to a hanger. Turn it into cloth napkins, reducing your use of paper products. The softer and more worn, the better. Have fun mixing and matching patterns for table settings for your casual summer dining inside or alfresco. Faded plaids, stripes and check patterns look especially great. Wash the shirts well and cut the fabric into uniformly sized pieces, usually 12" to 15" square. Either leave edges frayed or sew a hem for a cleaner crisper look. Cost is $0!"

— Donna Morgan, Owner/Designer, Donna Morgan Interior Design, Cohasset, dmorgandesign@gmail.com

Veggin' out:

"Veggies are a great addition to any centerpiece for added color, of course until you are ready to eat them! Add some Nasturtium blossoms; they are easy to grow, beautiful and tasty. Check out your local farmers market and see what types of fruits and vegetables are in season before you are entertaining. Your guests will love your creativity and use of unusual objects. We often will mix blossoms with vegetables like artichokes, asparagus and even pineapples. The options are endless!

"Coffee grounds in the garden? Yes, that morning cup of joe is a great fertilizer for your lawn. After completely drying they can be dispersed in your lawn spreader alone or mixed with lime. Need more grounds? Go to your local barista and ask them to share [many cafes regularly 'recycle' their grounds by giving them away]. I am sure they will, as their trash will be lighter. Save space in a landfill and your lawn at the same time."

— Kelly Dolloff, Owner/Designer, Artistic Blossoms Floral Design Studio, Marshfield & Boston, MA, www.artisticblossoms.com

GIMME SHELTER

Tango and Tangerine are so cute

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find shelter for two adorable orange Tabby kittens.

They are called Tangerine and Tango for now, but give naming rights to whomever is lucky enough to adopt them. They are hoping to share a home with children between the ages of 6 and 60.

These kittens promise to delight you with their antics, and when they get tired, will cuddle up with you and purr. A sunny window, a piece of string, and a lot of loving are what they're looking for.

If you're interested in these two, please call 781-534-4902 for further information.

You can visit them at the shelter where you can also meet all of our very adoptable cats.

While you're at the shelter you can meet these two baby kittens and all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org. HSAR sends out a huge thank you to its many supporters.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

A musical trip to the movies

BETH MACLEOD LARGENT

Picture this – a harried family, a hot day, no together time, kids at camp, mom and dad at work – a pretty typical scenario and one I live every day. Now picture this: A quilt surrounded by lawn chairs, two or three or four pairs of bare feet on the quilt, favorite picnic dinner in hand, a glass of wine and some glorious music to serenade you as you watch the sunset with your beloved family and friends. Take the time to savor! Smell the fresh mown grass. Catch up with friends or have a girls' night out. Whatever you need, we can help.

The 16th season of South Shore Conservatory's Evenings Under the Stars outdoor concert series starts on Saturday, July 7, and I'm so excited! In true "EUS" fashion, Hingham native Nicholas (Nick) Palmer will conduct the EUS Festival Orchestra Pops concert as they present "Music from the Movies."

This concert follows our traditional Pops format of light classical music in the first half, and more contemporary music in the second. The twist this year is that all the music is from the movies – so you'll hear light pieces such as music from "Harry Potter" and "La Boheme," but also more familiar "heavy" pieces such as "Also Sprach Zarathustra" from "2001: A Space Odyssey." We'll end with our traditional "1812 Overture" featuring our security department on shotgun/cannon.

Most people will recognize "The William Tell Overture," Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries" and "The Can-Can" from the operetta "Orpheus in the Underworld," but might not know the composer or realize that this music has been used in other movies. People will certainly recognize John Williams' pieces, such as those from "Raiders of the Lost Ark." This concert will be chock full of "I know that piece!" moments.

Nick and I came up with the idea of Music from the Movies over lunch last fall. We decided it's easier to program music when you have a common thread, whether it's a color, a country or movie music. This idea seemed just right for our audience and the concerts we present. The program is fun for the family, yet challenging enough for the musicians to keep them excited. We pride ourselves on the fact that our pops concerts are one of a kind.

Again this year, we'll introduce a "guest conductor" who won the opportunity to conduct in our Chase Away the Blues silent auction in January. This year's winner is Bill Gagnon, a well loved Trustee and supporter of SSC. He'll be conducting the "Colonel Bogey March" from "Bridge over the River Kwai," a piece so familiar that everyone will be able to hum or whistle it!

The EUS Orchestra's Music from the Movies is the first of eight Evenings Under the Stars concerts this summer. The performance takes place rain or shine, but we sincerely hope for shine. Many thanks to Hingham Institute for Savings for generously sponsoring this concert. To purchase tickets and for information on the entire Evenings Under the Stars concert series, visit http://www.sscmusic.org/evenings_under_the_stars.html.

Beth MacLeod Largent is the Conservatory's Director of Performance. She is also a vital part of South Shore Conservatory's voice department, both as an educator and a musician.

GUEST VIEW

Independence Day

The Fourth has always had special meaning to all Americans, a day that commemorates the birth of our nation. I often wonder, in unending amazement, the courage - the selfless determination, of those who gave so much for the freedoms we hold so dear today. This concept was driven like a spike through my being on the day I knelt down on the quiet shores of Omaha Beach, my back to the sea. The ocean was calm. Waves rippled like children gently washing ashore behind me as I looked up at the bunkers overgrown with vegetation, but still in place

The fertile soil of freedom has been nurtured by generations of Americans willing to sacrifice everything. From Bunker Hill, to Dorchester Heights, to D-Day, to Pointe du Hoc, and to Vietnam, and beyond — the broken hearts, the spilled blood and the endless tears... the price paid in full.

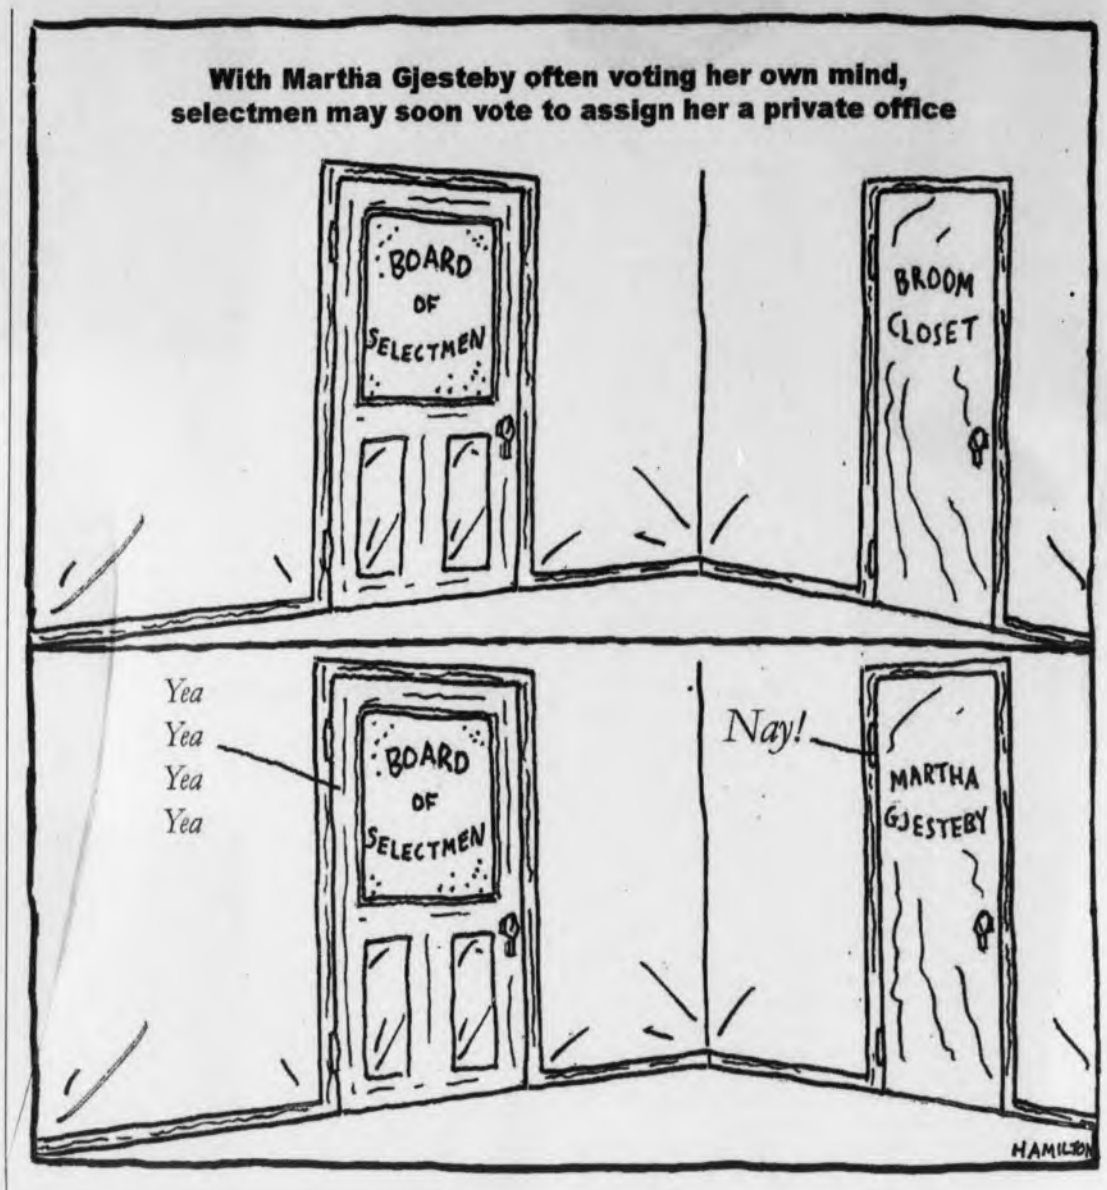
It is in this context that I would like to share a few moments with you taken from the pages of American History:

• "My God! How little do my countrymen know what precious blessings they are in possession of, and which no other people on earth enjoy!"—Thomas Jefferson

• "It is easy to take liberty for granted when you have never had it taken from you." — M. Grundler

• "They that can give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety." — Benjamin Franklin

• "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country!" Nathan Hale (Last words before being hanged by the British. He was 21.)



• "History does not long entrust the care of freedom to the weak or the timid." — Dwight D. Eisenhower.

In my own words and quoting from my book, "Ticket to Ride, the Promise of America, never forget that much of the hard work has already been done for us. The fertile soil of freedom has been nurtured by generations of Americans willing to sacrifice everything. From Bunker Hill, to Dorchester Heights, to D-Day, to Pointe du Hoc, and to Vietnam, and beyond — the broken hearts, the spilled blood and the endless tears... the price paid in full."

The America I know cries out to the world with boundless energy, the desire to achieve something greater than personal acclaim or ambition... the American people attempt to leave the world a better place because we live by example. We put out the fires and free those who've never known freedom.

Please take a moment to give thanks to those, some long gone from this life, who sacrificed dearly to give us The Fourth of July!

Don Hussey is a Hingham resident and author of "Ticket to Ride, the Promise of America."

COMMENTARY

Do new hires have right experience?

LAURA O'GRADY

It is confounding however that so little accurate information has been made available to the parents of CMHS students regarding these important new additions to our school, and this lack of information leads to important questions...

While I am pleased to read of the enthusiasm that the new hires for the positions of Principal and Assistant Principal at CMHS have for their new positions, as a parent and stakeholder in the public school system, I have questions concerning the cumulative experience that the two candidates bring to the school, as well as the relevance of some of that experience. Carolyn Connolly and Brian Scott bring a combined 4 years of Assistant Principal (equivalent) experience, one-half of that time having been spent in a private school environment; and no experience as a High School Principal.

Superintendent Cataldo, in a previous Mariner article, lauded the committee procedure by which last year's Osgood School Principal was found, and announced enthusiastically that the same process would be used to find candidates for the CMHS positions. Since the Osgood Principal left within one year under circumstances that have not been disclosed to the public, it is also prudent for residents of Cohasset who are interested in the administration at CMHS to educate themselves about the new hires.

Ms. Connolly has 2 years of experience as Assistant Principal at Pembroke High School, prior to which she spent one year as the Dean of Students there, and several years as an English Teacher at Silver Lake Regional High School before the "split" that created Pembroke High School. Ms. Connolly has not worked in a Middle School environment, a specific requirement included in the job posting for the CMHS Principal position.

Both hires have Harvard educations: Ms. Connolly earning a Master's degree in School Leadership from the Graduate School of Education; and Mr. Scott receiving his Master's in Theological Studies from Harvard Divinity School in the Program in Religion and Secondary Education. This program was described in both the Mariner article and on Mr. Scott's resume as the "Program in Secondary Education and Religion". While the change to the program title is subtle, its change in emphasis is significant. According to the Harvard Divinity School website, the PRSE is designed to "teach religion to public high school students." It is reasonable to question the relevance of these skills for CMHS, given that no classes in religion are offered.

Mr. Scott brings 2 years of experience as Vice Principal of Student Affairs at Catholic Memorial, a private boys' Catholic High School founded by the Congregation of Christian Brothers. CM's administration includes a separate position for Vice Principal of Academics. It is reasonable to question the transferability of skills for managing student affairs in a private religious boys' school to the Assistant Principal position at CMHS. Ms. Cataldo said of Mr. Scott, "we expect him to be a strong male role model." At CMHS Mr. Scott will be working with a roughly 50 percent female student body for the first time. In addition, discipline in public schools is governed by due process and constitutional rights, while the disciplinary rules of a private religious school are determined by the school, in accordance with the belief system thereof, and contracted with the parents. It would benefit CMHS stakeholders to understand the challenges faced by Mr. Scott in his new role, and the training if any that will be required to prepare him for these challenges.

The largest part of Mr. Scott's experience at CM was his 6 years as Chair of the Theology Department, concurrent with 3 years chairing the Campus Ministry. According to his resume, he developed the curriculum for the department, which includes requirements such as The Story of Jesus, The History of the Catholic Church and Understanding Christianity. This significant portion of Mr. Scott's experience is noted last in the Mariner article, after coaching football and lacrosse, and 3 month - 2 year tenures as "summer school principal" and "director of technology".

These new hires are undoubtedly good, well-educated people. It is confounding however that so little accurate information has been made available to the parents of CMHS students regarding these important new additions to our school, and this lack of information leads to important questions, including: Why was the apparently unsuccessful process that was used for hiring the Osgood Principal implemented again for these critical CMHS positions; Why were candidates chosen that do not meet the requirements for these positions as outlined in the job postings, especially with respect to experience; and, Were there no candidates available with both appropriate, relevant education AND experience for these extremely important positions?

Chair of the School Committee, Jeanne Astino said it was time for the school department to "look forward to where we are going and what we want to accomplish". Without past experience to provide the basis for future actions it can be very difficult to develop the traction to get there.

Laura O'Grady lives at 115 Sohier Street.

HEALTH NOTES

When the thermometer rises

STEVE BOBO

During this period, more people in this country died from extreme heat than from hurricanes, lightning, tornadoes, floods, and earthquakes combined.

What with the spate of summer competitive events going on in Town, we are bound to need to know the effect of heat on runners, cyclists, etc. One can only go back a few years to 2002, the hottest August on record, when the Center for Disease Control told us what happened and what we did to avoid the effects of the summer high temperatures. Over the last 20 years, excessive heat exposure caused 8,015 deaths in the United States. During this period, more people in this country died from extreme heat than from hurricanes, lightning, tornadoes, floods, and earthquakes combined. Even young and healthy individuals can succumb to heat, so we reduced our participation in strenuous physical activities during hot weather. Air-conditioning is the number one protective factor against heat-related illness and death. If a home is not air-conditioned, people can reduce their risk for heat-related illness by spending time in public facilities that are air-conditioned. We also helped prevent heat-related illness by frequently drinking water or nonalcoholic fluids; wearing lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing; or doing our exercising during cooler parts of the day. Periodically checking on neighbors who do not have air conditioning is recommended or bringing them along when you check on neighbors who do have air conditioning is probably good too.

The most serious complication of overheating is heat stroke. Heat stroke occurs when the body is unable to regulate its temperature. The body's temperature rises rapidly, the sweating mechanism fails, and the body is unable to cool down. Body temperature may rise to 106 F or higher within 10 to 15 minutes. Heat stroke can cause death or permanent disability if emergency treatment is not provided.

- Warning signs of heat stroke vary but may include the following:
- An extremely high body temperature (above 103 F, orally)
- Red, hot, and dry skin (no sweating)
- Rapid, strong pulse
- Throbbing headache
- Dizziness, Nausea and/or Confusion
- Unconsciousness

If you see any of these signs, you may be dealing with a life-threatening emergency. Have someone call for immediate medical assistance while you begin cooling the victim. Do the following:

- Get the victim to a shady area and cool him rapidly using whatever methods you can. For example, immerse the victim in a tub of cool water; place the person in a cool shower; spray the victim with cool water from a garden hose; sponge the person with cool water; or if the humidity is low, wrap the victim in a cool, wet sheet and fan him or her vigorously.
- Monitor body temperature, and continue cooling efforts until it drops to 101-102 F.
- If medical personnel are delayed, call a hospital emergency room for instructions.
- Do not give the victim alcohol to drink, and get medical assistance as soon as possible.
- Sometimes a victim's muscles will begin to twitch uncontrollably as a result of heat stroke. If this happens, keep the victim from injuring himself, but do not place any object in the mouth and do not give fluids. Keep his air passages clear.

Other heat related illnesses such as heat exhaustion, heat rash, and sunburn are less life threatening.

Dress sensibly; my father liked winter. He used to say, you can always put on more clothes, but there's a limit to how much you can take off.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

The Center is pleased to be offering the return of monthly massage sessions. Stephanie Grenadier will give chair massage, reflexology and more at a very reasonable rate.

Nancy Manzolillo, Clinical Nurse Specialist from South Shore Hospital, was the presenter at one of the luncheon seminars. She discussed a heart-healthy diet. Did you know that strawberries, blueberries, walnuts and almonds are high on the list of foods for a healthy heart?

On June 27, Joe Canavan, Triad Director, presented a program, "Safety First." He addressed safety in the home and out walking and shopping. A film was shown starring Tom Bosley of TV fame, which dealt with prevention of falls and home safety. Mr. Canavan spoke about proper lighting in halls and stairways, also the importance of handrails. He pointed out the importance of keeping floors cleared. Be sure to put a non-slip rubber mat or strips on the floor of the tub and shower, and, of course, use proper grab bars. Have a light within easy reach from your bed and use night-lights. These were just some of the tips mentioned.

On the first day of summer Cohasset's Seniors joined those of other South Shore towns for a complimentary luncheon at Scituate LifeCare. This is an annual event. One in our group wanted me to let you that the ribs were "dee-liscious!" One member won a gift card for the Barker Tavern in a raffle. Another member of our group won the lovely centerpiece of fresh flowers that were on our table.

On July 14 we celebrated Flag Day and Father's Day. Anna and helpers served grilled hamburgers and hot dogs with all the fixings. After lunch, photos we had brought in of our Dads were shown on the screen. We tried to guess, without much lunch, whose Dad belonged to whom.

The Center is pleased to be offering the return of monthly massage sessions. Stephanie Grenadier will give chair massage, reflexology and more at a very reasonable rate. Of course you must call to reserve a time.

There will be no seminars during July and August. However, lunch will be served as usual at 12 noon.

On July 22, we will enjoy our annual picnic at Allerton House. There will be van transport for those who need it. If you would rather drive yourself, that is O.K. also.

We are looking forwards to July 18. That is when we are going to visit a Senior Center in one of the towns south of Cohasset. We will have a tour of the building and see what use is made of it and what programs and activities are offered. We will make a stop at P.J.'s restaurant in Scituate for lunch.

The monthly lunch at Golden Living will take place on July 31. This will be a barbeque. Remember, you must make a reservation for these events by calling 781-383-9112.

Well, summer has arrived with its heat and humidity. Time now for fans and air conditioners. I'm sure a lot of folks head for Sandy Beach on the sunny days. If I were younger, that's where I would be, heading for a delightful swim in that cold, salty water.

Raising Awareness about Obsessive Compulsive Disorder

On Thursday July 12th, there will be an evening event in Cohasset to raise awareness about Obsessive Compulsive Disorder (OCD) and its related spectrum disorders. The evening will feature guest speaker Dr. Michael Jenike, Medical Director of the OCD Institute at McLean Hospital and leading OCD researcher, as well as a local high school graduate who has successfully battled OCD since adolescence. The purpose of the evening is to educate the public about this often debilitating but treatable disorder and help raise monetary support for the International OCD Foundation.

The IOCDF is a not-for-profit organization that provides education and resources for patients, their families and the professional community. It also supports research for the cause of and effective treatments for OCD and related disorders. If you have an interest in attending this event, please contact Tricia Russ at tmruss@comcast.net. There is no cost to attend, however, attendance is limited. For additional information about OCD or to make an online donation, visit the IOCDF website at www.ocfoundation.org.

POLITICALLY SPEAKING

At the forefront of a busy election season

MATT GREGORY

This upcoming fall will be characterized by the election of candidates at the local, state, and national levels; consequently, policy change will be brought about either through the institution of new leaders in key positions or through the retaining of incumbents making new promises to help Massachusetts or the entire nation.

Over the next several weeks I will examine, analyze, and explore the various political happenings concerning the state legislature, U.S. Senate, and presidential races relating specifically to Massachusetts and the South Shore. As I am currently a senior at Cohasset High School, some of my focus will be directed toward an examination of the impact of such contests on a large and influential bloc of voters: high school seniors and college students. However, as Americans of all ages and socioeconomic status will feel the impact of the election of candidates in statewide and nationwide positions, the more general wide-reaching issues of the day will also be discussed.

Fall elections will be held at three distinct levels, with each contest proving significant for different populations and concerning different issues. At the local level, incumbent Republican State Senator Robert Hedlund, representing Plymouth and Norfolk counties, is one of the few State Legislators to run opposed this season, by either Democrats Genevieve Davis of Norwell or Steve May of Hull; Hedlund's campaign carries significance because as Assistant Minority Leader of the State Senate, his loss to a Democratic challenger would further tilt the partisan balance of power in the Senate in favor of Democrats, who already own a 36-4 majority.

On a statewide level, a far more wide-reaching and publicized competition is occurring between Dr. Elizabeth Warren and incumbent Senator Scott Brown. Gaining popularity and fame as a crusader against Wall Street and an advocate for consumer rights and corporation regulation, Warren supports a withdrawal of U.S. troops from Afghanistan, a continuation of Obama's DREAM immigration proposal, and the preservation of Obamacare. On the other hand, Brown, who took office in 2010 after the death of longtime Senate fixture Ted Kennedy, has voted against the DREAM act and Obamacare in addition to pledging to retain 30,000 troops in Afghanistan and supporting lower taxes and minimal regulation of trade and corporations. While these issues constitute areas of national importance, topics such as job creation, alternate energy funding and immigration also directly apply to Massachusetts and the South Shore, a region both candidates have emphasized through several campaign appearances.

Lastly, 2012 will be a pivotal year for all of America, as on Nov. 6, either Barack Obama will retain his role as U.S. President or former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney will replace him. While Massachusetts is historically a Democratic state, this year's race contains more intrigue than usual, as Romney served the Bay State for four years and thus his capability to serve as President will be judged in the context of his previous accomplishments in our state. Divergences in view over federal spending, taxation, overseas military presence, healthcare, same-sex marriage, abortion, and business regulation constitute the main points of conflict with nationwide impact, but in Massachusetts, voters will likely be influenced by either previous partisan leanings or by personal perception of Romney's leadership: is he the calm leader and financial genius who stabilized the economy and finished the Big Dig, or a flip-flopper who changed his views on abortion, same-sex marriage, and healthcare solely to gain conservative support in the primaries?

In the upcoming weeks and months, the impact of all three levels of elections will be felt to different extents on the South Shore and throughout Massachusetts. The political importance of Massachusetts can already be seen as demonstrated by President Obama's June 25 appearance in Boston as well as Romney's numerous campaign stops in New England.

In the coming weeks, I plan to examine the stances of candidates on issues pertaining to certain regions and groups of people as well as the impact of the different contests on the South Shore, the state, and the nation.

FOR THE RECORD

Fast and first isn't always right

GREGORY MATHIS

With many observers from all walks of life — from politicians, to regular folks, to the national media — anxiously awaiting the Supreme Court's vote Thursday (June 28) on President Barack Obama's national health insurance mandate, the rush to be the first to report the news led to blunders by a couple of big news organizations.

An AP photo published in many daily newspapers showed two reporters — a woman and a man — sprinting out of the Supreme Court building, presumably to file their story on the court's decision. The photo illustrated a story in a daily Boston newspaper reporting embarrassing errors made by CNN and Fox News during its breaking news coverage of the decision. Both news organizations initially reported the Supreme Court justices had ruled the individual mandate portion of Obamacare was unconstitutional, which would have been a huge deal, but also turned out not to be true.

It's clear to even the most casual of observers the error was a result of trying to be the first to break any kind of news out of this monumental decision before actually figuring out if the information they were reporting was right.

This isn't a dissertation about Obamacare, nor is it intended to generate debate on its merits. That discussion will play out in a forum much larger than this and will most certainly be a main focus in the 2012 presidential election and beyond, depending on who gets elected.

It is about our obligation, as well as every other media company's obligation, to be as accurate as humanly possible in our reporting at all times.

Believe it or not, that's easier said than done.

Social media and the immediacy the Internet can provide news organizations of all sizes are both empowering and dangerous.

Back in 2006, when our newsrooms took over the day-to-day operation of the Wicked Local websites, our instructions were to post whatever we knew at the time we were posting it to the Internet. For breaking news stories such as motor vehicle accidents, bank robberies or manhunts on or near school grounds, this was uncharted territory for reporters, especially weekly reporters.

With time between issues, there was ample opportunity to get to the scene, talk to witnesses and official sources, then follow up with police sources to verify information and get all the facts before sitting down to write the story for that week's paper.

In this new world, we were being asked to post information as soon as we had it, from whatever source. The story would be updated as it developed and the information would eventually be right. But what about those instances when an unverified fact made it into the public domain for all to see?

To that end, we're just starting to test the waters of Twitter and all it has to offer as a news tool. You'll start to see more activity from our editors and reporters on Twitter, but we've seen some of the same pitfalls as our first foray onto the World Wide Web.

Twitter is best used to report events as they're happening, mostly through observation (and a limited number of characters). A reporter's unfiltered observations without verified facts and confirmation of information can pose some challenges as well.

Reporters and editors still struggle with walking that fine line between being fast and first and being right. We need to balance the public's right and need to know with making sure our integrity as a news organization isn't at risk due to reporting false information.

Because in the end, those media outlets that maintain the public's trust will make all the difference as to the winners and losers in this very competitive industry.

All-facilities stickers are on sale

Stickers are on sale during normal business hours at the Town Hall and the DPW garage. Stickers are sold on the weekend. Stickers are $65 for residents under the age of 65 and $35 for any additional vehicle registered at the same address. The sticker price for a person 65 and older is $25.

A copy of your current registration is required. If leasing your vehicle, you will need proof of residence in addition to the registration. This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, Sandy Beach, as well as, include parking at all areas in town that require a sticker. In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at the Department of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town.

Legislature passes balanced fiscal 2013 budget

GARRETT BRADLEY

The Legislature on June 28 enacted a $32.5 billion state budget for fiscal year 2013. The spending plan prioritizes funding for cities and towns and commitments to reform and job creation. The budget does not contain any new taxes and uses a combination of ongoing revenue initiatives, one-time resources and spending reductions to close a $1.4 billion budget gap, the smallest budget gap the state has had since FY08.

The budget restores some painful cuts from previous years and makes new targeted investments, leaving the state's rainy day fund at $1.2 billion which, along with the Legislature's prudent reforms and fiscal decisions in previous years, is responsible for the Commonwealth's highest bond rating in history. A higher bond rating results in lower borrowing costs for the state.

I am also pleased about the Legislature's continuing commitment to cities and towns, boosting investments in Unrestricted General Government Aid, Chapter 70, and the Special Education Circuit Breaker – the three largest sources of direct state aid to municipalities and school districts. Every town in my district received an increase in general government aid.

The budget increases funding for local aid by $288.9 million over FY12 projected spending, including $899 million for unrestricted local aid. Chapter 70 funding is increased to $4.17 billion statewide, ensuring that all school districts receive at least an additional $40 per pupil in aid. Regional School Transportation is also increased by $2 million to $45.5 million. In addition, the budget fully funds the state's obligation for the Special Education Circuit Breaker at $242 million for first time since FY08, ensuring that students with special needs receive the services and education they deserve.

A number of local residents either work or attend local community colleges. The budget sent to Gov. Patrick includes provisions for increased oversight of those institutions, incorporating input from industry officials and vocational-technical schools to ensure they are best equipped to adapt to the changing job opportunities in the Commonwealth. Furthermore, it establishes the Office of Coordination within the Department of Higher Education to serve as a clearinghouse for all training opportunities provided by public higher education institutions.

Access to higher education and the training provided are crucial to residents trying to adapt to an ever-changing economy. New programs in this year's budget include Rapid Response to expedite the process of community colleges creating workforce training programs by targeting specific requests from employers, and a Degree Auditing System to more easily track credits and make it simpler for students to transfer from community colleges to state universities.

In another effort to aid cities and towns, the budget directs $25 million from the state's FY13 budget surplus to the state's community preservation trust fund. This is in addition to language that strengthens the Community Preservation Act, by expanding the use of funds to rehabilitate and support existing outdoor parks, recreational centers and affordable housing.

The language enhances penalties for repeat drunken drivers and ensures that individuals who are convicted, have a case continued without a finding, or are assigned to an alcohol or controlled substance program are subject to penalties for repeat drunken driving offenses.

I am pleased to report that the budget also continues to prioritize essential services for our most vulnerable citizens. It maintains mental health services, ensuring all regions of the state have access to care, and includes funding to keep 45 beds at Taunton State Hospital. It also increases funding for elder protective services, substance abuse services, independent living centers and the department of veterans services.

As part of that commitment, the Legislature included within the budget a $20 million salary reserve for human service providers, retained the full 6-hour day for Adult Day Health programs, and $12.7 million for independent living services provided by the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission. It also provided $97.8 million for the elder home care program, increased funding for public health hospitals by $6 million, and increased Turning 22 program funding from $5 million to $6 million.

Recent news reports have highlighted the need to tighten regulations governing how certain government services are provided. In response, the Legislature has acted by making a series of enhancements to EBT card reforms to be implemented by the Department of Transitional Assistance:

• Restricts access to cash by providing benefits in the form of vendor payments for rent and utilities when assistance is not used properly, taking effect six months after a commission looking at transitioning to a cashless system and implementing direct vendor payments issues a feasibility and cost report;

• Expands the list of restricted items that cash assistance benefits cannot be used for including alcohol, tobacco, lottery tickets, pornography, firearms, ammunition, tattoos, body piercing, manicures, jewelry, gambling, cruise ships, fees, fines, bail or bail bonds.

• Requires the MBTA and each regional transit authority to ensure they can accept EBT cards for the purchase of public transportation fares;

• Requires that the DTA charge a minimum $5 fee for replacement cards, up to the maximum amount allowed by federal law. This provision is designed to prevent trafficking in EBT cards and the resulting fraudulent use.

• Provides for a new State Police Public Benefit Fraud Unit to pursue cases where benefits intended to help our neediest families are being misused; and

• Directs the Inspector General to conduct a survey to uncover inconsistent or contradictory information that is provided by cash benefit recipients.

The budget supports key public safety programs, including $6.25 million for Shannon Grants, which help maintain partnerships at the local level to address the root causes of gang violence; the Safe and Successful Youth Initiative, which targets services to youth who have been identified as most likely to be criminally involved; and support for municipal police staffing in cities with the highest crime rates and decreased police staffing.

The budget also increases public safety by closing a drunken-driving loophole that was exposed by a recent Supreme Judicial Court ruling. The language enhances penalties for repeat drunken drivers and ensures that individuals who are convicted, have a case continued without a finding, or are assigned to an alcohol or controlled substance program are subject to penalties for repeat drunken driving offenses.

In a related move, the budget adds several provisions intended to reduce or prevent the use of motor vehicles by illegal or undocumented persons. It would require a Social Security Number or Tax ID in order to register a car, which is similar to what is required to obtain a license. Also, it increases penalties for businesses and persons that knowingly employ drivers who are unlicensed or not properly licensed, and increases penalties for anyone who falsely makes, steals, forges or counterfeits a learner's permit, a license to operate motor vehicles or an identification card with the intent to distribute them. Another provision requires the state's Executive Office of Health and Human Services to implement common eligibility standards and include the use of the federal SAVE program to check the immigration status of applicants for taxpayer funded EOHHS services and programs.

Other legal or public safety spending items in the budget include:

• Funding the Trial Court at $561 million, an increase of $41 million over last year;

• Committee for Public Counsel Services funded at $162 million, a 3.5 percent increase;

• Increases Mass. Legal Assistance Corporation funding 26 percent to $12 million;

• Total spending for the Judiciary of $760.3 million, a 7.2 percent increase; and

• $248 million for the State Police, including the cost of the 80th Recruit Training Troop. It also funds a portion of a new State Police class to be conducted in FY13 for $596,000.

The smart investments in this budget reflect the Legislature's dedication to funding programs that are effective and efficient while demonstrating fiscal prudence. By targeting limited resources toward education, municipal services and programs for our neediest residents, the budget ensures that the Commonwealth will be prepared for the future.

The budget now goes to the Governor for his approval.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, and one precinct in Scituate.

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

Volume 38 - Report No. 26 June 25-29, 2012

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 313C

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on six roll calls and local senators on three roll calls from the week of June 25-29.

BOTH BRANCHES APPROVE $32.5 BILLION FISCAL 2013 STATE BUDGET (H 4200)

House 147-3, Senate 38-0, approved and sent to Gov. Deval Patrick an estimated $32.5 billion state budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2012. The package uses $350 million from the Rainy Day Fund while still leaving the fund with more than $1 billion.

Provisions include a $288.9 million increase in funding for local aid and prohibition of the use of electronic benefit transfer (EBT) cards by welfare recipients for the purchase of pornography, firearms, cosmetics, travel, jewelry, bond for defendants, tattoos, body piercings, manicures and gambling. Current law already bans the purchase of alcoholic beverages, Lottery tickets and tobacco products.

Supporters said the budget is a fiscally responsible and balanced one that does not raise taxes and funds important programs to the best of the state's ability during this difficult economy.

Opponents did not offer any arguments.

(A "Yes" vote is for the budget. A "No" vote is against it.)

MBTA BAILOUT (H 4174)

House 127-24, Senate 27-9, approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a package providing for a one-time transfer of $49 million from the revenue generated from motor vehicle inspections to the MBTA and $2 million to regional transit authorities. The authorities would also receive $1.5 million in surplus snow removal funds.

Supporters said this money would be used, along with recently approved 23 percent average fare hikes and service cuts, to close the deficit in the MBTA's $1.7 billion budget.

Opponents said the bill is nothing more than a one-year Band-Aid solution that does not make meaningful cost-saving reforms for the future.

$200 MILLION FOR LOCAL ROADS AND BRIDGES (S 2329)

House 152-0, Senate 36-0, approved and sent to the governor a bill providing $200 million for maintenance and repair of local roads and bridges in cities and towns across the state. This money would be borrowed by the state through the sale of bonds.

Supporters said this measure would fund the road and bridge repair account at the same level as last year and help cities and towns keep their roads and bridges safe.

(A "Yes" vote is for the $200 million.)

UTILITY COMPANIES AND OUTAGES (H 4196)

House 153-0, approved a bill regulating the actions of utility companies during and following power outages. The measure was filed in response to the slow reaction by power companies to widespread power outages across the state during Tropical Storm Irene in August and the big October 2011 snowstorm. A key provision gives the revenue from fines levied on public utility companies directly to ratepayers instead of to the state's coffers.

The bill requires public utility companies to provide thrice-daily estimates to customers on when electricity will be restored following a 24-hour damage assessment period. It also requires the companies to set up a well-staffed call center in Massachusetts during major storms.

Supporters said the bill would ensure the utility companies work as quickly as possible to restore power. They noted the lack of communication, the chaos and incidents in which people died or became seriously ill during prior lengthy outages.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

GIVE $25 TO CONSUMERS FOR POWER FAILURE (H 4196)

House rejected 37-115, an amendment that would require public utilities to give $25 to each ratepayer if power is not restored within 120 hours after an interruption due to catastrophic conditions; 16 hours after an outage during normal conditions; and when there are more than seven service interruptions in a 12-month period.

Supporters said this would be an incentive for power companies to increase staff and work faster and more efficiently to restore power.

Opponents said the bill already provides that fines of up to $20 million imposed on power companies for violations of storm response plans be credited to ratepayers.

(A "Yes" vote is for the $25 rebate. A "No" vote is against it.)

CHANGES IN THE STATE'S ENERGY LAWS (H 4198)

House 135-16, approved a complicated, technical and lengthy bill aimed at reducing the high cost of electricity in Massachusetts, creating more competition for energy contracts and bringing down prices. Key provisions double the amount of renewables required to be purchased by utilities through long-term contracts and introduce competitive bidding to the process.

Supporters said the bill would make several changes to bring costs down and called it a jobs bill that would allow Massachusetts companies to hire more employees by reducing energy costs.

Opponents offered no arguments. However, the Associated Industries of Massachusetts said in a written statement that it is "extremely concerned about proposed new long-term contracting language that mandates joint solicitations among the distribution companies for renewable long-term contracts and, for the first time, includes transmission costs as part of the bidding and evaluation process."

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against it.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

PAY RAISES IN AUDITOR SUZANNE BUMP'S OFFICE - State Auditor Suzanne Bump announced she will boost salaries retroactively for nearly 100 staff members at an estimated cost of more than $500,000. The hikes, ranging from $3,515 to $9,453, take effect on July 6 but are retroactive to June 4. The changes are based on a nearly $30,000 study of salaries commissioned by Bump's office. In an interview with the State House News Service, Bump said she has been unable to attract and retain well-qualified people at the lower salaries.

READ E-MAILS OF DECEASED (S 2313) - The Senate approved and sent to the House a bill allowing access by family members and others legally in charge of the estates of individuals to the e-mail accounts of their late loved ones. The bill requires companies like Gmail, Hotmail and AOL to provide access if a probate court order is issued or a certified representative of the late owner of the account presents a notarized written request and a death certificate. The access would supersede any of the e-mail provider's contractual terms and privacy policies but would not take precedent over any instructions in the individual's will.

Supporters said this would ensure Massachusetts laws are compatible with new technology and would help authorized representatives, often a family member, to properly take care of the business and personal matters of their late loved ones. They argued this access is currently left up to the company and cited cases in which bereaved family members were refused access.

SCOUT

of recycled, eco-friendly material.

"It's the most expensive wood, and it's coated so it doesn't rot," said Thomae. "You can put the dock in the water if it's environmentally friendly; it can't be leaching chemicals."

Thomae, 18, has been a Boy Scout since 2006 and will be a senior at Cohasset High School this fall. A Scituate native, his mother, Ann, teaches AP Chemistry at CHS, giving Thomae and his sister, Jean, the option of enrolling in Cohasset schools. Thomae switched over to Cohasset in fourth grade. He soon after joined the local Boy Scouts chapter, Troop 28, and became friends with Rob Hillman (whose father, also Rob, is an assistant scout master). Hillman, a soon-to-be senior at BC High, and Thomae both became Eagle Scouts on the same day: Dec. 12, 2011.

The rank of Eagle Scout is the highest a Boy Scout can achieve. In order to become one, a scout must have earned 21 merit badges and completed a service project that shows leadership skills and benefits a local community non-profit.

Thomae's project more than fit the bill. The process of planning and building the dock required the scout to reach out to community resources and foster his communication skills in a way he hadn't before.

"It was a huge learning experience," said Thomae. "I don't think kids my age usually need to go talk to a bunch of adults and ask for money."

For scouts, the point of the Eagle Scout project is to "learn a valuable lesson," Thomae added. "It's a stepping stone... to have this level of communication, [learning] to make things work."

As he began researching his project, Thomae sought to answer the following questions: How much is the project going to cost? How will I fundraise for it? Where can I find someone who knows about docks? And, will the new dock be safe for the environment?

Before he could take care of these details, Thomae had to get his project approved by both the local scout leaders and the Boy Scouts of America. The idea to build a dock came from a discussion with Jack Buckley, president of the CMI; Thomae works there as a volunteer. When discussing potential project ideas, Thomae told Buckley that he wanted to help the institute; Buckley told him they could use a new dock, as the old one was "falling apart and sinking into the water."

Thomae pitched the idea to Troop 28 scout master Richard Quebec and assistant scout master Hillman, who quickly gave their thumbs up. "They thought it had leadership potential," said Thomae. Then the BSA gave the OK.

Thomae then began the process of drafting plans to build a dock, raising enough funds to do it, and finding someone to help. The best part of that process, according to Thomae: "Just finding a place where I could build it." That place ended up being King Street Boats in Cohasset, where Thomae found a local expert, owner Roger Hill. The scout called Hill "the person who helped the most" with the dock.

"He played a huge role," Thomae said of Hill. "He offered space in his workshop to build there. He's built docks before and knows what you need, small things I didn't think about."

One of those small things? The budget. Thomae had estimated his project would cost around $700, which is the amount he raised with donations from family, friends, and the Cohasset Rotary Club. Once construction was underway, however, the scout learned that the special eco-friendly materials would cost more than he thought. The floats under the dock cost $500 alone. Thomae also admitted, "I forgot how much it costs to ship things."

The total project cost came in just under $1,300. Thomae went back to his fundraising, asking previous donors for more; the CMI also made a donation.

The dock's construction took place over a few weekends. The official start date was Sept. 3, 2011, said Thomae; the dock was brought to the CMI parking lot via Hill's truck bed trailer on Sept. 23. The project was signed off as complete on Oct. 16; it took over 130 hours all together.

Thomae's dock currently sits on CMI property at the end of Parker Ave., but it's water-ready; it just needs a little heave-ho.

"It took 15 people to lift it up," Thomae recalled when the dock was transported to the CMI site. "But they can order a Bobcat to carry it to the ramp and use rope to slide it into the water."

When Thomae isn't busy with scouting activities, he enjoys working on the computer, playing percussion in the school band and two school sports: golf and tennis (he is also the tennis team captain). He also volunteers at both CMI and the Cohasset Center for Coastal Research, conducting wetlands monitoring. The CHS senior plans to major in Computer Science and will attend a program at Worcester Polytechnic Institute this summer.

LIBRARY CORNER

Book group meets July 25

Paul Pratt Memorial Library is at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. Call 781-383-1348 to register or for more information or visit the website at www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Basic Internet Search Workshop - Reference librarian Gayle Walsh will help people learn the basics of Internet searching at a free workshop at 10:30 a.m., on Wednesday, July 11. Explore the library's website and use Google to search for interesting sites. This hands-on workshop is for beginners who have had some computer experience. Free. Limited to six people. Register online or call the reference librarian at 383-1348.

Eating Among the Stacks at Paul Pratt - Adults who like to cook should enjoy this new program. Explore the library's collection of cookbooks and prepare a dish to share with others at this monthly potluck style event. The program will begin Thursday, July 19, 6 to 7:30 p.m. Sample and taste a variety of dishes. This is a way to "eat-and-meet." Bring one's prepared dish, curiosity and an appetite for this tasting adventure. The library will provide paper plates, utensils and beverages, but no food. Register in advance by calling reference librarian Gayle Walsh at 781-383-1348 or email gwalsh@ocln.org.

Library Book Group - All are welcome for coffee and discussion of "Balzac and the Little Chinese Seamstress" by Dai Sijie at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, July 25.

Art Exhibit - South Shore Art Center will present an exhibit by Ted Polomis at the library through Aug. 31. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Wednesdays and Fridays; and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays. Free.

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For the complete summer children's calendar log or to register call 781-383-1348 or visit www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Summer Reading Program - Through Aug 3. Dream Big-READ!, the 2012 Massachusetts summer reading program is sponsored by Friends of Cohasset Library, Massachusetts Library System, Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners and Boston Bruins. Participants will read toward the goal of earning a sheep from Heifer International to be given to a family somewhere in the world. Friends of Cohasset Library will donate $1 to Heifer International for each online or paper log returned to Mrs. Moody at the end of the program. Help earn a sheep by returning summer reading logs. Registration began June 18 and can be done online or in person.

MamaSteph - Mondays, July 9, 16, 23, and 30, at 10:30 a.m., in the Meeting Room. Funded by Friends of Cohasset Library.

Monday Night Family Movie - "Born to be Wild" rated G will be shown at 6 p.m., on Monday, July 9, in the Meeting Room. "Born to be Wild" is a story of love, dedication and the bond between humans and animals. Movie site license sponsored by Friends of Cohasset Library and Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

Tuesday Evening Performance - Join others in the Meeting Room at 6 p.m., on Tuesday, July 10, for music with Vic and Sticks. Songs will be performed with a vintage/vaudeville recycled rhythm beat. For information visit their website at www.vicandsticks.com. Seating is limited. Funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library. For more information about Jungle Jim's of Boston visit www.junglejimboston.com.

Thursday, Drop In Crafts - Thursdays, July 12, 19, and 26, in the Story Room between 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m., to make some Dream Big-Read! crafts. All ages and communities welcome.

Story Time - Meets Fridays, July 6, 13, 20 and 27, and Aug. 3, at 10:30 a.m., in the Meeting Room. Big book adventures and more. All ages and communities welcome.

FIELD HOCKEY

Coaches needed

The Cohasset Field Hockey club is still looking for coaches.

Anyone interested who has played field hockey and is interested in coaching a middle school team September 1- through Novemeber 1, we need you.

Coaches practice twice per week and coach games. This is a paid position. Please contact Beth Marsden Gilman at 781-383-1811 for more information.

YOUTH SOFTBALL

U14 Girls return to Freedom Field

The CYBSA is proud to announce that they will be fielding a U14 softball team in the competitive South Shore Summer Softball League this summer.

This is a local travel team that plays against teams from all over the South Shore. The league is competitive, but the team is seasoned, returning from playing in the league last summer. The girls will be led by the dedicated coaching team of Amy Brash, Jill Lawlor, Lee Stone, Tony Talacci and Peter Vitello.

Come out and watch the girls at Freedom Field in their home games Tuesday July 13, Thursday July 19 and Tuesday July 24.

Trade to Rox suits Doonan

Former Cohasset star happy to be close to home

Brendan Doonan has something that he can tell his University of Rhode Island baseball teammates in the Fall.

Doonan will be going into his sophomore year at URI and can tell his teammates that he was traded to his Summer league team the Brockton Rox of Futures Collegiate Baseball League.

"It was about halfway through the school year," said Doonan. "I got a call from Mr. Berry and he said that I might be able to get you a spot on the Brockton Rox. I was already on the Wachusett Dirt Dawgs team and I got traded over to Brockton.

"There are not many college baseball players that can say that they have been traded. It was weird. Wachussett was about 50 minutes farther away from being here in Brockton."

Doonan endorses his trade to Brockton and is enjoying playing closer to home.

It also helps that he is playing with three of his childhood buddies on the Rox., Jordan Berry, Rob McCunney and Jeff Cavanaro "It is unbelievable," said Doonan. "that we started working together since Little League.

"It has been awesome. The coaches have been great and my teammates are fun. I have been having a blast."

"We have four players on the Rox," said Cohasset American legion general manager Scott Arnold. "And he play at a high level at the collegiate level. It says something about our program."

A year ago, Doonan spent his summer in Collegiate Baseball League in the South and feels that the competition may be the same, but the crowd is more appreciative in Brockton.

"This is definitely great competition," said Doonan. "I

Military precision

Coastal Chiefs White brings Marine Corps values to new team

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Marine Corps Staff Sergeant Joey White is a man of many talents.

He is a Marine, a dedicated family man with four kids. He's a full-time college student. Raised in Georgia, he has Southern values that include helping others, and he also really enjoys playing football.

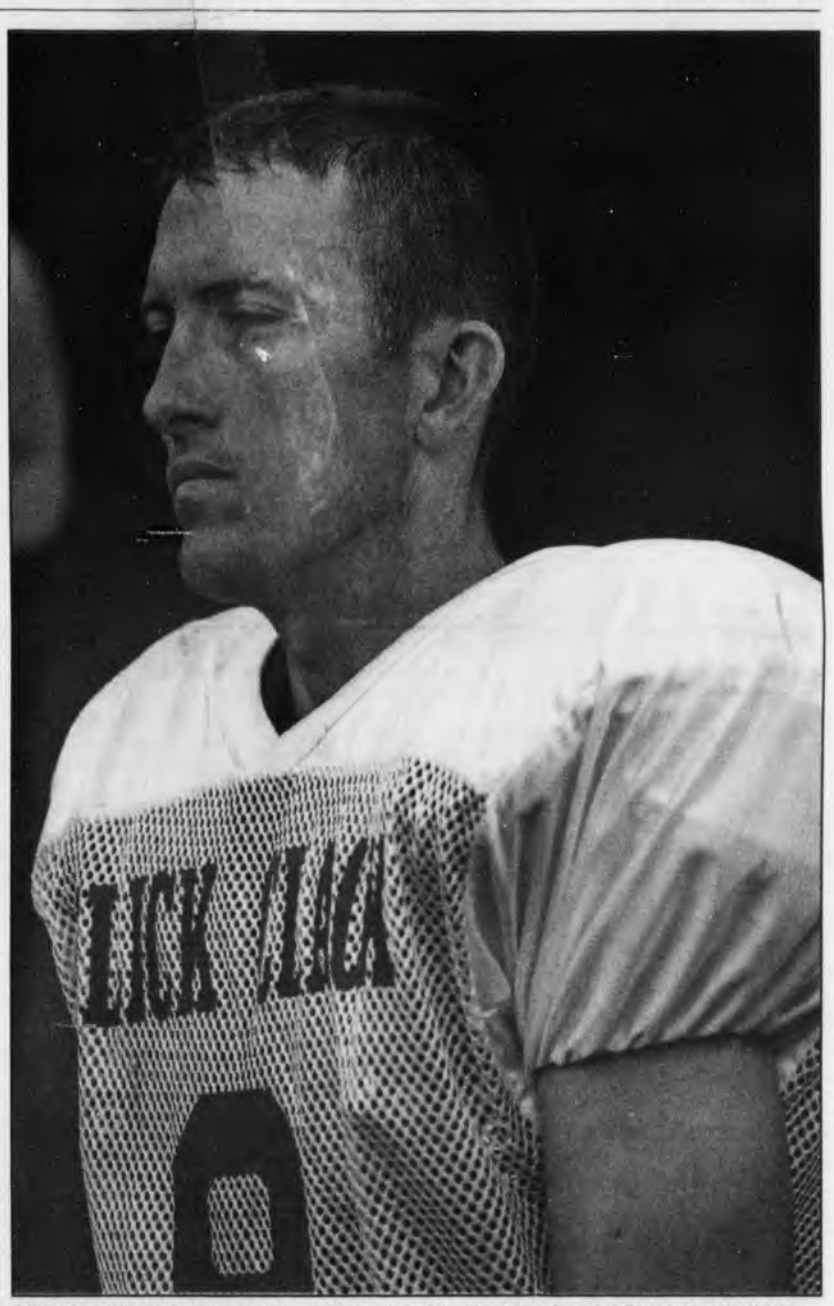
Those qualities are a big reason that White makes the long trip from Fort Devens to Hanover to practice and play football for the newly formed AAA semi-pro Coastal Chiefs of the New England Football League.

White could have played for other teams had he chosen to, including some closer to Fort Devens than the Hanover based Chiefs, but the underlying values that team owner Steve Santacroce has instilled in this franchise was a big draw.

"I'm a big community service guy," Santacroce said. "I saw how football could be a central focal point in bringing back values of supporting the community that supports you. This really is grassroots football. This is the third group of guys I've gone through. The guys here are all dedicated and have a loyalty to the area. They are true role models."

White knows what being a role model is about.

The 30-year old dad, who plans to play receiver and safety, and as he says it, 'anywhere coach wants me to go' has four children with wife Kristen, two girls, 11-year old MacKenzie, seven-year old Madison, and two boys, five-year old Nealon and two-year old Elliot.



All four were born in different places. MacKenzie was born in Georgia. Madison was born in Kansas City. Nealon was born in Okinawa, Japan, and Elliot was born in Pensacola.

The family will be at as many games as they can get to to cheer on Joey.

On the football field, White played two years of high school football at Clinch County High School in Georgia. He also played some tennis and baseball.

After joining the Marines, he was able to continue playing sports, as while many people don't know it, the Marine Corps, and Armed Forces have

TALKIN' GOLF

Morse earns berth in US Senior Open

PAUL HARBER

Weymouth native and Ponkapoag golfer hasn't given up on the dream

Back in the day, long before long putters, when permission drives rules and nobody ever heard of offset, perimeter weighting or titanium clubs or hybrids, Weymouth had a handful of terrific golfers and what made it amazing was that Weymouth did not have a golf course.

There was Crash Nash, who could hit the ball from one area code to the other. And there was Tom Rooney, whose play was steady and so calm under pressure, you couldn't tell if he was 5-under par or 5-over par. And there was Andy Morse, one of the most likeable golfers, but someone who seemed snake-bitten from the time he began playing in big tournaments.

He was never a Country Club hiho, Morse learned his game, playing at working class Ponkapoag Golf Course in Canton, then famous for its band of golf characters, where $2 Nassaus could turn into three- and four-digit wagers.

Morse was a natural. Only bad luck prevented him from winning the 1983 Massachusetts Open—he mismarked his ball on the 17th green at Charles River, giving the title to Dana Quigley. He finally captured the State Open and owned it for a few years, winning at Oak Hill in 1989 and at Taconic in 1992.

He's won just about everything in the region. Morse also won back-to-back New England Opens in 1986 and '87. He made a complete sweep of winning the Maine, Massachusetts and New Hampshire opens in 1989. He followed the sun honing his skills. In the winter, he played the Southern Africa Tour for two winters in the late 1980s.

He once had a great run on the mini-tours. Morse played on the Hooters Tour from 1995 to 1999, winning seven tournaments, including four in a row. He also qualified for the first of his three appearances in the US Open during that stretch.

For parts of 15 years, he played on the Nationwide Tour, winning the Utah Open in 2000. That year his scoring average was 70.16.

One amazing state is that he has made 16 Hole-In-Ones during competitive play. That doesn't mean friendly rounds with buddies or practice rounds, but in tournament action.

He always seemed to be on the verge of breaking through, making it to the final stage of PGA Qualifying School, only to miss.

For many years he worked and represented Blue Hills CC when his biggest supporter, Vinnie Del Zoppo ruled the rooster from his pro shop perch.

Since 2008, he gives lessons at McGolf's Driving Range and Practice Center in Dedham.

Now plus 50, Morse has not given up the dream of a big pay day.

He signed up and tried to qualify for the US Senior Open against nearly 100 other professional golfers, who battled for two berths at the treacherous Vesper Country Club in Tyngsboro on June 20.

Morse preserved on a day that temperatures flirted with the 100-degree mark. He fashioned an even-par 72, good enough for the second spot in the championship, which will be held on July 12-15 at Indianwood Golf & Country Club in Lake Orion, Mich.

News and quotes from around the region ...

Spitz Times 2

Plenty of local golfers have qualified over the last week for the State Amateur Championship, which will be held July 9-13 at Tedesco Country Club in Marblehead.

But the best story is about the two brothers from Norwell who qualified at difference sites. It would be interesting to see them advance to match play and then go head-to-head.

Ben and David Spitz and now face the prospect of facing off come match play.

Ben Spitz, who plays out of George Wright GC in Hyde Park, won the State Amateur in 2006. His older brother, David, who plays out of the Harmon Club in Rockland, was a professional, who had his amateur status reinstated.

Their appearance marks only the second time that the brothers will both be in the Massachusetts Amateur Championship field.

"We hadn't really been thinking or talking about it much," Ben told reporters after he qualified at Milton-Hoosic. "He hasn't been playing much lately, so when I saw him at the top [of the leaderboard], I thought that it was very cool."

Oh, there is a third brother who has game. Older sibling Brian Spitz is a member of the New England PGA and a Director of Golf Instruction at Golf Town.

They all began at Rockland GC. "My Dad was into it and always wanted us to play. We started off at Rockland Golf Course," said Ben. "It was a par 3 course and they had a huge junior program and we went with our friends. They all dropped off over the years, and we kept with it."

They also had a course in their Norwell backyard. Although their greens probably didn't roll as well as the ones they anticipate playing at Tedesco Country Club, it was certainly a great challenge for the youngsters.

"We have done it many times," said Ben about the friendly, brotherly matches first in the backyard and then extending to other Bay State layouts. "We are all scratch golfers and grew up playing together and against each other. We had our little matches and would always know where everyone stood. It was always an even battle and came down to the wire."

And the thought of facing each other in match play?

"That would be a lot of fun," said Ben. "We have done it many times. It would be different, but it would mean a lot more."

"It would be fun to play him," said David. "I would hate to lose to him, but it would be fun."

The battle of the (Spitz) brothers will begin on July 9 at Tedesco Country Club.

Qualified success stories

At Franklin Country Club on June 27, Peter French of Maplegate CC fashioned an even-par 71 to share medalist honors with Emilio Bardini of Beverly. Jonathan Hill of Granite Links GC tied for third with Charles River's Kevin Quinn with matching 73s. Steven Burak of Thorny Lea GC made it with a 75 and Daniel Choquette of the Boston Golf Club in Hingham was the final qualifier with a 77.

French capped off a sensational senior season at Franklin High School by defending his Division 2 South Shore title and winning the Hockomock League individual title. French was a member of Team Massachusetts, which won the 2011 New England Junior Amateur Championship. He also captured the individual title at that prestigious New England Golf Association event.

At Country Club of Halifax, after David Spitz, Mark Purrington of Allendale was tied for third with David Pierce of Halfiax and T.J. McNulty of Hatherly CC. Michael Willock of Plymouth CC, Jack Weeks of Wollaston, Brad Steever of Pine Oaks GC, Brad Cadigan of Harmon GC, Sam Toomey of the Bay Club and Andrew DiRamio of North Hill CC carded 74s. The final four qualifiers, who advanced on a sudden death playoff have shooting 75s, were Kevin McMenamy II of the Back Nine Club, Gary Palmer of Segregansett CC, Michael O'Neil and Terrence Tedeschi of Marshfield CC.

In one of the more unique qualifiers for any State Amateur took plays in Canton on June 26 when the competition was reduced to nine holes. It was supposed to be held a day earlier, but inclement weather forced them to play the following day and because of conditions, it was only nine holes. Michael Marshall of Thorny Lea was medalist with a 3-under 32. Daniel Najarian of Marshfield CC and Benjamin Spitz of Norwell had 34s and qualified, and Dick Ellis of Thorny Lea had a 36 and was the final qualifier.

Pop Warner looks to reduce concussions

New guidelines to take effect in August

By Bob Whitney
rwhitney@wickedlocal.com

Many hope that the Pop Warner initiative will spread to other sports such as hockey, soccer and lacrosse.

The Pop Warner Youth Football Association has issued new rules in an attempt to limit head-to-head contact during practices this year. This is in response to the growing concern about head trauma, in general, and the impact that head-to-contact contact has on the incidence of concussions from youth leagues up to pro football.

Commencing in August 2012, all Pop Warner teams will be limited to contact in one-third of the practice time (approximately 40 minutes). In addition, football practice drills that involve full-speed, head-on blocking/tackling with players more than three yards apart will be strictly prohibited.

This pro-active response by Pop Warner officials has been taken after extensive research has shown that most of the hardest hits in youth football occur during their practice sessions. According to Pop Warner's top medical advisor, Julian Bailes, nearly 60 per cent of head-to head contact hits occur during the practice session.

The Pop Warner organization expects the parents of the players to help them enforce the new guidelines throughout the organization, which by the way is the largest youth football organization in the country with over 250,000 youngsters playing football.

Coaches that do not adhere to the new guidelines will face probation and/or suspension for violating the new Pop Warner regulations.

This response, by one of the country's leading youth sports organizations, is a positive trend in limiting repeated low-impact contact, which may lead to more permanent injury over the long term.

It is certainly a positive first step, which hopefully will lead to further changes that would impact the game day experience at the youth levels as well. Many hope that the Pop Warner initiative will spread to other sports such as hockey, soccer and lacrosse.

Beginning in August 2012, all Pop Warner football coaches must abide by new guidelines that limit contact at practice sessions. FILE PHOTO

BASEBALL CAMP

Niles preaches fun and learning at Summer Camps

SSBC camps begin July 9

By Lanny Larason
For the Hingham Journal

"It was better when kids just went to a field and played baseball. Big people have intruded on their fun and spoiled the fun of the game for the kids." You've heard the thought expressed repeatedly.

Frank Niles agrees!

Make no mistake, Frank Niles without question is, a big person. He's the head baseball coach at Hingham High School and the president and CEO of the South Shore Baseball Club (SSBC), which he founded nearly twenty five years ago. SSBC offers summer baseball camps for kids aged five through fifteen at Hingham High School from July 9 to August 3. Each session runs from Monday to Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Five to seven year old attend from 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

Players from all towns can attend one, two, three or all four weeks.

At the SSBC camps, yes, of course, there are adults involved. But, they're there to provide just enough structure and guidance to enable the kids to arrange as much as they can for themselves. Kids make their own teams. So, if Johnny comes with his next door neighbor, brother, cousin or all the above they can all be on the same team. For the most part, Niles says, "the kids figure out their own positions, their own batting orders, having a captain and making it work". Especially for the younger age groups where longtime adult participant, Jack Larkin says: "A kid that swings and misses and swings and misses and then all of a sudden hits a baseball? To see the joy in that child's eyes is what keeps me going".

Larkin's SSBC camp recollections have kept him going for twenty years now and fondly include a team comprised almost completely of girls who named themselves "Larkin's Lady Leprechauns". They didn't win the camp championship, Larkin recalls, but "we were competitive".

At the older age levels, where play is more advanced there is, says Niles, "a long list of guys who've started playing baseball in our camps who went on to pro baseball, played in the College World Series, all that kind of stuff". But, the former KC Royals minor league star says what lets him know the camps are working is when a kid arrives at camp "a little lukewarm" about being there and then at the end of the week's session "wants to come back for another week because he's had fun. That's when I know we're making progress".

For more information regarding South Shore Baseball Club Summer Camps call 781-749-6466 or visit the website at www.ssbc.com.

WHITE

a robust sports program with everything from intramural badminton and volleyball, to softball, baseball, boxing, wrestling, flag and tackle football and much, much more.

"I played some intramural football," White said. "But I missed last season for training. Then I found Steve and the Coastal Chiefs. I came out and watched and liked what I saw. The team is disciplined and is very big with community involvement. With other teams, I see guys coming out and wanting to be stars. We don't have that here. Everything is about team."

White, who is hoping to become a Warrant Officer, one of the most prestigious ranks in the Marines, is currently Administrative Chief for Detachment Ordnance Maintenance Company (4th Maintenance Battalion), has been at Ft. Devens for a year-and-a-half. He works with a small staff to make sure everything runs smoothly.

On the college side, White majors in business and expects a bachelors degree in a year. He wants to follow that with a Masters in education.

The Marines have been a boon for himself and his young family.

"Where I come from, there are about 500 people. A lot of kids join the military. I know I made the decision at 16 that it was what I wanted to do. It has been great. I've met a lot of awesome people and grown as a person."

Football has also had a big impact in another way.

"My wife and I went to high school together," White said. "She was a cheerleader. We went our separate ways. She had married and divorced. I was home and at a high school football game. She walked down and we rekindled the fire. She's great. I couldn't have picked a better person to be with."

played (during the Summer) in North Carolina (the CBL) last Summer and the competition was roughly the same, but the crowd here is better. It is definitely better being close to home. It is more like a college baseball season. You get a lot of time off."

He was a starting pitcher for Cohasset on its Div. 4 State Title team and was part of the growth of the Cohasset/Scituate American Legion Baseball team. He was a relief pitcher at the University of Rhode Island.

Doonan has been a short reliever for the Rox in the early part of the season and he feels that he is learning a few things.

In 16 relief appearances at URI, Doonan won his only decision in short relief with a 4.50 ERA. He had 15 strikeouts in 20 innings.

"My work ethic," Doonan said. "I am improving my work ethic college and using it to improve. It helps me to sharpen my game. The biggest thing that I want to work on is my strength and speed."

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 16, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Aspects favor socializing with family and friends, but an irksome workplace situation could intrude. No use grumbling, Lamb. Just do it, and then get back to the fun times.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) There's still time for you Ferdinands and Fernandas to relax and sniff the roses. But a major work project looms and soon will demand much of your attention through the 23rd.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your enthusiasm persuades even the toughest doubters to listen to what you're proposing. But don't push too hard, or you'll push them away. Moderate for best results.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your energy levels are rising, and you feel you can handle anything the job requires. That's great. But don't isolate yourself. Keep your door open to your workplace colleagues.

LEO (July 23 August 22) A workplace change could lead to that promotion you've been hoping for. But you'll have to face some tough competition before the Lion can claim his or her share of the goodies.

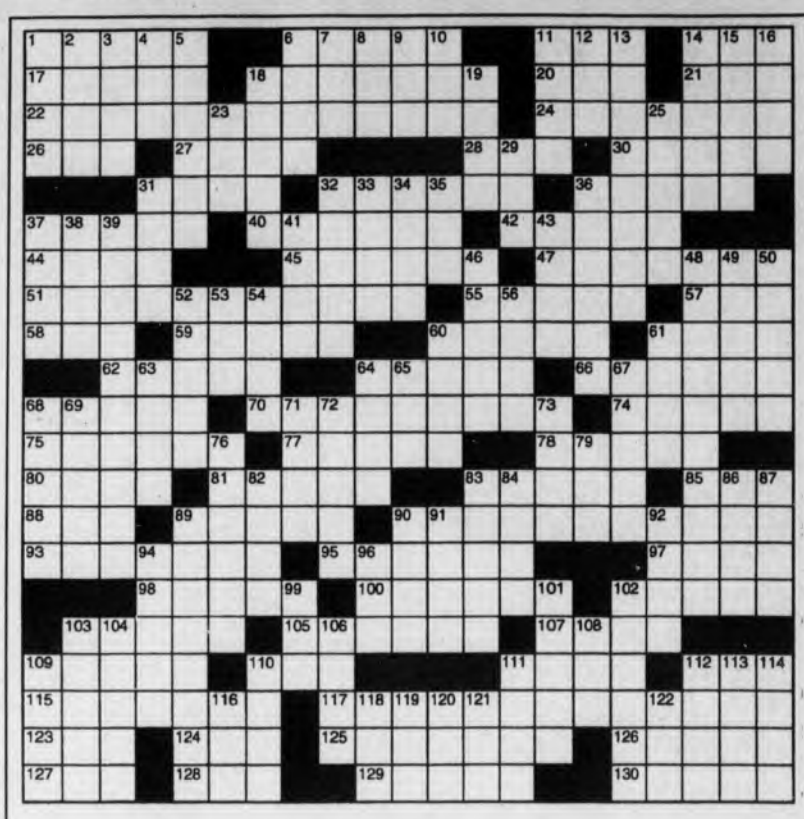
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your rigidity regarding a difficult workplace situation could be the reason your colleagues aren't rushing to your assistance. Try being more flexible in your demands.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) That uneasy mood could be your Libran inner voice reminding you that while it's great to be with your new friends, you need to take care not to ignore your old ones.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A sudden spate of criticism could shake the Scorpion's usually high sense of self-confidence. Best advice: You made a decision you believed in — now defend it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your reluctance to help restart a stalled relationship could be traced to unresolved doubts about your partner's honesty. Rely on a trusted friend's advice.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The capricious Sea Goat is torn between duty and diversion. Best advice: Do both. Tend to your workaday chores, then go out and enjoy your well-earned fun time.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Cutting back on some of your activities for a few days helps restore your energy levels. You should be feeling ready to tackle your many projects early next week.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A co-worker might be secretly carping about your work to mutual colleagues. But associates will come to your defense, and the situation will ultimately work to your advantage.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your ambition makes you a success at whatever you choose to do — especially if it's in the world of the performing arts.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Faith Nyser

Faith Nyser

ORLEANS – Faith Young Nyser, daughter of the late Harold and Daisy Young, has passed away. She was born in St. Johnsbury, Vermont on June 25, 1932. She moved to West Hartford, Connecticut and graduated from Hall High School. Faith and her husband moved to Wethersfield, Connecticut to raise their family and retired to Cape Cod in 1982. She is predeceased by her parents, her husband, and her sister Janice Schneider. To cherish her memory on earth, she leaves her beloved sweetheart Richard Clark of Eastham. She also leaves her two children, son Scott Nyser and his wife Debbie, of Barrington, RI; and her daughter Leslie Dalenta of Ellington, CT. She also leaves 5 grandchildren: Aimee Dalenta, her husband John Wiedersheim and their two children, Faith's treasured great-grandchildren Adria and Jack; Jennifer Dalenta and her fiancé Eric Miller, Andrew Nyser, Taylor Nyser, and Meredith Nyser. Faith leaves a legacy of love and kindness to those who knew her. She was a most loving mother, grandmother, and friend and will be deeply missed.

Julian C. Hayes

NORTH EASTHAM – Julian C. "Pete" Hayes, of North Eastham, passed away on June 28. He was 88.

He was the son of Julian and Ola Hayes, and husband to the late Helena Hayes. He is survived by his daughter Vicki of North Eastham, son and daughter-in-law Bill and Sandy of North Eastham, and son Bryon of Tecumseh, Michigan. He leaves two brothers: William of Eastham and Robert of Ocala, Florida.

Julian attended school at the old one room schoolhouse in Eastham and graduated from Orleans High School in 1941.

Prior to graduation, Julian began work at Nickerson's Lumber Company, which became Mid Cape Center, in Orleans, Dennis, and Wellfleet, where he worked until he retired in 2007.

There will be a private burial. Donations may be made to the scholarship: EPOCH of Brewster, 873 Harwich Road, Brewster, MA 02631.

SKY takes flight

Vacation Bible School at St. Stephen's

A weeklong Vacation Bible School called "SKY" took flight with more than 50 children at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church last week. The storm clouds did not dampen any spirits as the children spent their days playing games, serving others by making snacks, sharing God sightings, and singing catchy bible songs — all the while learning that everything is possible with God. The daily catch phrase was "Trust God," and the staff and participants alike have learned to do just that.

The children collected Frisbees, classroom chalk and quarters for milk as an outreach project to support the St. Boniface Haiti Foundation. St. Stephen's received an overwhelming response and was able to present Mr. Jim Graham, member of St. Stephen's and board member of St. Boniface Haiti Foundation, with the collection at the finale on Friday.

Parents, grandparents and parishioners all gathered for the celebratory finale prior to feasting on a potluck barbeque lunch as the sun took to the SKY.

Bridge jumper nearly drowns

Boston boy was not good swimmer

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 19-year-old Boston teen is lucky to be alive after he nearly drowned late Sunday afternoon after jumping into the Gulf from the Border Street bridge.

He is also lucky that a former Cohasset lifeguard just happened to be on the bridge when the teen started drowning.

It all started around 6 p.m. on Sunday (July 8). Dan McCarthy and Brendon Barrett, both 24 and Cohasset buddies, had just spent the day on Bassing Beach when they went over to the bridge to do several jumps.

"There were about 15-20 kids from the city on the bridge," McCarthy recalled. "We were just about to leave when they started yelling that two of their friends were drowning."

"The teen dodged a bullet and is lucky to be alive."
— Deputy Police Chief William Quigley said.

McCarthy, who worked as a lifeguard at the Cohasset Swim Center in his teens, jumped off the bridge on the harbor side and quickly swam over to one of the two boys, who was flailing around. He used his lifeguard skills to get the first boy safely onto the rocks and then swam through the rapids to the other boy who was in serious trouble.

Barrett ran to the dock where the assistant harbormasters and two younger boys were also helping the drowning victim. Within minutes police and fire arrived, McCarthy said.

Jumping off the bridge into the cool waters below has become a rite of passage in Cohasset. A town bylaw making the practice illegal and enforcement efforts by police over the years have not been successful in curbing the activity.

Police received three 9-1-1 calls at 6:10 p.m. on Sunday and a radio call from the Problems in the pond

Officials try to solve algae, leaking

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Meetinghouse Pond, also dubbed the "Frog Pond" and "Duck Pond," is arguably the center point of Cohasset Common. Last year, the pond underwent a restoration project that left some residents displeased with the results.

"I've never seen such a sight in my life," said Russ Bonetti of Parker Avenue, chairman of the town's Community Preservation Committee and an outspoken critic of the pond renovation. "It looks like the Jersey barriers, between the color of the concrete and the way it drops off... Every time I drive by it, I just shudder. It's dubious to call it a restoration."

Peter Whittemore of Elm Court, another resident concerned about the pond, called it "disgusting."

"The place looks like an MBTA stop," added Whittemore, "not a place you'd want to photograph [along] with the church."

The pond has displayed a troublesome amount of algae that has some residents, including selectman Martha Gjesteby, advocating to add goldfish to eat it up (the pond has hosted aquatic life in the past). Gjesteby said during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting that the pond had goldfish in it for years, and a resident would take them in during the winter.

A dead animal, possibly a possum or a raccoon, lies motionless amidst all the algae in the Meetinghouse Pond on Tuesday. A dog walker at the Pond on Tuesday said the animal had been there several days. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

"I don't know whether goldfish like pond scum," Gjesteby said during the meeting.

"It's not scum, it's algae," quipped selectman Leland Jenkins.

The pond's fountain is shut off because the town owes the water department a hefty bill for water usage. The fountain was turned on for the South Shore Arts Festival in June, and the town's Department of Works (DPW) cleaned the algae. Soon after, the algae growth was back.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that officials are looking into pH testing for the water, attempting to determine whether the concrete has contributed to the problem,

CPA change

Opens door to recreation projects

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The fiscal 2013 state budget was signed into law by Governor Deval Patrick on Sunday, July 8, and this bill included some significant changes to the Community Preservation Act (CPA).

Changes to the CPA legislation include an additional $25 million in funding for the statewide CPA trust fund from the FY13 budget surplus, along with the ability for local chapters of the Community Preservation Coalition (CPC) to take on recreation projects they were not allowed to under previous legislation.

This means that the Cohasset Community Preservation Committee can now get involved in projects for existing recreational properties that were not acquired by the CPC, said Cohasset's CPC chair Russ

WHAT IS GOING ON HERE?

'Jug handles' protect cyclists

On Sunday (July 8), two bicyclists, who apparently did not follow the "jug handles," fell at the North Main Street grade crossing. One of them had to be transported to the hospital.

What
The "jug handles" are specially designed pathways in each direction at the North Main Street grade crossing that the MBTA installed in the fall of 2008 to help prevent recurring bicycle accidents. The jug handles veer off to the right, cross over the tracks at a near perpendicular angle, and then merge back onto the road.

Why
Before the jug handles, a bicyclist riding along North Main Street risked getting their bike's tires stuck in angled train tracks, stopping the bike in its tracks, often sending the unsuspecting rider over the handlebars, and in some cases, causing serious injury. In the 12 months before the jug handles were installed, the fire department responded five times to reports of an injured bicyclist at the grade crossing.

How
The engineering designs created two "jug handle"-type pathways on both sides of North Main Street. The jug handles are short bicycle paths – in the shape that the name implies – that allow bicycles to hit the tracks at an angle closer to perpendicular. Additional signage was also installed and the rubber matting at the crossing was extended a few feet on each side to accommodate the bike path.

Results
Bicyclists, who do not use the "jug handles," have been involved in accidents since their installation. However, the number of bicycle accidents at the grade crossing has been reduced considerably since the jug handles were installed. However, there have still been accidents for bike riders who for some reason have chose not to use the jug handle paths.

Quote
"We still have occasional accidents there with a few transports to the hospital," Deputy Chief William Quigley said. "The jug-handle paths only work when people follow the signs."

Signs at the North Main Street grade crossing warn bicyclists about the angled tracks ahead and to use the bike route. COURTESY PHOTO

MURPHYCARTY INSURANCE AGENCY

SAVING MONEY ON YOUR AUTO INSURANCE

- You can save money with credits: low mileage, AAA membership, anti-theft systems, insuring your home and auto together.
- A $500 deductible is standard; maybe consider a higher deductible if you are a good driver.
- New cars cost more to insure, old cars are worth less to replace. Rule of thumb: Good drivers pay LESS.

AUTO INSURANCE CONFUSION

You pay more. Your neighbor pays less...Confusing? YES. It all depends on your car, your driving record, and where your car is "garaged." Multiple coverages with limits varying by category make understanding auto insurance even more confusing.

Contact MurphyCarty Insurance Agency to make sense of it all. We can help balance coverage with affordability. For more details or to learn about our complete range of offerings, contact us today!

Maggie Kelly

The Mariner caught up with Maggie Kelly this week at the Cohasset Recreation Department Summer Playground at Deer Hill School. If you see Maggie around town, be sure to tell her that you spotted her in Picture This. PHOTO/MARY FORD

Name: Maggie Therese Kelly.

Occupation: Kindergarten teacher for Quincy Public Schools; director of Cohasset Recreation Summer Playground Pre-School program.

Best day of your life: August 21,2010. It was my wedding day — we had so much fun, it was the best day!

Best vacation: going to Aruba, I love Aruba. The weather is perfect and the people are so nice.

Favorite season: Definitely the summer! I love going to the beach.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving, I like that it is a holiday to get together with family and friends and just celebrate having each other in our lives.

Favorite junk food: I have a bad habit of eating Chef Boyarde raviolis straight from the can cold, often for breakfast. I can't help it, they are a guilty pleasure.

Best book: "True Colors," by Kristin Hannah.

Best movie: "The Notebook" or "Overboard."

Best TV show: The Real Housewives (doesn't matter which city, I love them all) or Chopped.

Best music, group, or artist: I listen to everything, I really love oldies, Bob Marley and Kenny Chesney.

Pet peeve: people who don't use blinkers while driving.

Fun fact: I love boogey boarding, as long as the waves are big. I don't care how cold it is or what month it is.

Goal: To travel to all 50 states.

Person I'd most like to meet: Santa Claus.

Biggest worry: It sounds weird but being hit by a car — I run when I cross the street.

Best part of Cohasset: Cohasset Recreation!! Best place to spend your summer.

Cohasset Historical Society museums open

Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., downtown Cohasset, are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th Century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum.

The museums tell of the early history of Cohasset. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s.

The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses.

Both buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The museums are open 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays.

For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

Accident snarls 3A traffic

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Traffic was snarled on Route 3A in the area of Pond Street Monday afternoon (July 9) at 5:15pm, after an 18-year-old Cohasset teen, who was operating a 2003 Ford Explorer, rear-ended a 1979 Chevrolet Malibu at high-speed. Both vehicles were going north on 3A when the operator of the Malibu stopped for the red light at Pond Street, police said. The operator of the Explorer told police that as he approached the stopped traffic, his foot slipped off the brake and he hit the car in front of him.

A 29-year-old Cohasset man was operating the Malibu. The Malibu was totaled in the collision and the Explorer sustained heavy front-end damage, police said.

Both vehicles had to be towed and the 18-year-old was issued a citation for failure to use care in braking on a state highway.

Deer removed

The Animal Control Officer removed a deceased deer from the MBTA right-of-way near Pond and Spring streets after the T failed to remove the animal, police said. The deer appeared to have been clipped by a train on July 2 at the foot of Pond Street. The animal was severely injured and had to be put down by police. Police notified the T to pick up the carcass but they did not respond and the animal had started to rot by July 3. Paul Murphy, the animal control officer, went down there, dragged the animal onto his own pickup truck and took it to the RTF, police said.

Soliciting

Police responded to a complaint about two solicitors from a Forest Notch resident last week. As it turned out, the solicitors were from MASSPIRG, a non-profit, and had notified the police department of their activity. The town has a door-to-door solicitation bylaw governing for-profit soliciting.

Dispute

A S. Main Street resident wanted it logged last week that she has an ongoing dispute with a neighbor who had cut her lawn without her permission.

Money

A 9-1-1 caller notified police last week that there was a dispute at the residence with a contractor over money and the resident wanted him off the property. Police responded but the contractor had already left the scene.

Note left

A local business wanted it logged last week that a notice was left on the front door by an upset customer complaining about service. The note was non-threatening in nature, police said.

Lumber taken

Police received a call from the Atlantic Avenue/ Whitehead Road area that a man with tattoos and driving a pickup truck stopped and picked up old lumber that was piled at the side of the road and drove away. The lumber was not for the taking.

Chain-reaction

Police responded to a three-car, chain reaction accident on Route 3A near Cohasset Imports on Tuesday (July 3) at 3:54 p.m. Police said a 2006 Volvo sedan, operated by a 49-year-old Scituate man, had stopped to make a left into Cohasset Imports. The car behind the Volvo, a 2004 Mercedes E500, operated by a 33-year-old Hingham woman, slowed to allow him to turn. The Mercedes was then rear-ended by a 2013 Ford Mustang, operated by a 22-year-old Cohasset woman. The Mustang hit the Mercedes, which then hit the Volvo. The Volvo and Mustang had to be towed. There were no reported injuries. The operator of the Mustang was cited for failure to use care in stopping.

Parking lot

At 11:13 a.m. on Wednesday (July 4), a 20-year-old Scituate man reported that he had parked his 2008 Toyota Scion in the town parking lot and while he was at work, the car was damaged on the driver's side. The incident occurred sometime between 4 and 10:15 p.m.

Tractor-trailer

At 11:44 a.m. on Friday (July 6), a 19-year-old woman operating a 2012 Honda Pilot was trying to exit Parker Avenue when she pulled around an illegally parked tractor-trailer truck, hitting the side of the truck, police said. Police said the road is very narrow. There was damage to the right side of her car. The car did not have to be towed.

The operator of the Explorer told police that as he approached the stopped traffic, his foot slipped off the brake and he hit the car in front of him.

Stolen Volvo

At 1:47 p.m. on Saturday (July 7), police responded to an accident at lower King Street near Route 3A. Police said the 2000 Volvo wagon that caused the crash was reported as stolen out of Scituate. The Volvo rear-ended a 1999 Nissan Quest, operated by an 85-year-old Scituate man, at lower King Street as the Nissan was turning into lower King from Route 3A. The operator of the Volvo took off on foot and is described as white and wearing only a pair of brown shorts. He disappeared in the woods near Laugelle Lane. Police said the K-9 was called to try and track the suspect but they believe he was picked up by another car. The Volvo had been reported stolen earlier that day out of Rebecca Road in Scituate.

Fireworks

Police spoke to a 43-year-old resident who was putting on a large display of fireworks on July 3. He was advised that the fireworks were illegal and police confiscated several large packages of fireworks.

Rock thrown

A 53-year-old Sohier Street woman reported to police that someone had thrown a rock through the window of her 2009 Nissan Murano sometime between midnight and 8 a.m. on Wednesday (July 4).

Road rage

Police responded to a road rage incident on Thursday (July 5). A caller reported that an irate man was following his wife. Police said the woman, who is 50 and from Cohasset, admitted to having cut the man off but then he started following her, honking and flailing his arms. They both pulled into Shaw's where the man went into the store. Police located the 79-year-old Cohasset man and told him to stop the road-rage behavior.

Bat in library

The library reported an injured bat was inside at the reference desk last week. The Animal Control Officer was able to remove it, police said.

Employee

A local, concerned business owner wanted to report last week that a new employee, a 33-year-old Randolph man, had acted strangely accusing people of talking behind his back and was demonstrating paranoid behavior. The employee, who had just been hired, then did not show up to work again.

Price is right for all-terrain 'mule'

Tom Wigmore gives the "mule" a spin. Police and fire have use of the all-terrain vehicle during the summer months. COURTESY PHOTO

The Cohasset Police Department received a grant from Kawasaki Motors for an All Terrain Utility Vehicle (called a Mule), for use during the summer months. The Mule weighs about 900 pounds, gets 25 miles per gallon, and can tow up 1100 pounds while holding 400 pounds of equipment in the bed.

The department has free use of the Mule until Sept. 30, 2012, at which time it will be returned to Kawasaki. The only cost to the town is fuel.

"We used it at the Cohasset Triathlon for moving cones and barriers," Deputy Chief William Quigley said. "The Mule is four-wheel drive and has a governor on it the prevents it from going in excess of 40 MPH."

Police said the Hingham Police and Fire Department requested to borrow it for their July 4th festivities. "It was ultimately used by Hingham Fire Department Paramedics for emergency response during Hingham's fireworks and parade," Quigley said.

Currently the mule is housed at the Cohasset Police station.

"We have been using it to deploy traffic barricades and at special events such as the farmers market. We have also had a special police officer using it for parking enforcement at Sandy Beach, Government Island, and Parker Avenue," Quigley said. "It's great on gas, we don't have to tie-up a regular cruiser for summer duties, and the price was right - FREE!"

Cohasset Fire Department personnel have been given a set of keys to it too. It could be very handy for rescues in Wompatuck State Park, Whitney Woods, or even along the Greenbush Right-of-Way, police said.

After accident, officials discourage bridge jumping

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

When hot temperatures hit Cohasset, kids can be see lining up to jump off the local bridges and splash into cool waters below. Town officials discourage it, the police try to stop it, but some parents even encourage their kids to jump.

In Cohasset, bridge jumping is often called a rite of passage. But the practice sometimes has dangerous consequences, and a recent event at the Border Street Bridge is no exception.

A weekend accident has town officials reminding those who frequent the harbor that bridge jumping is dangerous and against the town's bylaw.

On Sunday, July 8 at 6:02 p.m., a young man from Roxbury was pulled from the water lifeless after jumping off Border Street Bridge.

Multiple people at the scene jumped into the water to try to save the man, including the assistant harbormasters, one of whom reportedly jumped in "sunglasses and all."

Paramedics arrived within minutes and the individual was hospitalized. His condition on Sunday night was critical, but has since been elevated to stable.

"The good news is he will survive this," said Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. "But this creates a public safety issue."

Milanoski called the event a "near fatality," and wanted to remind the public that bridge jumping is a dangerous activity and is illegal in Cohasset.

The town passed a bylaw in 1992 outlawing the practice; selectmen set the fine at $25. However, the fine doesn't seem to be much a deterrent to the scores of youth who can be seen bridge jumping on a regular basis each summer.

Enforcement is a major issue, said Milanoski. "Kids don't have I.D. [on them] or give false names." Typically, officers just "scoot people away," said selectman Diane Kennedy.

It's illegal to park at the bridge, so those in violation will be ticketed. Determined bridge jumpers get around this by parking down the street and walking to the site.

The town manager told the selectmen that the town could look into a "mechanical mechanism" to discourage people from jumping, but that would require a capital expenditure.

For now, "we've stepped up the surveillance with the police department and harbormaster," said Milanoski, adding that Sunday's incident was captured on video. "We're also bringing on a summer patrolman to provide direct oversight of the bridge and monitor it more."

The question is, will it be enough?

Some folks seem to hold the assumption that it's only the "city kids" who don't know how to swim in the ocean that get hurt. Milanoski explained that the common perception in town is that "Cohasset kids have learned to swim around here and know the surroundings... kids from other towns don't have that environment."

But officials are worried about both the out-of-towners and their own kids taking the leap.

"You drive by the bridge and see a big line of kids, happy kids we all know and love," said Kennedy. "We need to remind them this is dangerous, and it's not allowed."

JUMPER

Bridge jumping is an arrestable offense but arresting large groups of kids would be problematic. Police can also issue tickets but since the kids are all in bathing suits they do not have IDs on them.

harbormaster's office that there was a person in the water who was having trouble swimming and appeared to be drowning. Three cruisers were dispatched immediately along with the fire department.

Those civilians at the scene along with assistant harbormasters were able to pull the 19-year-old Roxbury man onto a small skiff and then onto the dock at Government Island, Deputy Chief William Quigley said.

The teen was taken to South Shore Hospital by ambulance with two Cohasset paramedics providing medical care and a firefighter driving the ambulance, police said. The teen, who was in critical condition, was treated in the emergency room and later admitted to the hospital where his condition was upgraded to stable. It is unclear if he has been released.

Police said witnesses reported the teen jumped off the Gulf side of the bridge and was swept under the bridge into the rapids with the outgoing tide. He was having trouble, flailing his arms around, and was taking in a lot of water.

"The teen dodged a bullet and is lucky to be alive," Deputy Police Chief William Quigley said.

There were at least 13 entries in this past week's police/fire log where police cleared groups of kids from the Border Street bridge. A summer police officer started this week and will be helping to monitor the bridge, Quigley said.

"We do not want to ruin anyone's summer fun – but we don't want to attend a funeral service either," Quigley said.

Quigley said police do the best they can in dispersing groups from the bridge. Bridge jumping is an arrestable offense but arresting large groups of kids would be problematic. Police can also issue tickets but since the kids are all in bathing suits they do not have IDs on them.

Quigley said that most of the offenders are 12 to 15 years old and do not know their social security numbers or have state ID making filling out a citation extremely difficult.

"Add to that the fact a person of that age may not realize the gravity of receiving citation," he explained. "They put the ticket in the pocket of their wet shorts and that's the end of the ticket — as far as they're concerned. Months later the unpaid ticket winds itself through the system and we end up with an arrest warrant for a kid in middle school."

Quigley said the only way to stop the activity may be by mechanical means. Netting could be installed making it impossible to jump from the bridge into the water below.

Both Barrett and McCarthy said they grew up jumping off the bridge. They said they take their ability to swim for granted because they grew up by the ocean. The teens from Boston on the bridge that day did not have that advantage.

"It was pretty intense," Barrett said about the incident. He said once it was all over, he and McCarthy looked at each other realizing the teens on the bridge that day did not understand the danger.

CPA

Bonetti.

There are currently 148 communities in Massachusetts that are members of the Community Preservation Coalition, which use the CPA to preserve open space and historic sites, create affordable housing, and develop outdoor recreational facilities.

Prior to the recent change in legislation, "this has been a problem in many communities who have plenty of existing, older rec properties," Bonetti said last week. "I'm glad to see the changes to the recreation portion of the CPA. There are a lot of towns like Cohasset where we have existing recreational facilities that can stand some work without taking on new properties."

Now, under the recreation category, CPA grants can fund "replacement of playground equipment and other capital improvements to the land or the facilities thereon which make the land or the related facilities more functional for the intended for the intended use," according to the CPA. Under the act, "recreational use" does not include horse or dog racing or the use of the land for a stadium, gymnasium or similar structure, however.

Bonetti said of this, "My reading is that CPC can't fund new buildings, but funds can be used on existing buildings."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski informed the Board of Selectmen of the change in CPA legislation during Tuesday's selectmen meeting. Milanoski said that he hopes the town can utilize CPC funds to help pay for the Sailing Club's new clubhouse, fix the drainage at the baseball/softball fields on North Main Street, and improve the exterior façade of the Old Town Hall.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby suggested the town also look into other grants. Milanoski responded, "We're not shy about applying for any grant that's not going to have residual costs."

Bonetti, who was in the audience of the selectmen meeting, said that he was surprised to see the CPC legislation on the agenda, and that while he was glad that it was being discussed, he would have appreciated being notified before the meeting.

BRIEFLY

Transfer station: new fine structure

During Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced a new fine structure for the transfer station. The fines will affect individuals who break the rules of trash disposal.

The town requires residents who use the transfer station to purchase blue bags for non-recyclable trash. Many people throw their own bags in when transfer station workers aren't looking, according to officials; others put store-bought trash bags inside the blue bags, dump the store-bought bag and reuse the blue bag. Officials call this move "the Cohasset toss."

Milanoski hopes introducing fines will lessen this activity. Penalties will be issued in four steps:

- Written warning
- $50 fine
- $100 fine
- Use of transfer station revoked for six months

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said that while the fines seem "draconian," the new policy is "a noble thought."

The board voted unanimously to approve the new fines.

New health inspector hired

Cohasset's Board of Health has a new health inspector, after longtime inspector Tara Tradd left the position last month after working in Cohasset for 14 years.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced Tuesday that a new health inspector has been hired. Felix Zemel of Swampscott was chosen out of 30 applicants, Milanoski said.

Zemel most recently served on the Framingham Board of Health and holds a master's in public health, along with a master's in city planning, and both a B.S. and associate's in engineering technology. Zemel is also certified as a registered sanitarian and building inspector, among other accomplishments.

Milanoski said that Zemel's salary will be $65,000, which is "within the approved range." Previous inspector Tradd was paid $61,788 in fiscal year 2011.

Selectman Leland Jenkins noted that with Zemel's expertise, his position could have "dual use," since the town manager is also planning to hire a full-time director of project management and planning.

Milanoski said that Zemel "will pick up additional responsibilities" to "amp up that department and help bring it to another level."

Zemel will start his new position in two weeks.

Sewer hook-ups

Faced with the state's Second Amended Final Judgment to hook-up to municipal sewer by July 1, the town manager announced Tuesday that most of the 124 homes in the Inner Little Harbor Sewer District were hooked up by deadline.

As of May, over 90 homes had yet to pull permits to connect. Milanoski said that this week, there is "less than a handful" of homes left.

If the town did not meet the state's deadline, Cohasset would be responsible for any fees levied against the town by the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

Milanoski singled out the Sewer Commission's Diane Hindley for "working tirelessly on this issue."

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said that congratulations were in order. "I doubted we'd ever get it done."

SUMMER DRAMA

'Little Mermaid Jr.'

This classic Disney title contains all of the songs from the Academy Award winning animated feature film as well as three new songs from the Broadway show.

Disney's "The Little Mermaid Jr." opens at Cohasset Dramatic Club as the first of their two summer drama workshop productions, on Friday, July 13, with a special performance for Cohasset's Summer Recreation Camp participants. The remaining performances are Friday and Saturday evenings at 7 p.m. and a Sunday matinee at 2 p.m. All performances take place at the air-conditioned Cohasset Town Hall Theater. The 60-minute musical, designed for elementary and middle school aged performers, is based on the 2008 Broadway production and the 1989 animated feature film. The 60-member cast, made up of 8 to 13-year-olds from Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Norwell, Rockland and Weymouth is directed by Lisa Pratt of Cohasset with music direction by Mark Bono of Milton.

This classic Disney title contains all of the songs from the Academy Award winning animated feature film as well as three new songs from the Broadway show. "The Little Mermaid Jr." takes place in a magical kingdom beneath the sea, where a beautiful young mermaid named Ariel longs to leave her ocean home to live in the world above. But first, she'll have to defy her father, the king of the sea, escape the clutches of an evil sea witch and convince a prince that she's the girl with the perfect voice.

General admission tickets are $15 each and are available by reservation at 617-922-0280 or at the door one hour prior to each performance. For more information visit www.cohassetdramaticclub.org

HAPPENING SATURDAY, JULY 21

Run takes FUN very seriously

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

The Hubbard Memorial 5K Fun Run

On Saturday, July 21 at 8:30 a.m., Race Director, Ed Baldry will yell "GO!" and a few hundred people will run, walk, maybe even saunter, as they make their way around a 5k-ish like course with family, neighbors and friends. This run (not a RACE) begins and ends at the Flag Pole on the Common and benefits Cohasset Maritime Institute, known as "CMI."

The Run is dedicated to the memories of Cohasset residents, Jack and June Hubbard, Jack was an avid rower and instrumental in starting CMI — which is located in the Francis Hagerty boathouse at the end of Parker Avenue. The Run's proceeds support CMI's mission to provide a community rowing program for all, revitalize small boat woodcraft, and raise awareness for Cohasset's special place in local maritime history.

Baldry, who was a collegiate rower, has been involved with CMI for 6 years and is founder of this bi-annual event. He was introduced to CMI by Board Members Lisa Hewitt Dick and husband Mike who are longtime members of this local rowing community. Hewitt Dick is also a member of the Fun Run Race Committee.

"CMI has a fantastic Youth program run by world class coach, John Liffman that I'm involved with. I really enjoy helping to coach and train with the kids," says Baldry. "Rowing can be a lifelong sport and it is rewarding to light that flame with the younger students."

New to the Fun Run this year is a list of generous Family sponsors. They include The Hubbard Family; The Liffman Family; The Comrack Family; The Baldry Family; The Baumgarten Family; The Buckley Family; The Bushnell Family; The Gratta Family, The McMeekin Family; The Hewitt Dick Family; The Sease Family; The Guinee Family; The Lyons Family; The Novak Family; The Besse -Cunningham Family; The Kneeland-Perry-Family; The O'Sullivan-Kearns Family; The Mclellan Family; The Crough Family; The Fechter Family; and The Pecca Family.

Thanks to the following corporate sponsors: Institutional Cash Distributors; BKM Marketing; The Law Office of David H. Farrag, P.C., Pilgrim Bank, Cavanaro Consulting, Cohasset Collision, Hassan Sign Company, Ordinance and Explosives Remediation, Big Brush Painting, JBL Sports Antiquities LLC, Good Sport, Aetna Fire Alarm Service Company Inc., Cohasset Harbor Marina, Goodwin Graphics, HUB Construction, Shoe Market Kids, and Visible Ink Media.

Ongoing support of CMI is provided by Rotary Club of Cohasset; South Shore Music Circus; Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research; and Cohasset Sailing Club.

"It is a pleasure to be part of a fun, motivated and enthusiastic bunch of people that are utilizing the fabulous resources that we have been afforded in this town. Hopefully, The Hubbard "Fun Run," is just that," says Baldry. "A chance for family and friends to get out, exercise, have a few laughs and enjoy the beautiful setting that Cohasset provides."

Cohasset Maritime Institute is a 501c(3) non-profit charitable organization. To register for the race visit rowcmi.com. Registration on "Fun" Run day begins at 7:30. Run/Walk begins at 8:30 am. Walkers AND Runners are welcome and encouraged.

Hello Cohasset, how is everyone this week? I hope you are all well and enjoying some time off even if it is just a day or two. Take in the summer to get in shape and have some fun! Also, congratulations to all the terrific students highlighted in this week's column!

Birthday wishes

A very Happy 18th Birthday wish is being sent out to Jimmy Lydon from his Mom, Dad and his little sister, Libby, as he celebrated last weekend his special day on July 7, 2012!

Hope your day was awesome Jim and that you are looking forward to a fantastic year ahead. Happy Birthday to you...

On stage

Disney's "The Little Mermaid Jr." opens at Cohasset Dramatic Club as the first of their two summer drama workshop productions, today (Friday, July 13th) with a special performance for Cohasset's Summer Recreation Camp participants. The remaining performances are Friday and Saturday evenings at 7 pm and a Sunday matinee at 2 pm. All performances take place at the air-conditioned Cohasset Town Hall Theater. The 60-minute musical, designed for elementary and middle school aged performers, is based on the 2008 Broadway production and the 1989 animated feature film.

The 60-member cast, made up of 8 – 13 year olds from Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Norwell, Rockland and Weymouth is directed by Lisa Pratt of Cohasset with music direction by Mark Bono (Milton).

General admission tickets are $15 each and are available by reservation at 617-922-0280 or at the door one hour prior to each performance. For more information please visit us at www.cohassetdramaticclub.org

For photos of this week's dress rehearsal, see page 23.

Wake Forest

Ryan Daly, a resident of Cohasset, was among students from Wake Forest University who made the 2012 spring dean's list.

Loomis Chaffee

Patrick Dunn of Cohasset was among the 218 graduates from the Loomis Chaffee Class of 2012. The school's 96th commencement ceremony took place June 8, 2012. Patrick was a staff member of the student newspaper, the Log, and a member of the Cupcake and Dodgeball clubs. He was also a member of the Boys Varsity Lacrosse team. He will matriculate at Northeastern University.

Caroline Lengyel received the Harvard University Book Award; Abigail Carrier received the College of Mount Saint Vincent Book Award; Marissa Gildea received the St. Michael's College Book Award; and Marie Gilman, Christina Healy, Danielle Healy and Elizabeth Leong each received a Senior Career Plaque Award in Athletics.

Providence

The following Cohasset residents were named to the dean's list at Providence College for the 2012 spring semester: Taryn Donohue, Class of 2014; Kerry McCabe, Class of 2015; and Anthony Testa, Class of 2015.

To qualify for the dean's list, students must achieve at least a 3.55 grade point average with a minimum of 12 credits.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

Students explore nature nearby

Fourth graders visit Cohasset's conservation land

By Jenny Magruder
jmagruder@wickedlocal.com

Fourth grade teacher Suzi Corkhum believes that children are never too young to help protect the environment.

While teaching a reading unit on "Patterns in Nature" in her Deer Hill classroom, Corkhum found that her students were drawn to the subject of nature. They were eager to learn more about the natural world and the problems facing the environment.

With the students' interest piqued, Corkhum decided that it would be beneficial to learn about the natural environment in their own hometown.

"I wanted to connect the students with the community and nature in Cohasset and expand their curriculum," Corkhum wrote in an email.

With the help of Marjorie Murphy, former librarian for the Deer Hill School, she was able to get in contact with Dick Avery of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, who had similar goals for educating the town's youth.

Before taking them on a field trip, Avery first came into the student's class to discuss the three areas in Cohasset that they would be visiting. He also talked about the impact humans make on the environment and how their interaction with natural spaces can be helpful, but also hurtful.

Shortly before school let out for the summer, Avery and his wife, Sally, took Mrs. Corkhum's class on a field trip around Cohasset that included stops at Dormitzer Salt Marsh, Great Brewster Woods, and Rocky Beach.

The majority of the students did not realize that Cohasset had a diverse collection of protected natural areas. The Conservation Trust owns or holds the conservation restriction on 21 different properties in Cohasset and Scituate.

Many of the students were surprised that some places were protected by the Cohasset Conservation Trust, and were unaware of the regulations against taking things from them (see page 18 for student letters).

After their field trip, Avery gave all of Corkhum's students the title of "Junior Stewards."

"All of our major goals were met. We connected the students with the resources in front of them, and they now know how important it is to protect the natural environment," Corkhum said.

Students make their way through one of the Conservation Trust's properties.

"I wanted to connect the students with the community and nature in Cohasset and expand their curriculum."

MAGICAL MOON FOUNDATION

Helping kids fight cancer

Cohasset Jewelers raffling Steven Tyler guitar

correspondent

This year, Cohasset Jewelers is observing its 30th anniversary. Storeowner Mark Cirone will be recognizing this achievement not only with a party — but also by giving back to others. Cirone chose to celebrate this milestone by hosting a fundraiser for the Magical Moon Foundation in Marshfield.

Unlike the Knights of the Round Table, the knights of the Magical Moon Foundation are always focused on the journey, not the battle. These children possess all the characteristics of a valiant knight. They are noble, courageous, and strive to make the world a healthier place to live. They have faced difficult obstacles and successfully overcome them, but unfortunately, they have lost some of their fellow knights on the journey.

The children at the Magical Moon Foundation have found strength in being together, for they have all been on a similar journey with cancer. Between medical treatments and doctor's appointments, the children do not really have much time to just be kids. Donna Green, a Marshfield artist, had seen cancer in children in her family before, and she wanted to create a place that they could escape the medical world and just be at peace. Thus, she opened Magical Moon Farm 10 years ago with a goal to encourage children with cancer to find their inner strength and become empowered by motivation.

"There is a great need for children to have something to help them stay strong in between treatment times," says Green. Once an old auction house, Magical Moon Farm has been transformed into a relaxing and peaceful haven that the young knights can go to and realize their individual mission. These missions can include organizing a picnic for all the knights, planting a garden, or even compiling an organic cookbook. It may take some time to discover their mission, but Alice Williams, a mother of one of the knights, explains, "When the kids all find each other, the mission just comes."

In between finding their own missions in their hearts, the children also find courage from being in a group. Together, they have planted an organic garden, built a waterfall dug from a natural spring, constructed a chicken coop, and are currently working on a mosaic in the garden. Along with these larger projects, the knights also find pleasure in the small things such as field trips, painting, music, and just hanging out with each other at the farm. "Cancer is a very unfair thing that happens, and by finding their mission and being together, it makes it fair and puts things back in their control," Green says.

Recently, the Magical Moon Foundation has been in need of fundraising to raise money for a retreat. Green happened to have a guitar signed by Aerosmith's Steven Tyler (who is on the board of MMF), and decided to auction it off at a golf tournament at Scituate Harbor Yacht Club.

Cirone purchased the guitar at the auction and after talking with Green about MMF; he was inspired by the cause. After hearing that MMF was in need of money to fund a retreat, he had the idea to hold a raffle.

Cirone has also been personally affected by cancer. His wife, Sharon, is a stage-four cancer patient, and she has been battling the disease for 10 years now. Both wanted to find a way to help the Magical Moon Foundation, so Cirone decided that Cohasset Jewelers would host a raffle with the signed guitar, and give all the proceeds - their goal is to raise $7500 — to the knights for their retreat.

The raffle tickets are being sold for $30 a piece in honor of Cohasset Jeweler's 30th anniversary. There are 250 tickets available, and already 100 have been sold. The drawing will take place on July 28 with live broadcasting from WATD radio. Callie, a knight of Magical Moon, will be drawing the winning ticket.

"There are very few times that you can write a check to save someone's life, and we are very grateful to be able to help the Magical Moon Foundation," Cirone says.

BRIEFLY

Summer Sunday Carillon concerts

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of bells (23), President Calvin Coolidge and his wife Grace stood on Cohasset Common, listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

- July 15: Groeninger Carillon Duo: Auke de-Boer and Adolph Rots (Groeningen, Netherlands)
- July 22: Joey Brink (Yale University, Conn.)
- July 29: Trevor Workman (Birmingham, England)
- Aug 5: Lisa Lonie (St. Thomas Church, Whitemarsh, Penn.)
- Aug 12: George Matthew, Jr. (Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt.)

Cohasset Common, in the center of town, is one of the best listening places. Parking is ample and free. Bring your lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while the bells are ringing. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower is offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

The Carillon Concert Series is sponsored by St. Stephen's Church. This year's series is also supported in part by a generous donation from Alicia and John Seavey of Cohasset and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local branch of the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

OUR VIEW

Bridge jumping

Depending on the weather, the police log can contain numerous daily reports about police officers having "dispersed a gathering" from the Border Street bridge. But once the officer leaves, the jumpers quickly return.

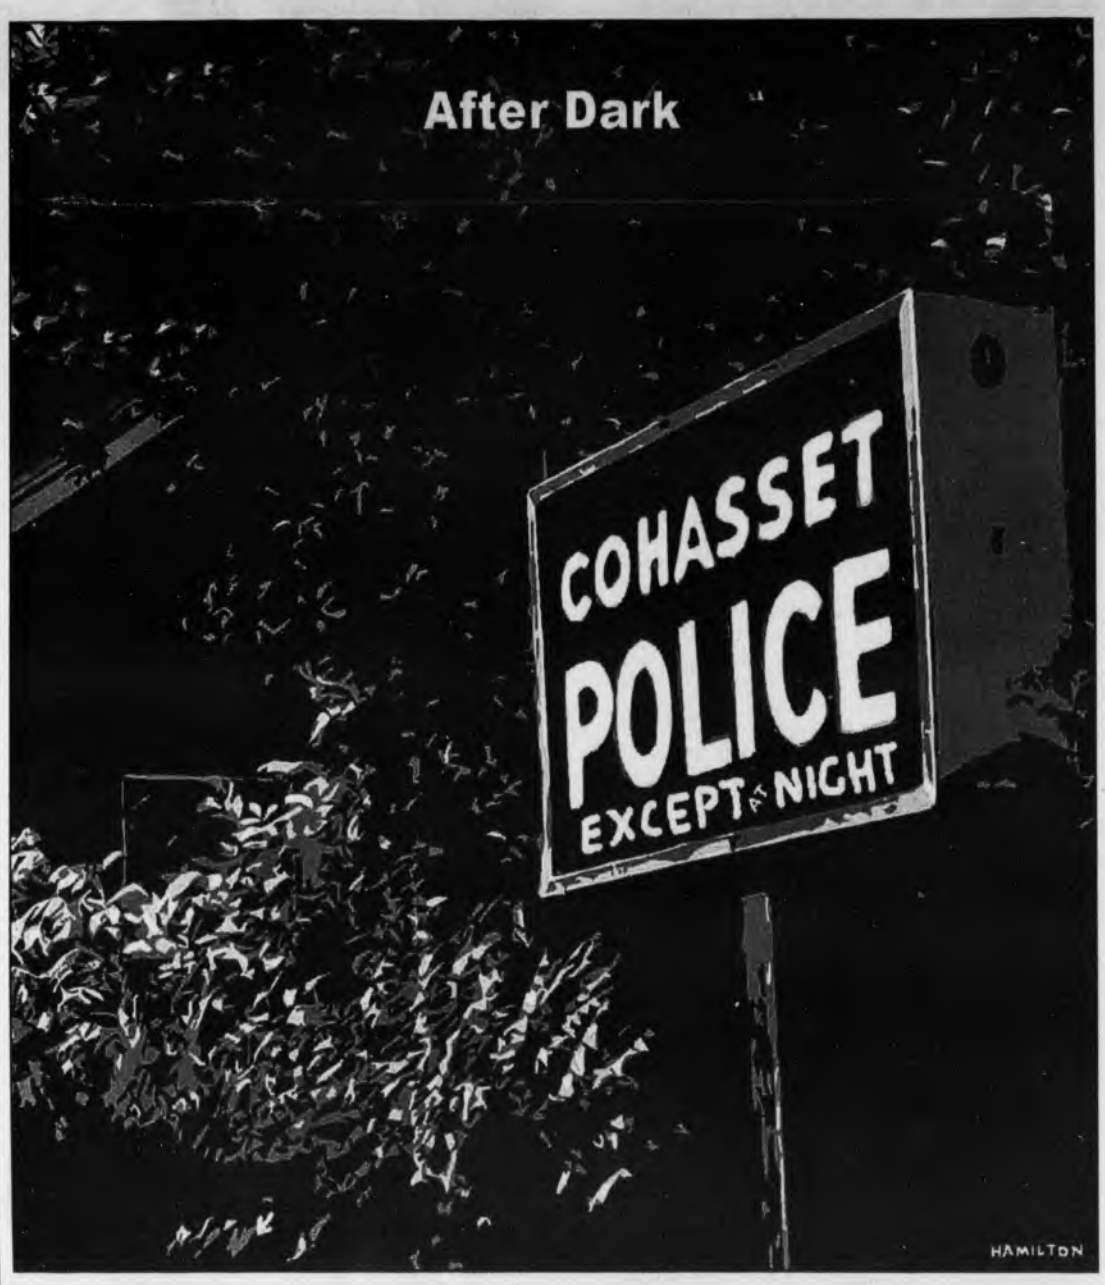
The annual summertime activity attracts local teens and preteens as well as out-of-towners.

While the practice is often described as a "rite of passage" – it is clearly dangerous and would better be described as "an accident waiting to happen."

As Deputy Chief William Quigley said this week: "We do not want to ruin anyone's summer fun – but we don't want to attend a funeral service either."

This past week, our worst fears were realized as a teen from Roxbury almost drowned after jumping into the Gulf and then being swept under the bridge with the outgoing tide and into the rapids.

Police increase patrols and monitor the bridge during the summer but it does little to discourage the activity. Police can charge fines and also arrest jumpers – but both those options are problematic as some of the jumpers are as young as 12 and few have IDs with them. (There have been arrests when alcohol has been involved.)



We recall an incident a few years ago when a youth brought along a small trampoline to provide more propulsion off the bridge. There is also the danger of a young person getting hit by a car traveling over the bridge.

We think it is time to examine "mechanical means" (high fencing on the bridge or some kind of netting below the bridge) to end the bridge jumping tradition even if that involves a capital expenditure. Other than stationing an officer full-time at the bridge on hot days – we do not see another alternative.

As Deputy Chief William Quigley said this week: "We do not want to ruin anyone's summer fun – but we don't want to attend a funeral service either."

Apart from a terrible human tragedy – what liability is the town exposed to with this attractive nuisance?

In the early 1980s – we reported on towns that were actually flattening sledding hills due to the liability issue. We hope those litigious days are over, but the Town of Cohasset – which clearly knows how dangerous the bridge jumping can be – should take all steps possible to end the practice, once and for all.

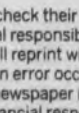
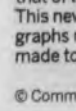
The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.



Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.



If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Relay For Life support appreciated

On June 22 and 23, the American Cancer Society's, grassroots fundraiser, the Relay For Life was held in Cohasset and enjoyed participation from teams not only from Cohasset but from Hingham, Scituate and Hull.

The heat, humidity, thunder and lightening did not dampen the enthusiasm and support of all who came, participated and stayed to enjoy the children's events, good food and the celebration of the lives of all who have been touched by cancer.

The goals of the Relay are to raise money for research, education, support and advocacy, create awareness of cancer. We were successful on all counts. It was a great community event with 16 teams raising close to $50,000.

This event could not have been successful without the support from the local area Girl Scouts, the Cohasset High School football team members, the Cohasset High School facilities staff, the support of the School Committee, the Second Congregational Church, Cohasset Police Department, the Rusty Skippers Band, our business supporters who donated money and or food for the Taste of the Relay and all of the volunteers that helped make this a safe and entertaining event.

All who were involved brought a spirit to the Relay that will stay with us for a long time. I thank all of you.

Courtney Finn, Jen Lord and Harry St.Onge, Co-Chairs

Do you still believe?

Mr. Coughlin I hate to be the bearer of bad news but your friend DeLuca's reputation and his integrity have been a problem from day one of his being appointed as Chief of Police in Cohasset, just ask anybody from Duxbury.

So after an internal police investigation was completed by a private investigator, do you still believe the process is unfair or as the private investigator stated it's all in the police chief's mind?

It's interesting to learn the history between our ex-Town Manager and the Chief of Police. Coughlin is concerned for his friend's job and reputation as well as the integrity of the police department. He should be, look what happened to him. Enough said.

Acting Town Manager Mike Milanoski and our Selectmen are doing a great job, especially with all these investigations going on, it's a miracle Acting Town Manager Milanoski can think straight.

I have confidence that our Selectmen and Acting Town Manager Mike Milanoski will make the right decisions for the Town of Cohasset's best interest.

COMMENTARY

Weighing in on investigation

PAUL CARLSON

The Town Manager has the absolute right to talk with any union official at any time on any related issues.

On Tuesday, June 26, the Selectmen reviewed the reports of two seasoned independent investigators regarding allegations by Police Chief DeLuca accusing Acting Town Manager Milanoski of having a phone conversation with Officer Patrick Reardon, the President of the local police union, without the Chief's sanction. He also accused Mr. Milanoski of offering to dismiss charges against a police sergeant if the union would cover the sergeant's shift payment, thereby interfering with an open investigation.

Mr. Milanoski had the legal right to have the Selectmen review these reports in Executive session. He waived that right, so that the Board of Selectmen's meeting on this subject was an extraordinarily transparent process. The details of these investigations were discussed in plain public view and the reports have been sent to the press.

Both investigators were specifically authorized to conduct the investigations as they thought appropriate, and were free to reach their own independent conclusions. They stated they were not influenced or directed in any way to reach any specific conclusion.

Both independent investigators concluded that the allegations against the Acting Town Manager had no merit and should be dismissed. Let me summarize why the investigators reached this conclusion.

Under state law and Cohasset's Town Manager Act, the town manager is responsible for all union relations. The Town Manager has the absolute right to talk with any union official at any time on any related issues. The department heads, in this case the Police Chief, have no right to control these discussions; their role is advisory to the town manager. Chief DeLuca had no authority to require that all communications with the members of the police force must go through his office.

Regarding the content of their conversation, both Mr. Milanoski and Officer Reardon have steadfastly denied there was any offer to dismiss any charges. At the time, no charges had been filed against anybody. Chief DeLuca's allegation was based on third hand information or hearsay. He never confronted Mr. Milanoski or Officer Reardon. Therefore, he had no direct knowledge to support his allegations. When Mr. Milanoski and Officer Reardon both denied that there was an offer to dismiss, there was nothing left of the chief's complaint.

In my opinion, the selectmen's only logical course was to dismiss the allegations and exonerate Mr. Milanoski. The Attorney General's Office and the State Ethics Commission also decided not to pursue this matter.

Mr. Carlson lives at 18 Old Coach Road. He is the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen. The views expressed are the author's personal opinion and are not an official position of the Board of Selectmen.

HEALTH NOTES

Proper disposal of sharps

STEVE BOBO

The Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Station is not a sharps disposal site. Just call the Board of Health for information on days, hours and location of the sharps disposal sites in Cohasset.

One of the most insidious products of our throwaway society is sharps. Sharps are hypodermic needles, syringes, etc., used in human patient care or treatment, or in medical, research, industrial laboratories, etc. Also included are other types of broken or unbroken glassware that were in contact with infectious agents, such as used slides and cover slips, and unused hypodermic and suture needles, syringes and scalpel blades. Millions of people use syringes, needles and lancets to manage their care at home. For example, diabetics sometimes use hypodermic needles for insulin injection. These are called household sharps.

Dispose of Household Sharps Properly: Household sharps represent a special threat to children, pets and workers who handle trash. They must be properly stored and then discarded after use to protect from illness or injury, prevent reuse, protect the environment and keep sharps out of household trash and recycling bins. To dispose of household sharps, you can bring your used sharps to any hospital or nursing home or healthcare facility in the state. The Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Station is not a sharps disposal site. Just call the Board of Health for information on days, hours and location of the sharps disposal sites in Cohasset. Or ask your health care provider about how and where to dispose of sharps.

How to Store Your Sharps: Follow these guidelines to safely store used sharps in your home until you are able to safely discard them:

- Put used sharps (needles, syringes, and lancets) in a sharps container or a puncture-resistant, plastic bottle (for example, a bleach or laundry detergent bottle). Close the screw-on top tightly. You may want to tape it as well. Label the bottle, "Contains Sharps."
- Keep sharps containers away from children and pets.
- Put used sharps immediately into your container. Keep the container closed between uses.
- Bring your container with you when you travel, and dispose of it at home when you return.
- Never flush sharps down the toilet or drop them into a storm sewer.
- Never clip, bend or recap sharps.
- Never put sharps containers out with the recycling. Loose needles, syringes or lancets should never be thrown into a recycling bin.
- Don't put sharps in soda cans, milk cartons, glass bottles or in any containers that are not puncture resistant. Coffee cans are not recommended because the plastic lids come off too easily and may leak.

At-home Needle Destruction Devices

Several manufacturers offer products that allow you to destroy used needles at home. These devices sever, burn or melt the needle, rendering it safe for disposal. Check with your pharmacist or search the Internet using keywords "sharps disposal devices." The prices of these devices vary according to product type and manufacturer.

Sharps Are Not Recyclable - Do Not Put the Sharps Container out with the Recyclable Plastics

Having disposed of Sharps properly, we repeat, we are a throwaway society. Most of the rest of the world, which has reached a certain level of affluence, also tends to increase this trash disposal proclivity; but nowhere as much as in the United States. Luke Bassis states: "The disposal of garbage in the world is a problem that continues to grow with the development of industrialized nations and the growth of population. Since the beginning of time people have needed to find a way of disposing of their trash. In 18th century England and France, carters were paid by individuals to carry trash and discard it on the outskirts of town." So, what's changed? Disposal in open pits is mentioned in the Bible (Deuteronomy 23:12-14). Since then we have come a long way and have developed types of waste that cannot simply be dumped into a hole. In a future article, we will discuss this real problem and it's long-term implications for your health.

GROWING ON THE FARM

'Black gold' helps gardens grow

Compost is the secret and the most important aspect of organic gardening and farming. The farmers know it is essential to add this well-balanced compost to farm beds and garden plots before planting.

JON BELBER

Compost happens. It is a common practice and understanding for those who (purposely or inadvertently) pile leaves in the backyard on top of (hopefully untreated) grass clippings and those mavericks who carry out vegetable scraps to a compost bin. The end goal is rich in nutrients, biodegraded, decomposed matter. Also referred to as "black gold" for its color and wealthy value it contains.

Compost is the secret and the most important aspect of organic gardening and farming. The farmers know it is essential to add this well-balanced compost to farm beds and garden plots before planting. It serves as a healthy fertilizer for the seeds, seedlings, perennials and any planting that comes in future growing.

At the farm, and at some elementary schools, I like to find local sources to add to compost piles and bins, which can be done, even if a school is not boarding horses or raising chickens. The two horses at Holly Hill Farm daily provide a great deal of manure and shavings which carry the main ingredients: carbon and nitrogen, that respectively mix together 3:1 to balance the ratio. Thousands of microorganisms, the air, water and those hard working worms that come at the end do the work of breaking down the ingredients to create the compost. The manure is a logical, local source that helps us stay sustainable, while supporting organic practices, rather than having to go to the garden center to buy compost.

Many schools on the South Shore have compost programs, where students, parents and many kitchen and cafeteria staff carry out vegetable and fruit scraps to the round and square, animal-proof, black bins (many of which are provided at no charge from the state, if registered as a "green team school") to add to the straw and leaves for compost.

The schools taking this effort and the unsung custodians who help deal with potentially stinky five gallon buckets, are also doing a great deal to reduce the amount of trash a school daily produces. Many pounds of food (a terrific math lesson for fourth graders at South River School in Marshfield who measure the amount saved) can produce many pounds of compost, which can feed and sustain a school farm garden.

When children, and adults who venture to the piles, see the three stages of compost: (1) to add ingredients; (2) the sitting pile and (3) the finished compost, they are surprised and amazed. Nature helps a great deal, as does turning and mixing, but it is the effort that matters. Compost will happen, but needs the kindness of a community committed to collecting, turning and mixing.

The next article will hone in on some local businesses and schools sourcing and making some wonderful compost.

FOR THE RECORD

Summer fun has just begun

Summer vacations have been one of our more popular reader callouts since we started the feature. Last year, we received a wide variety of pictures, including all kinds of pictures from families enjoying the beautiful beaches in the area.

GREGORY MATHIS

Judging from the traffic backed up traveling east and west along the Mass Pike Sunday evening, as well as the slow-moving line of cars traveling off Cape along routes 495 and 3, vacation season is most certainly in full swing.

The weekend congestion comes as no surprise following the Fourth of July holiday week/weekend, especially in southeastern Massachusetts with numerous hot spots on the South Shore and Cape Cod being popular vacation destinations.

So as you arrive home from your latest excursion and start downloading all those wonderful memories, don't forget to share those family vacation photos with us.

And if you're still planning your summer getaway, whether on Cape Cod or another New England location, or jetting off to a tropical destination, keep your camera handy and share your photos.

Even if you're not planning to go far and it's more of a "stay-cation" featuring a backyard barbecue, pool party or day trip to the beach, we'd still like to see how you're celebrating the summer with family and friends.

Summer vacations have been one of our more popular reader callouts since we started the feature. Last year, we received a wide variety of pictures, including all kinds of pictures from families enjoying the beautiful beaches in the area. From sandcastle contests, to kids being buried up to their neck in sand, to surfing off of Nantasket Beach, many families chose to be near the water during their time off.

One of the more unique photos we saw last summer was a picture snapped by a local resident of Will and Kate, Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, visiting Prince Edward Island, Canada on July 4, 2011. There was also ziplining and rock climbing at Loon Mountain in New Hampshire, as well as numerous shots of families enjoying a ballgame at Fenway Park.

So let's see what you're up to this summer.

There are a number of ways to send us your summer vacation photos. Log on to your Wicked Local website and look for the link seeking summer vacation photos. There will either be an email to send the photo or a link to upload the photo. If you can't find it or run into difficulty, you can always email the photo and caption to me at gmathis@wickedlocal.com and I will pass it on to the right person.

The caption is important. In order for us to print the photos in your weekly newspaper and post them on your Wicked Local website, we need your name and/or the name of the person who took the photograph, as well as the first and last names of the people in the photo (left to right is preferable), where the photo was taken and any other important details about the photo and what town you live in. It's also helpful if you can provide an email address in the event we need to reach you to clarify any information or obtain additional information.

If you take care of that, we'll take care of the rest.

We'll take your submissions right through Labor Day weekend, so snap to it and show us how you're spending your summer.

HAPPENING

Senior Center Tour

Cohasset Elder Affairs and the Social Service League of Cohasset are inviting Cohasset's seniors to take a tour of the Marshfield Senior Center and attend a FREE post-tour lunch at PJ's Country House on July 18.

Vans will leave 3 North Main Street at 10 a.m. Transportation and lunch are being provided by the Social Service League. Space is limited, so people are being asked to RSVP with Liza Salerno at Cohasset Elder Affairs (781-383-9112).

HEDLUND

Bottle Bill update is overdue

Unfortunately, the committee voted to "study" all bottle bill legislation, marking the 14th year in a row that an expanded bottle bill has been proposed without being voted on by the full Legislature.

BOB HEDLUND

My efforts to improve recycling and reduce litter in the Commonwealth recently suffered a setback when the Joint Committee on Telecommunications, Utilities and Energy refused to release my legislation, Senate Bill 1650, An Act Updating the Bottle Bill, and other similar bills, so that these bills could at least receive a vote by the full Legislature.

Senate Bill 1650 would update the current bottle bill to place a 5-cent refundable deposit on non-carbonated beverage containers (water, teas and sports drinks). Unfortunately, the committee voted to "study" all bottle bill legislation, marking the 14th year in a row that an expanded bottle bill has been proposed without being voted on by the full Legislature.

The only vote either branch has taken on this issue in the last 14 years was during debate on the Senate budget, when I offered an amendment that would call for an immediate expansion of the bottle bill. While my amendment had the support of several Senators, leadership ultimately prevented a vote on the matter. Instead, my amendment was replaced with an amendment that directed the state to "study" this issue, despite the fact that we have already had over 14 years to study the potential impacts since an expanded bottle bill was first proposed. This ruse, perpetrated by Senate leadership, stifled debate on the issue and robbed the Senate of the chance to take an up-or-down vote on the legislation for the first time.

The term "bottle bill" is actually another way of saying "container deposit law." The current Massachusetts container deposit law (M.G.L. c. 94) requires a minimum refundable deposit of 5 cents on beer, soft drink and other beverage containers in order to insure a high rate of recycling or reuse. The current bottle bill got off to a rocky start and only became law after the Legislature put together a successful override of the Gov. Edward King's veto in 1981. Before being enacted the bill also had to survive a repeal referendum effort launched by the governor in 1982. Luckily, the referendum fell short and the bottle bill was finally enacted after a 60 percent to 40 percent vote.

Since 1982 the bottle bill has not been updated, despite the influx of new beverages to the market. Sales of water and water-based energy drinks currently make up the fastest growing segment of the beverage industry. Unfortunately, the current container deposit law does not reflect the changes that the beverage industry has undergone in the 28 years since the law was first enacted. In fact, waters, teas and fruit juices that were not widely sold in 1982 now constitute over 35 percent of the covered beverage market.

Opponents of expanding the current bottle bill usually cite the following reasons for opposing the legislation:

- "The Bottle Bill is a Tax on Consumers." I have not supported a tax increase during my time on Beacon Hill and do not plan to start now. The bottle bill is not a tax because the deposits are 100 percent refundable and therefore the additional 5-cent fee is completely avoidable. Additionally, the Citizens for Limited Taxation's Barbara Anderson has gone on the record as saying that this is a voluntary transaction and "not a tax."
- "The Bottle Bill Harms Curbside Recycling." Curbside recycling and the bottle bill are not mutually exclusive, in fact, they complement one another. Despite the availability of curbside recycling, less than one-third of containers not covered by the bottle bill are recycled each year, compared with a 70 percent recycle rate for containers covered by the law. Putting deposits on waters, tea, and other drink containers would not only triple the rate at which these containers are recycled, it would also save municipalities millions in trash costs and help curbside recycling programs by removing low value plastic containers from their recycling streams.
- "Containers Brought in From Out of State Will Cost Bottlers Millions." Attempting to redeem containers in Massachusetts that were bought out of state is considered fraud, and is punishable by a civil penalty of $100 per container. Manufacturers such as Coca-Cola have begun using different bar codes in bottle bill states, a low cost method that virtually eliminates fraud. Furthermore, Maine expanded its bottle bill to include non-carbonated beverages in 1990 and currently suffers the same amount of fraud as Massachusetts.
- "Beverage Industry Jobs Will Be Cut." Currently the beverage industry pays 2.25 cents per container to have their containers recycled. That handling fee has remained the same for over 20 years, even though the price of a bottle of Coca-Cola has increased by 200 percent during that period. The current proposal includes a provision that would increase the handling fee to 3 cents per container, an increase that the beverage industry can easily afford and one that employees of redemption centers cannot live without.

Now is the time to pass a long overdue update of our current bottle bill. The millions of empty water, tea and sports drink bottles that now line our beaches, roadside and ball fields should instead be recycled and pressure taken off of our limited landfills. Unfortunately, time is running out on this legislative session and if the bill is not passed by July 31, then it will have to be filed again during the next legislative session.

The bottom line is that big business is calling the shots on this one at the expense of common sense and the environment. Despite recent setbacks, I plan to continue my advocacy of this important legislation, and urge you to as well. If the bill does not pass this year then I will re-file it next year, and every year thereafter.

State Senator Robert Hedlund represents the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Cohasset.

POND

and will "eventually get to the cause of the algae growth and try to mitigate that."

In the meantime, has Cohasset's pond gone from icon to eyesore?

History and renovations

According to town historical documents, Cohasset has had a pond even longer than it's had a town common. And the common, which used to be called "the plain," has been around since before Cohasset was even a town, but was part of Hingham. The town's first meetinghouse was built in 1714; the second, now known as First Parish Meetinghouse, erected in 1747; Cohasset became a town separate from Hingham in 1770.

The pond became a fixture of the common, and was improved upon in the early 1900s — walkways and a concrete wall were added circa 1903, and a chain link fence was later implemented to keep critters off the common.

The pond, affectionately nicknamed the "Common Pond," "Duck Pond" and "Frog Pond, remained relatively unchanged for years, until the DPW rebuilt it in the 1980s. In the fall of 2009, Beechwood Street resident Merle Brown came forward as a private citizen to seek Community Preservation funds to restore the pond; he returned three times over the next two years to seek funding.

The 2010 annual town meeting approved $250,000 of Community Preservation funds for the restoration project. The pond was given a facelift featuring a wider sidewalk with handicap accessibility, replacing the old disheveled concrete stairs. A new clay bottom was added. The renovation also created a system where water can be recirculated through the fountain; previously, the pond was fed almost continuously with domestic water. More controls were incorporated to limit the waste of water.

There was talk before the project got underway of replacing the natural clay bottom with a concrete one, but in 2009, the selectmen voted for clay. The estimated cost for a clay bottom was $230,000, while a concrete one would have cost $310,000.

Former town engineer/assistant to the town manager Tom Gruber said at the time that it was always going to be a clay bottom, because that's what the pond has always had: "Clay is impervious to water."

What stayed the same? Engineer John Cavanaro, who was hired to work on the pond restoration, said that everything inside the pond remained the same, including the rock fountain. A bronze plaque on a native pudding rock was placed near the pond to commemorate citizen and community preservation support of the project. A ribbon-cutting ceremony was held in the spring of 2011 to unveil the restored pond.

The project took a few years to finish, but Cavanaro said that as of this year, the restoration is officially complete.

"It really just recently finished," Cavanaro said this week in a phone call. "It sort of went through a long period of reconstruction, but it went through its final checklist and officially went online in the spring of this year."

Two issues

There is some debate among residents on the severity of the leaking and algae issues, and whether they've ever been so bad. The town manager said that these are the two main issues that are plaguing the pond.

"We will eventually get to the cause of the algae growth and try to mitigate that," Milanoski said.

The town had the pond's surface skimmed in time for the annual South Shore Arts Festival last month, but just a few weeks later, it was covered again.

"Algae like that, you don't get in a swimming pool if you cover it up and don't chlorinate it for a year," said Bonetti. "We've never had this problem before."

Bonetti said that he spoke with Milanoski about having the water's pH tested, and plans to contact the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR).

Brown agreed that CSCR is the way to go.

CSCR president Jack Buckley and his crew "will do a pretty good job of it," said Brown.

Bonetti, who was not on the CPC when the restoration project was approved, said that he'd like to see if his committee could help, whether the CPC could donate additional funds to fix the problem, perhaps by adding a bigger filtering pump. Bonetti believes concrete leaching into the water could have caused the excessive algae.

The Mariner spoke with resident and engineer Robert Hoyler, who has tested concrete on job sites. Hoyler said that it's possible lime from the concrete could leach into the water and affect its acidity or alkalinity, but he's unsure as to whether that would produce more algae or not.

"It's true that after you pour new concrete, some basic things do leach out of there," said Hoyler. "There are only so many things that have been added to that pond during reconstruction... the clay bottom, which was inert, and concrete. Concrete would increase the alkalinity of the water."

The levels could be determined by a basic test strip, like what's used in a pool, said Hoyler.

"It's entirely possible [the algae] is coming from the concrete," the engineer concluded. "But it would take a lot of testing to find out."

Cavanaro, who worked on the pond, said that he's "not sure" what can be done about the algae, or if there's ever been this much of it before. "I don't know what historically existed, as far as the algae goes."

But what about the leaking?

"Significant evaporation happens with the pond," said Milanoski. "With the clay material, historically there has been some leakage, and there always will be."

Brown said he doesn't think the pond is leaking.

"If the pond was leaking, it would be empty now," said Brown. "The water in the pond is what's there. No water has been added; we haven't had any rain. Everything that's in there is what was put in two to three weeks ago."

"There's water in it right now," Cavanaro said of the pond. "It's always been a natural bottom pond; that's what the town desired and what was left."

Brown explained that in the past, the pond did leak, but that was before a new wall was built. Any water lost from the pond, said Brown, is due to evaporation: "We've had a lot of sun."

The pump installed during the renovation helps keep the pond full. "When the water level gets too low because of evaporation or leakage, town water will come back in and put up the level to keep pumping water," Brown explained.

The pond is using town water, which is why a meter was added to measure the water consumption (see sidebar).

The town has to decide whether to continue paying for potable water from the water department, or to install a well to keep the pond full, said Milanoski, adding that's he had multiple meetings with DPW supervisor Carl Sestito, "exploring and testing multiple options," to determine what to do about the pond.

Between the town manager to board members, local engineers and everyday passers-by, it stands to reason that someone in Cohasset will get to the bottom of whatever is plaguing the pond.

"It's an important part of Cohasset," Milanoski said of the pond. "We want to understand why this is occurring."

Meetinghouse Pond: A timeline

The Common Pond, in early days called the Frog Pond, is a natural feature, having been a small glacial punchbowl. During parts of the nineteenth century, the Common was fenced in to keep out wandering animals, but ducks and geese seem to have inhabited the Frog Pond since the earliest days, as the ducks still see fit to do. – "An Old New England Village Green" by David Wadsworth 1600s: "Quonahassit" is a section of Hingham; what is now the town common was called "the plain"; the pond exists as a natural pool.

1700s: The first meetinghouse is built; the second, now First Parish Meetinghouse, is later erected; Cohasset becomes a town

1903: The common's pond gains a walkway and concrete wall

1930s: A chain link fence is added to keep critters off the common

1980s: DPW rebuilds the pond

2009: Citizen Merle Brown campaigns for a pond restoration project; engineer hired for $10,000 to prepare bid documents for future project, proponents planned to come back at Annual Town Meeting for full amount. $210,000; motion passed with majority vote

2010: October: Selectmen vote in favor of $250,000 in Community Preservation funds to restore the pond; December: Project near completion; report said that "cold temperatures prevented the contractor from achieving the necessary compaction of the clay in the pond."

2011: February: Water Commission chair Peter DeCaprio said Cohasset Water pumped through the pond fountain for years at rate of 1.5 million gallons per month; a meter has since been placed there to monitor the gallons used; April: Pond was dedicated during a ribbon-cutting ceremony; June: The fountain flowed during Arts Festival; July: Project engineer John Cavanaro said pond needed to be drained to recompact the clay to ensure it reached ideal permeability level; Selectmen approved draining at July 12 meeting; August: DeCaprio alerted town manager Coughlin that pond has been leaking and the water bill is $60,000; Coughlin said the town will pay the bill. October: Bill remained unpaid. November: Water billing discussed at several selectmen meetings.

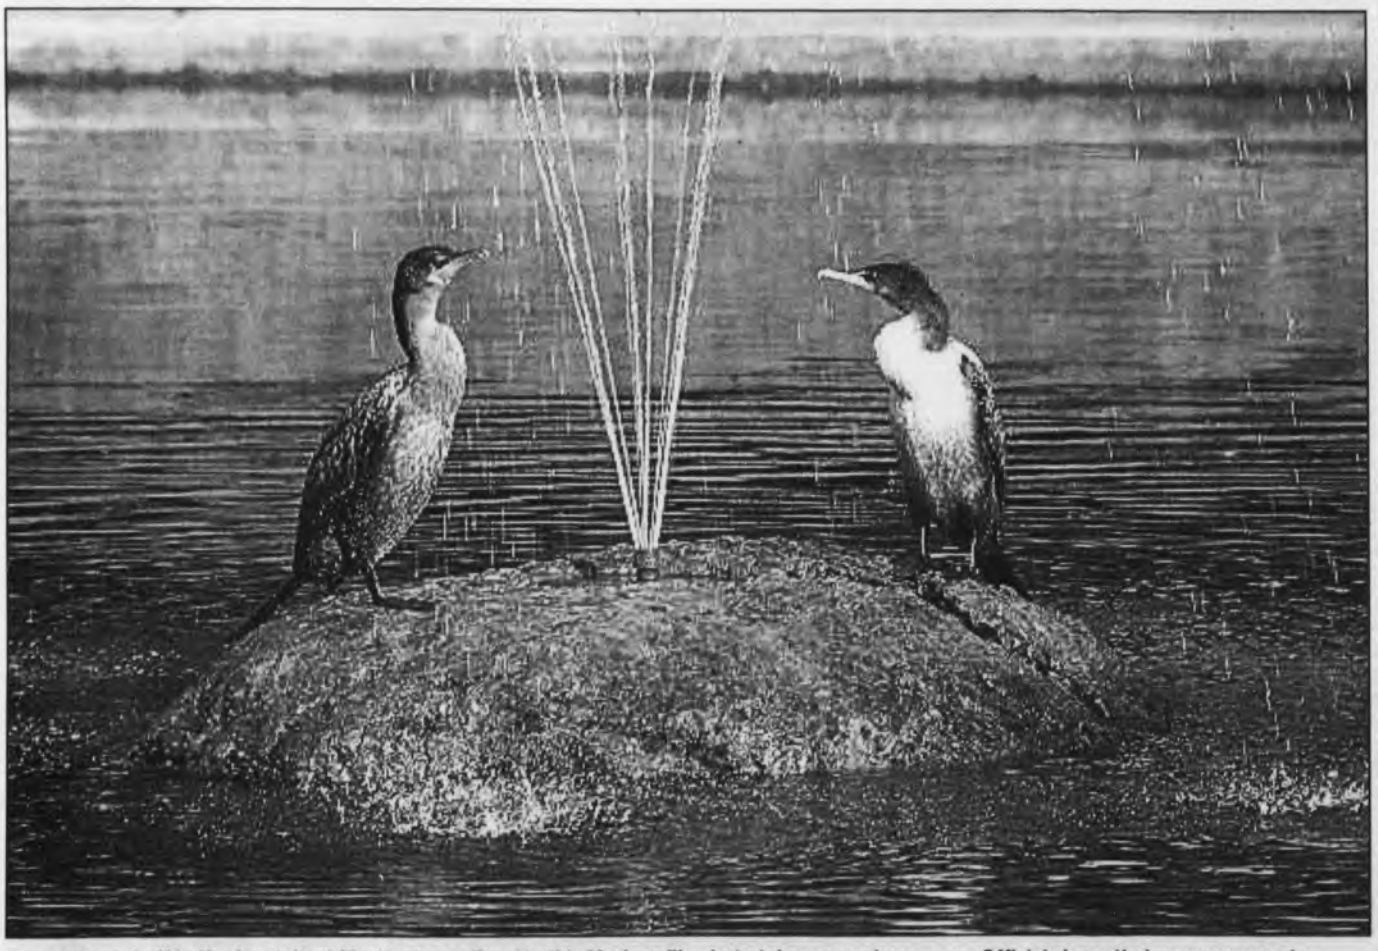
2012: June: Algae-filled pond cleaned in time for Arts Festival; July: Pond still leaking, and is once again covered in algae.

Water meter

When a meter was added to the pond during the restoration project, it revealed the pond was using around $60,000 worth of water, according to water commission chair Peter DeCaprio. When the water department noticed the amount of water being wasted, they turned off the water and notified town hall.

DeCaprio emailed former town manger Michael Coughlin, who started his position in Cohasset on August 1, 2011. DeCaprio let Coughlin know that the town owed the water department $60,000. Coughlin responded on Aug. 3, "There are sufficient monies remaining in the project account to promptly remit to the Water Company the amount necessary to refill Meeting House pond."

As of October, the water department still had not been paid the outstanding bill. DeCaprio emailed Coughlin on Oct. 21 asking how the department should go about getting paid. Coughlin's response, sent the following day, was that according to the state's Department of Revenue (DOR), "municipal departments can not charge or bill another municipal department for water." Coughlin added that this would be reflected in the fiscal year 2013 budget, but the water bills would get paid for fiscal year 2012.



This became a point of contention between the then-town manager, who was removed without cause by the selectmen in March 2012 after roughly six months on the job, and the water commission. Water billing became a heated topic at several public meetings starting in November.

The matter of filling Meetinghouse Pond, said DeCaprio, was "one of the things that precipitated our dispute with Mr. Coughlin. [The pond] was leaking like a sieve. We said we'd do [town hall] a favor and shut the water off, but you've used a ton of water and need to pay the bill... We turned the water back on and the bill never got paid."

The former town manager "was adopting the stance, under Mass. law, a municipal organization cannot bill other town departments for water, which is untrue," said DeCaprio. "We have the ability and right to bill anybody in town, town agency or not."

Some residents say the town never paid the water bill for the town before because there was no meter on the pond's water pump. The matter of which town departments have to pay for water consumption is still a matter of discussion. DeCaprio said the water commission plans to discuss "all outstanding receivables from the town of Cohasset" with acting town manager Milanoski.

"We're working through those issues, as well as many other issues," Milanoski said.

Osgood gets interim principal

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Osgood will soon have an interim principal. Following former principal Sharon Bellao's sudden departure in May after less than a year on the job, Supt. of Schools Barbara Cataldo initiated the search for a replacement.

Osgood's new hire is new to the role of principal here, but not new to Cohasset or Joseph Osgood School.

Bob LeCount, former Adjustment Counselor for Osgood, returns to Cohasset to take the helm as interim principal for the 2012-2013 school year. LeCount is expected to start his new position on July 30.

LeCount spent 11 years working in Cohasset before he left in 2008 to become principal at the Primavera Educational Center in Bellingham. He said in a phone call that he never would have left Cohasset if a principal position had been available at the time.

"I loved working in Cohasset when I was there," said LeCount. "I'm really excited to be going back and am absolutely thrilled to be in a principal's position."

Osgood's new principal said that his hour-long commute from Franklin isn't a deterrent, and never was for the decade-plus he worked in Cohasset.

"I drive an hour on a good day, but I never minded because I'd end up in Cohasset," LeCount said. "It's a nice community, with good people to associate with."

"He's coming home," said Cataldo of LeCount's return. "We know everybody is very excited about him coming back. The school committee has been notified, he has signed a contract, and we expect him onboard by July 30."

LeCount most recently returned to Cohasset to emcee the high school's prom night. He was asked to do the honor by a friend whose daughter was graduating this year. LeCount said that he was happy to come back to town for the event.

Bob LeCount

"I got to see all the kids I had back when they were little, all grown up and many of them graduating," he said. "It was awesome to see them."

The principal is happy to be working with Cohasset kids again. In his role as adjustment counselor, LeCount worked side by side with families and the "crises that come up," but "the fun part of the job" was working with kids.

LeCount's role involved "helping the students work together, problem solve, learn to collaborate, work as part of a team."

It sounds like he's ready to rejoin the team at Osgood School.

Solar plans presented

Alt. Energy Committee meets with selectmen

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Alternative Energy Committee met with the Board of Selectmen Tuesday to present what the committee has been working on for the past six months and what they hope to accomplish in the near future when it comes to bringing solar power to Cohasset. The AEC has been working alongside the School Committee to seek installing solar panels on the school roof and on the town-owned capped landfill at 81-91 Cedar Street.

The AEC hopes that solar energy will help the town realize cost savings on energy. There are also state and federal incentives available "to provide energy at a discounted cost," said AEC co-chair Tanya Bodell.

Both committees conducted a recent site visit to five locations around town to determine which would be feasible for solar arrays. Solar power vendors that came along on the visit pronounced both the roof and the landfill as viable locations.

Two weeks ago, AEC members visited the National Grid solar array on I-93 to get an idea of what a similar setup would be like in Cohasset. National Grid has a 1.2 megawatt array, which is around the same size the AEC hopes to install in Cohasset between the landfill and school roof.

During the selectmen's meeting, the AEC requested to hire special counsel to assist them with drafting a request for proposals (RFP) for solar power vendors. The selectmen voted 4-1 to approve the request.

Members of the Capital Budget and Advisory committees were in the audience and had questions about the proposed project's costs. Jack Keniley, who sits on both committees, said that they were inclined to support the project, but had yet to see any numbers.

Most of the costs are unknown since the AEC has yet to go out to bid for a contractor. The only known cost, so far, is the amount that will be paid to special counsel: a fixed rate of $21,000.

The committee is hiring Mark Halpin of the firm Wilmer Hale, who has extensive experience in the energy field.

Patrick Kennedy, a resident and lawyer who was recently appointed as an associate member to the Conservation Commission, was in the audience Tuesday, and told the AEC that if they could get a partner from Wilmer Hale for that amount of money, they were getting a good deal.

One of the major costs could be renovations to the school roof in order for it to hold a solar array. The roof is 10 years into its 20-year life, and would require some upgrades. Bodell said that the cost could either be borne by the town or rolled into the contract with the solar vendor.

So far, the AEC has made a list of 20 potential solar vendors to solicit for bids, Bodell said.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

BUDGET UPDATE

Town Manager changes legal bill policy

The way legal requests are handled in Town Hall is changing slightly. Effective immediately, any and all legal requests for Town Counsel services will be authorized by the Town Manager's office in an effort to control rising legal costs.

"As you are aware, this past fiscal year our $200,000 legal budget was expended by January," Milanoski wrote in a memo to town employees and elected and appointed officials.

This includes phone calls and emails to Town Counsel, said Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby commented on the procedural change during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting, noting that this is how things were historically done in Town Hall and should have been done all along.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson noted that the practice "slipped away" during the change in town managers over the years.

Now, Milanoski encourages town department heads to try to use the free legal services provided by the state before tapping into Town Counsel.

AT FARMERS' MARKET

Food pantry seeks donations, volunteers

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

If you've been visiting the farmers' market on the town common over the past few Thursdays, then you've noticed that the Cohasset Food Pantry has a table there each week.

New to the farmers' market this year, the food pantry has a donation box for cash donations and large baskets for food items. Next time you shop the market for summer produce and treats, stop by the food pantry's table with a donation.

The pantry is asking for specific items each week, which will be posted in the Mariner print and online editions.

This week, the pantry would like folks to bring:

- White tuna in water
- Ketchup
- Mustard
- Relish
- Mayonnaise

Fresh fruit and other produce from local gardeners are also appreciated. This summer, the pantry has enjoyed donations from some faithful gardeners who have donated lettuce, kale, Swiss chard, arugula, spinach, zucchini, scallions and radishes.

"Clients are thrilled to offer fresh foods to their families," said Food Pantry director Jane Corry. "Last weekend, we received wonderful donations from the drive held at Stop & Shop by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee. It was fantastic!"

Corry also reported that last Saturday, "the terrific kids in the Fair Oaks Lane neighborhood collected many bags of needed items for us. Cohasset kids really can make a difference in the lives of others. The Food Pantry appreciates all the efforts of the community to help our families in need."

Volunteer Cheryl Whetstone has been overseeing the pantry's table at the farmers' market, with many sixth grade volunteers working at the table in two-hour shifts, from 2 to 4 p.m. and from 4 to 6 p.m.

But the pantry still has a few openings to fill and seeks additional volunteers. There is a volunteer sign up sheet on the food pantry table every Thursday at the market. You can also reach the pantry by email – corryjm@gmail.com – or leave a message on the food pantry line at St. Anthony's: 781-383-0219 ext. 25.

The Cohasset Food Pantry is located at 129 South Main St., in the rear of St. Anthony's rectory. The pantry's mailing address is: P.O. Box 297 Cohasset, MA 02025

The pantry is open every Tuesday morning from 8:30 to 10:30. Donations may be left at the pantry from 9 to 10:30, any Tuesday. They may also be left at any Church in Cohasset on Sunday mornings.

St. Anthony's Parish Center is open to receive donations from 9 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. Monetary donations may be made out to the Cohasset Food Pantry and mailed to the P.O. Box. Stop & Shop and Shaw's supermarkets provide donation boxes for the Cohasset food pantry.

The Cohasset Food Pantry serves any resident in need. Anyone seeking assistance may call and speak to a director. Applications must be completed and two forms of identification, a license and proof of residency are required.

NEWS UPDATE

Chief's lawyer given list of allegations

The attorney for Police Chief Mark DeLuca, who is currently under suspension with pay, was recently given a list of allegations made against the chief by the town's police union.

DeLuca was placed on paid administrative leave on Friday, May 25, following union allegations reported by the town manager.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski wrote in a letter to DeLuca dated May 29 that these allegations include, but are not limited to: "Using your position as police chief to secure benefits for which you and others were not entitled to; Forging important documents; Physical abuse; Abusing your authority during an internal affairs investigation."

DeLuca's lawyer, Edward McNeeley said in a phone interview on June 27 that he had yet to receive a list of the allegations against his client. Town Counsel Peter Berry told the Mariner that DeLuca and his lawyer would be notified once the investigation is complete, if the allegations "have any merit." Berry added that under the chief's contract, he has a right to a full hearing before any decisions are made.

During Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting, Milanoski announced the Town Counsel contacted McNeeley on June 28 and shared 11 allegations reported by the union against the chief.

FIELD HOCKEY

Clinic in Cohasset

There will be a Summer Field Hockey Clinic coached by Cohasset's Sage Stebbins and Camryn Caron at the Cohasset High School Turf Field.

There will be a clinic for Beginners: Monday July 16-Thursday July 19 (9am-11am), and Intermediate/Advanced players: Monday July 23-Thursday July 26 (9am-11am)

The cost is $60 per child.

Register by Sunday, July 15, by emailing sm07steb@siena.edu or camryn.caron@gmail.com

FIELD HOCKEY

Coaches needed

The Cohasset Field Hockey club is still looking for coaches. Anyone interested who has played field hockey and is interested in coaching a middle school team Sept. 1- through Nov. 1, we need you.

Coaches practice twice per week and coach games. This is a paid position. Please contact Beth Marsden Gilman at 781-383-1811 for more information.

BAY STATE GAMES

Goetz plays baseball

Cohasset's Connor Goetz has been busy with the Southeast team in the Bay State games.

In a 9-3 loss to the Northeast, Goetz, who was used as a backup catcher in the game, had a two-run single that brought Southeast within a run in the sixth inning. In a 4-1 win over Coastal, Goetz pitched well in relief.

YOUTH SOFTBALL

U14 Girls return to Freedom Field

The CYBSA is fielding a U14 softball team in the competitive South Shore Summer Softball League this summer.

This is a local travel team that plays against teams from all over the South Shore. The girls are led by the dedicated coaching team of Amy Brash, Jill Lawlor, Lee Stone, Tony Talacci and Peter Vitello.

Come out and watch the girls at Freedom Field in their home games, Thursday, July 19 and Tuesday, July 24.

Pan-Mass Challenge

The 33rd annual Pan Mass Challenge is set for Aug. 4 and 5. To register, and for more information about the PMC, which is presented by the Boston Red Sox Foundation and New Balance, visit www.pmc.org. The PMC is the most successful athletic fundraising event in the nation; it raises and contributes more money to charity than any other. Last August, cyclists from eight countries and 37 states rode one of 11 routes that ranged from 25 to 190 miles. Riders included seven-time Tour de France winner Lance Armstrong, Massachusetts Senators John Kerry and Scott Brown, 350 cancer survivors, and avid cyclists and weekend warriors alike. Many rode in support of loved ones being treated for cancer or in memory of those who have been lost to the disease.

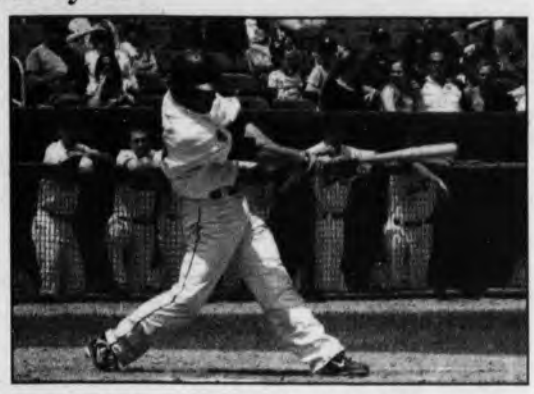
McCunney notches Rox' first-ever cycle

By Mark Ducharme
GateHouse News Service

Rob McCunney will be the answer to a trivia question in the years to come.

The sophomore to be at Fordham did something that no Brockton Rox player in their 10 years of Independent League Baseball or Futures Collegiate Baseball player had done before.



On June 27, McCunney became the first player in league history to hit for the cycle in a 19-0 win over the Wachusett Dirt Dawgs. He went 5-for-5 in the game, scored five runs and drove in three.

"I was not really thinking about it," said McCunney. "I was trying to hit the ball hard my last time up and got a triple (to get the cycle). You need to have luck on your side when things like this happen."

In general, McCunney had a tremendous week for the Rox, going 10-for-21 (.476) with eight runs scored and eight RBIs. His five hits June 27 set the FCBL record for the most hits in a single game.

McCunney finished the week with a spectacular

Junior Little League advance to District Final

The Cohasset 13/14 All-Stars notched back-to-back walkoff wins to advance to the District Final at Rockland Stadium against undefeated Quincy last night.

Cohasset's 13/14 yr old Junior Little League All Star team authored back-to-back pulsating walk off wins last weekend to advance to the District Final on Thursday night at Rockland Stadium. Cohasset's squad, down to 10 players due to injuries (missing Tim Chase and Owen Burchill), and with more than half the team as 13 year-olds, finished pool play with a 4-1 record, besting several teams that fielded squads comprised of only 14 yr olds. The All Stars, several of whom played on the 12 year-old District Semi-Finalist squad of last summer, rolled into the District Championship game on the strength of two incredible wins over the weekend.

Cohasset began the round robin tourney with a 12-8 win over a tough Whitman squad, led by a two home run game by Luke Carlyle, a grand slam by Michael Cohen, the combined pitching efforts of Jake Burchill, Joe Cavanaro, Luke Carlyle, Alexander Schubert, Liam O'Connell and Evan Canney, and a terrific one-hand running catch by Will Broderick. After dropping to 1-1 with a loss to a tough Quincy squad, despite Joe Cavanaro's strong pitching effort, the Boys in Blue bounced back with an explosive 18-0 shutout of Rockland.

Summer with friends

Cavanaro and friends star for Rox

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Services

They have been together on the same team for over a decade and they have another summer together.

Jeff Cavanaro, Brendan Doonan, Rob McCunney and Jordan Berry have played together since they were in Little League through American Legion Baseball.

They have had some time away because of college, but the four are to playing together again on the same team in the second year of the Futures Collegiate Baseball League with the Brockton Rox.

Cavanaro, who concluded a great career at Cohasset High, which included tow Div. 4 State titles is thrilled to be back with his friends after a quiet freshman year UMass.

"My first year at UMass," said Cavanaro. "It was kind of a rebuilding year for me. I am excited, because I am hoping to get some at bats and I will play with buddies. We have played together since we were eight. It was kind of a goal to play on the same team. We were lucky to make it happen."

"It is a great experience," said Berry. "I am playing at a great facility and I am playing with some of my childhood friends.

"I am playing Brendan (Doonan), Jeff (Cavanaro) and Robbie (McCunney). We have been playing together since we were eight. I can remember when we were 9-years old and won the Friendship League in Braintree. Here we are again playing and we have something that a lot of the players in this league.We have played together for nearly 12 years."

A great athlete at Cohasset as besides being part of the two Div. 4 State baseball titles, Cavanaro also set the school record for passing yardage in leading them to the playoffs as the South Shore League champion.

Cavanaro found out earlier this year that he was going to be a member of the Rox. He likes that he is playing under a former triple-A player Jud Thigpen who also played for the Rox when they were in the Can-Am League and set

KNOCK ON WOOD

Hope's no dope

RYAN WOOD

The U.S. Women's National Soccer team headed out to London Tuesday morning, embarking on a trip that it hopes will result in bringing home the team's third straight gold medal. Is the team the best in this year's Olympics? It's yet to be determined; we'll know if they make it to and win the final. The players face some of the toughest challenges and will look for revenge against Japan, the team that knocked them out of the 2011 FIFA Women's World Cup, if the two teams meet at some point during the second round.

But as with most international tournaments, particularly the Olympics, comes controversy, some of which comes during the tournaments. The North Koreans said the reason they failed in the World Cup was because some of their best players got struck by lightning during training and then took a supplement (a banned substance) to help them recover from the "lightning strike." The team didn't think the supplement was illegal. Well, a team that claims lightning struck the players, I'm not surprised they believe the supplement was legal.

Speaking of supplements and banned substances, news broke Monday about U.S. Women's National Team goalkeeper Hope Solo testing positive for a drug that was on the banned substance list for the Olympics. The substance found in Solo's sample, Canrenone, which is in Solo's pre-menstrual medication, is banned, unbeknownst to her. The U.S. Anti-Doping Agency is-

Take a look at the list of banned substances; it runs about 1,000 deep. I certainly won't ever win an Olympic medal. I'm barely fit to sit on the couch and watch the Games.

TALKIN' GOLF

Quiz: Are you a South Shore golfer?

PAUL HARBER

The best golfers are from the South Shore. Period.

If you don't think so, just look at a recent list of State Amateur champions.

Since 2006 when Norwell's Ben Spitz won the title, all but one champion was not from this golf-happy region south of Boston.

And there is a good chance that another South Shore golfer will leave Tedesco Country Club in Marblehead come Friday afternoon with the championship trophy, be it defending champion Ryan Riley, two-time winner John Hadges or 2010 winner Bill Drohen, all of whom, incidentally, live in Easton.

Any of the three dozen South Shore golfers in the field can win.

Why is the area such a hotbed?

Probably because there are so many golf courses. Furthermore, its close access to Cape Cod, where you can play golf just about every month of the year.

How do you know you are a South Shore golfer?

You are if you . . .

Traveled over the Sagamore or Bourne bridges at least once for a golf game.

Made a purchase at Joe and Leigh's pro shop at Pine Oaks in Easton.

Hit a bucket of balls at Starland in Hanover.

Know what Buncey's is and played there.

Lost a ball at Widow's Walk in Scituate.

Played in a charity tournament at Easton CC.

Brought your kids to play at MGA Links at Mamantapett in Norton.

Had a shrimp cocktail and watched golfers play the ninth hole at Granite Links.

Understand the passion of the game the way the late Frank Simoni did. He soothed his passion by building Brookmeadow CC in Canton.

Played nine holes at Cedar Hill in Stoughton with a six pack in your bag.

Over hit the par-3 fifth hole at D.W. Field in Brockton and cringe as the ball heads toward Oak Street.

Drove the seventh green at Ridder Farms GC in Whitman.

Took advantage of the Monday Madness at Pembroke CC, where you can play all day with a cart for a moderate green fee.

Savored the beauty of Atlantic Country Club in Plymouth, one of the most underrated tracks in New England and one of the best bargains.

Understand that length does not always mean a great golf course. You can have just as much fun teeing it up at an executive size course, especially Souther's Marsh in Plymouth, than any regulation size course. The challenge is always there.

Tried to hit the par-5 15th green at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy only to see your approach shot splash just in front of the green.

You are a South Shore golfer if you know that Fernie is Furnace Brook, the nine-holer in Quincy.

Notes and quotes from around the region

The Life of Riley

One year ago, Ryan Riley of Easton rode a hot putter all week long at Wyantenuck Country Club and reaped the rewards by winning the 2012 Massachusetts Amateur Championship over Frank Vana, Jr., of Marlborough CC.

Three-hundred-sixty-six days later Riley is back and ready for the challenge of being known around the putting green as simply "the defending champion".

"I don't think there will be any added pressure heading into the event because I have nothing to lose," said Riley told MGA officials. "I broke through with a win last year.

And what a win it was. Over the course of five days in Great Barrington, Riley put on a display of memorable golf. A 10th seed following the stroke play portion of the event, Riley methodically made his way through the bottom half of the match play bracket. He defeated formidable foes in Brenden Beeg (Vineyard GC), two-time and defending champion John Hadges (Thorny Lea GC), Dan White (Vesper CC) and then Antonio Grillo (Farm Neck GC) in the semifinals. By Friday morning, he had earned a chance to take on Vana, the two-time winner of this event (in 2004 and 2005).

Thanks to a slow start by Vana and magical putting from start to finish, Riley gained a 6 up advantage through 10 holes and never looked back. It marked his fifth career MGA Championship as he had previously won three Massachusetts Four-Ball Championships (2009, 2010, 2011) and one Massachusetts Amateur Public Links Championship (2009).

"I am really looking forward to defending my title at Tedesco," said Riley, who turned 31 years old on July 2. "The Mass Am is always the highlight of my summer schedule, and I am excited about the opportunity to try and make it back to match play."

While he is known for his skill on the putting green, Riley also has a tendency to change his putter more often than he can remember. Through the years, Riley has tried everything from a short putter with a claw grip, a belly putter with a claw grip, a short putter with a traditional grip, and a short putter with a cross-handed grip.

Which putter will show up in Marblehead will once again be a major question for Riley.

"My game has been solid tee to green, but I am struggling to find the putting stroke I had last year at Wyantenuck," said Riley. "I have switched putters a few times this year, and I am not sure which one I will be using yet."

Riley will begin his title pursuit on Monday at 7:57 a.m. He will be playing alongside Cape Cod's Ricky Stimets and Dedham's D.J. Hynes.

Aikens isn't MIA, he's in Utah

Herbie Aikens of Pinehills GC, who teamed with Riley to win three State Four-Ball championships, is not in the State Amateur field this week. And with good reason: Aikens (Pinehills GC) will be missing in action this week, but he has a very good reason. He is in Midway, Utah, competing at Soldier Hollow Golf Course for the 2012 U.S. Amateur Public Links Championship. One year ago, Aikens advanced to the Round of 16 at that USGA Championship Proper. He is enjoying an impressive streak where he has qualified for four straight USGA Amateur Championships Proper.

Our pick: the Darkhorse

The dark horse to win it all is a former South Shore golfer, who now calls Texas his home, Mike Calef, formerly of Bridgewater, who played out of Brockton CC and Thorny Lea GC.

Calef won the State Mid-Amateur Championship last fall at Pocasset before moving to Texas fall with his wife Alicia. Despite his change in residency, Calef has maintained close ties with Brockton Country Club where he previously served as the club's director of golf and shop operation and will be looking to collect his second MGA Championship title. He is one of 25 exempt players in this year's field.

He has been busy in Texas. He won their North Mid-Amateur Championship and finished fourth at the Texas State Amateur Championship.

Opening move for Khang

It is quite a week for Rockland High sophomore-to-be Megan Khang, who played in her first US Women's Open last weekend in Kohler, Wis. You might think shooting 75-80-155 and missing the cut means it was a lost week for the teen-ager. It wasn't. It was a steppingstone to bigger and better playing fields. This might have been her first US Women's Open, but take it to the bank – it won't be her last US Women's Open. What she gained last week at Blackwolf Run Golf Course in Kohler, Wis., was a wealth of experience, something you cannot buy; it can only be earned. She played the longest golf course women's have ever played in steamy conditions. And, for the most part, she kept it together. Khang got to meet all her LPGA idols and even had the opportunity to play a practice round with fellow teen-age phenoms Michelle Wie and Lexi Thompson. She got a first-hand look at what it takes to make it in women's professional golf. "After 18 holes everyone's still out here putting and at the range. I have to work harder," Khang told reporters after a practice round. "They definitely have more experience and they're more mature. They've been doing this for a while, and I'm just starting out, so I still get nervous." That nervousness will go way and lower scores in the premier women's tournament will improve. Before she returns to Rockland High School in the fall, her golfing education continues. She will play in the US Women's Amateur and the US Girls Amateur in the coming weeks. Next week, Khang travels to California to play in the US Junior Girls' Championship at Lake Merced Country Club in Daly City. She will also play in the US Women's Amateur at The Country Club (Ohio) in Cleveland Aug. 6-12.

Dressing up

Hey, if you are not good enough to play in the State Amateur this week, you can dress like one. The Massachusetts Golf Association provides each play a fact sheet about the dos and don'ts of their competition. Here's their edict on clothing:

"Proper golf attire consists of a shirt with a collar, and the shirt must be tucked in – mock turtlenecks are acceptable. Tank tops, collarless shirts, gym shorts, mesh shorts, cutoffs, short shorts, tennis outfits and denim jeans are prohibited. Hats or caps must be worn properly. Shorts must be Bermuda length and can be no shorter than three inches above the knee."

Tap-ins ...

Quincy's Alison Eleey, who has an 0.4 handicap out of Granite Links, made it to the US Women's Amateur Public Links Championship in Neshanic Station, N.J. She fashioned rounds of 85 and 79 and missed the cut. Eleey, a graduate of the Taft (Conn.) School, was a freshman at James Madison University and had five top-20 finishers in eight tournaments. Last year she finished fifth at the Newport National Tournament in Newport News, Va., after finishing third in the tournament the previous year. Eleey was the medalist as a freshman at Notre Dame Academy in the 2009 Mass Bay League Individual Tournament, earning All-League honors, while leading her team to the title. She shot placed third at the MIAA Girls' Individual State Tournament in 2009, earning her MIAA Player of the Year honors from The Boston Globe and Boston Herald All-Scholastic award . . . Stoughton's municipal golf course is offering free instruction for veterans. The clinics will run on Fridays from noon until 1 p.m. Dates are July 6, 13, 20 and 27, and August 3, 10, 17 and 24. Instruction will be given by Bob Beach, PGA golf professional and sponsored by Golf for All. Cedar Hill Golf Course is a 9-hole Par 33 Golf course owned and operate by the Town of Stoughton. The course is located at 1137 Park St. Jon Spitz and John Ducharme shot 74 to win the Senior Division title at the 57th annual Braintree Junior Four-ball tournament at Braintree Municipal Golf Course. Spitz and Ducharme finished two strokes ahead of Billy Kougins and Mike Mason. Jared Sullivan and Jack Griffin, both of Duxbury, won the Junior Division with a 73 . . . Tara Joy-Connelly of Cohasset GC finished fifth in the championship flight of the WGAM Edith Noblit Baker Tournament atWoods Hole GC . . . Candy Heath and Nancy Boyle of South Shore CC captured the Curtis Bowl at Gardner Municipal GC. They were first net with a 67. Maureen Connolly and Mary Abbruzzese of Braintree Municipal GC tied for third net with a 70. Jason Nuttall of Poquoy Brook GC captured second net in a Mass. LITTLE LEAGUE

On Saturday, Cohasset hosted Scituate at Beechwood Diamond. On the strength of a terrific pitching performance by Jake Burchill, Cohasset entered the seventh and last inning with a 7-4 lead. In the seventh, Scitaute rallied against Cohasset reliever Michael Cohen and with back-to-back home runs, tied the score at 7-7. Cohen hung tough however, and stranded a Scituate runner at third to get the third out.

In the bottom of the seventh, Scituate's reliever retired the first two Cohasset batters. Cohasset's Liam O'Connell then worked a walk, and Ben Rice followed suit. Michael Cohen hustled down to first on a passed ball third strike, and the stage was set for Luke Carlyle's heroics. With two outs and the bases loaded, Carlyle blasted a shot to the fence in right, and Cohasset walked off with a dramatic 8-7 win.

On Sunday, needing a win to advance to the District Final, the Boys in Blue authored another heart pounding comeback win over Hanson. This one was a see-saw affair from the get go, as the teams traded leads in the early going. Joe Cavanaro, Evan Canney and Jake Burchill each had big RBI hits for Cohasset in the early innings, but as the day grew late, Cohasset trailed by four as they entered the bottom of the sixth. In that frame, Cohasset scored four to tie the game, In the top of the seventh, Ben Rice took the hill for the Boys in Blue, and in a gritty pitching performance, escaped a bases loaded jam without giving up any runs. Cohasset's all stars batted in the bottom of the seventh needing one run for the win. Carlyle led off with a single, and after one out, Burchill followed with a walk. The next batter struck out, but with two outs, O'Connell fouled off several tough pitches before drawing a walk. Alexander Schubert then strode to the plate, and after fouling off two tough two strike pitches, took an outside fastball to the gap in left for a walk off double, and for the scond night in a row, Cohasset had authored a dramatic last inning win!

The Cohasset All Stars now move onto the District Final against undefeated Quincy, with the winner moving on to the State playoffs. Go Blue!

sued her a warning.

According to the United States Anti-Doping Agency: "Canrenone is prohibited under the USADA Protocol for Olympic and Paralympic Movement Testing and the International Federation of Association Football (FIFA) anti-doping rules, both of which have adopted the World Anti-Doping Code ("Code") and the World Anti-Doping Agency Prohibited List."

Take a look at the list of banned substances; it runs about 1,000 deep. I certainly won't ever win an Olympic medal. I'm barely fit to sit on the couch and watch the Games. One reason I'll never get to compete – I would test positive for one of the substances, no certainly not the one Solo took, and not for hard, illicit drugs or alcohol either, but for a simple medication that's on the list for reasons I couldn't explain and ones that make absolutely no sense at all. Talking to a friend who covers the Olympics for NBC, he echoed my thoughts: "I think all of us would test positive for something."

I know Hope Solo; we worked for the same company – Women's Professional Soccer (WPS). I don't know her as personally as her friends, family, and doctors, but I do know the amount of training she puts in, and it would make most people cry out in agony. The girl's intense. Before last summer's Women's World Cup, she had just come off a thorough rehab following surgery on her separated shoulder. She fought back to make the team and win silver at the World Cup.

Am I saying all athletes are clean? Absolutely not. Some will do everything they can to become the best in their sport, the best in the world. The endorsement deals they can rake in by taking home Olympic gold are staggering. They become household names. They become a brand, one that generates money by the second.

Do I think Hope Solo took this medication without knowing it was on the banned substance list? Yes, I honestly do. She's the best female goalkeeper in the world, and would challenge some of the best in the men's game, but did the drug found in her system really give her an advantage? No way. Maybe I'm naïve. Maybe she knew it would give her an ounce of an edge over other keepers, but I highly doubt it. Hope is no dope.

MCCUNNEY

.476/.522/1.000 slash line that included three doubles, a triple, two home runs, and a walk, earning him Futures Collegiate Baseball League (FCBL) Player of the Week honors.

The Rox second baseman and shortstop is having a good time playing in Brockton this summer. He is getting plenty of playing time and McCunney has the chance to play with some of his former buddies that he has played summer ball with for over a decade.

Jordan Berry, Jeff Cavanaro and Brendan Doonan are long time friends and teammates on various teams through out the years that have played with McCunney.

"It is awesome," said McCunney. "We have played together for at least 12 years. It has been three years since we have played together in Legion.

We thought that would be our last hurrah together."

"We have a real good chemistry on and off the field when we have played together. It was very good news."

Doonan was traded by Wachusett to Brockton before the season while McCunney was shifted over to Brockton just before the start of the Futures Collegiate Baseball League.

"I got on this team through my coach at Fordham," said McCunney. "When we all found that we were going to be playing in this league and be on the Brockton Rox it worked out. I was traded not as obvious as Brendan was. I kind of worked my here and there I guess."

McCunney, to get ready for the Futures Collegiate Baseball League played five games with the Brockton Dirtdogs of the Cranberry Baseball League.

He was coming off playing at Fordham in his freshman year and driving in six runs and his best game was against UMass where he went 2-for-5 with a homer.

The opportunity for McCunney to play summer ball will give him the chance top work on his skills and have fun at the same time.

"I am just trying to have fun and play as much baseball as I can," said McCunney. "I was told to relax and what better way is there to play baseball with my buddies pretty much every day. I was on the same day with Jordan and Jeff in the Cranberry League."

"It is great being close to home, because a lot of guys have to live with a host family. A lot of guys want to play baseball, but want to be close to home."

McCunney, who played on two Div. 1 State titles for BC High in his high school career feels that he is in a positive situation with the Rox.

He is playing for a former Rox player when they were in the Independent League Baseball's Can-Am League, Jud Thigpen who was the Div. 2 Player of the Year in 2004 in leading Delta State to the National Championship.

"I am in a win-win situation," said McCunney. "As long as you are playing baseball and living at home I am happy. It is a privilege to play in front of these fans We have a lot of good fans here."

"We won the National title in 2004," said Thigpen. "but I would not have got any of the individual accolades that I got if it were not for my teammates. I played for Coach (Mike) Kinnison and he is a great coach. I go by a lot of his teaching and his ways. Hopefully, I can pass on some of my knowledge to these guys."

McCunney is having a good time playing baseball close to home.

the team record for RBI. Thigpen also has his former teammate Brad Hertzler as his pitching coach.

"I found out late January or early February that I was going to play here," said Cavanaro. "This is a great coaching staff that has a lot of knowledge. They are doing a great job of working with us and helping us in each game. We all help each other out on this team and this will help us get better. This is definitely a new experience and it is humbling to be playing here in front of a big crowd."

Cavanaro wanted to be with the Rox for a while. To get ready for the season he played three games for the Brockton Dirtdogs of the Cranberry Baseball League.

He is looking to get his timing back after playing 12 games for UMass in his freshman year as an outfielder, which he plays for the Rox.

"I played a couple of games to get ready for this league," Cavanaro said. "The Cranberry League starts earlier than this league. I am definitely honored to be playing in this league. We have a great amount of talent on this team. I did not take it for granted. I am just looking to get better and go back to UMass feeling good about my game."

DEER HILL FOURTH GRADERS

Hear it straight from the students

Students from Suzi Corkhum's fourth grade class wrote letters to the Mariner about their field trip to three of the Cohasset Conservation Trust conservation areas. (See related story, page 8.) The purpose was to expand the students' knowledge of nature and for them to realize how close nature really is. Here is a sampling of those letters.

To the Editor:

On Wednesday, June 13, Mrs. Corkhum's fourth grade class went to three sites around Cohasset. These sites were the Dormitzer Salt Marsh (on the Pegram Preserve), Great Brewster Woods, and Rocky Beach.

At the Dormitzer Salt Marsh we stood in the marsh grass and learned about how the grass is used by a lot of birds including red winged black birds and Marsh wrens.

At Great Brewster Woods we learned about all the plants in the woods. We also learned that there is an edible plant in the woods, it is called Rock Tripe. Rock tripe is a plant that grows on rocks. Our guide, Dick Avery told us that "if you ever get lost in the woods with no food you can always eat rock tripe."

And finally we went to Rocky Beach. At Rocky Beach we learned about the tide pools and what lives in them. In the end we got to take two rocks home. I found a lot of sea glass in all different colors blue, green, white, and brown.

This summer if you have nothing to do, or you are bored, I challenge you to go to all of the Cohasset Conservation Trust protected areas of land. These places vary from woods to beaches to marshes and much more. Once you have gone to a place, find it on the map and put a little smiley face next to it. Once you have 21 little smiley faces, congratulations! You have gone to all of the conservation places in Cohasset you have seen Cohasset's natural beauty.

Carly Ford

To the Editor:

If you have nothing to do over the summer, or you say "I am bored" think about what you are really saying.

The pool is closed and no sport activities and all of your friends are on vacation. But the wilderness is always open. Grab your bike and ride down to Conservation Trust protected areas. You will experience pure nature. There are so many choices; we have counted 21. We know because we are part of Mrs.Corkhum's fourth grade class and we went on a field trip to three destinations preserved by the Conservation Trust. They were Great Brewster Woods, Rocky Beach and Dormitzer Salt Marsh. These three properties are great for exploring over the summer, and we are sure the other 18 are just as good. We think that citizens of all ages will enjoy the beauty of nature.

Even in the rain it's beautiful, we know from experience. Remember, no littering. So next time your sitting on the couch and watching television, grab your bike and ride down to the Conservation Trust protected areas.

Thank You.

Anna Parks and Sarah O'Callaghan

To the Editor:

Cohasset Conservation Trust areas are great places for many reasons. You will discover places that you never even thought were in Cohasset. When we were on our field trip we found a really cool forest called the Great Brewster Woods that was right behind the Town Hall. People in our class have been to the Town Hall many times, but have never been into the woods. The places you see are really amazing places. The people that work there teach you many cool facts about nature. The conservation trust helps bring you closer to nature.

From Joe Riley, Kyle Osborn and Charlie Crumley

Dear donators of land to the CCT,

Thank you for donating your land. If you didn't donate, we wouldn't have had such a great field trip!

We went to three nature sites. The first site was the Dormitzer Salt Marsh. At the marsh we talked about the flooding, the birds and where the water comes and goes. The second site was Great Brewster Woods. When we got there, we talked about trees and that they can repair their injuries. Last, but not least, at Rocky Beach we learned about tide pools. It was so fun because of you!

Sincerely,

Tucker Hill

Dear Town of Cohasset,

I would like to thank the people for their generosity by donating their un-used land to the Cohasset Conservation Trust. So when you and your family are bored this summer, take your family to one of Cohasset's preserved areas to get a hands on experience with nature. You can go to a protected salt marsh and learn about our marine wildlife or go to preserved woods where you can learn about edible plants and erosion.

So, I encourage you to go to one of Cohasset's preserved lands this summer. I know I am going to!

Sincerely,

Hannah Mattey

Dear Cohasset Conservation Trust,

I am very grateful that you protect land that has been donated. If it wasn't for you we wouldn't have a great field trip. On our field trip we drove to three different nature sites. Our first one was a salt marsh (Dormitzer Salt Marsh). While we were there our guide talked about the flooding, the birds, and the water coming and going.

Our second one was called the Brewster woods. The guide taught us about the trees and plants living in the woods.

Our last site was Rocky Beach. On the beach we talked about the rocks and different living things living in the little pools of water on the rocks. We even got to take two rocks home.

I would recommend you going to these nature sites to learn about and see. (You'd learn more about it.)

Sincerely,

Emma Montefusco

To the Editor:

We recently went on a field trip with the Cohasset Conservation Trust. We think kids should get outside and explore these preserved areas to get to know your own community. Not only is it important, it's a fun way to get active. When you visit these places of pure nature, you experience all of Cohasset's beauty.

We think kids these days watch too much TV and going outside gives you fresh air! When you visit the preserved places, you become more educated about our world and how important it is to protect it. These places include Brewster Woods, Rocky Beach, the Dormitzer Salt Marsh, and many more. Did you know there are a total of 21 preserved spaces? In these places you will find in every bush and every vine something to explore and that is important to our time. With so many places to visit, there's no excuse not to go to one, so find one near you. The next time you're feeling down, go outside and move around!

Sincerely,

Molly Greer, Lieren Vigneau, Taylor Herndon and Madeleine Donovan.

To the Editor:

In the future would you like to go to a museum just to see what a tree looked like? In the future you might have to, if we keep building on land and dumping trash all over the town. The CCT (Cohasset Conservation Trust) is trying to stop it. They buy land and make sure people do not build that land. The people of Cohasset are also donating land to help the cause. When you build on a meadow or clear a forest you could be killing an animal or destroying a habitat. Mankind has been destroying the earth for long enough. It's time for these acts to stop. Thanks to the CCT we've finally began to protect the green spaces of Cohasset. You should do the same. Stand up and do your part. Clean up your neighborhood. Grab some friends. Help us in our fight to save the plant. Donate to CCT now to protect the fantastic town we live in.

Sam Franklin, Jake Sullivan and James Devaney

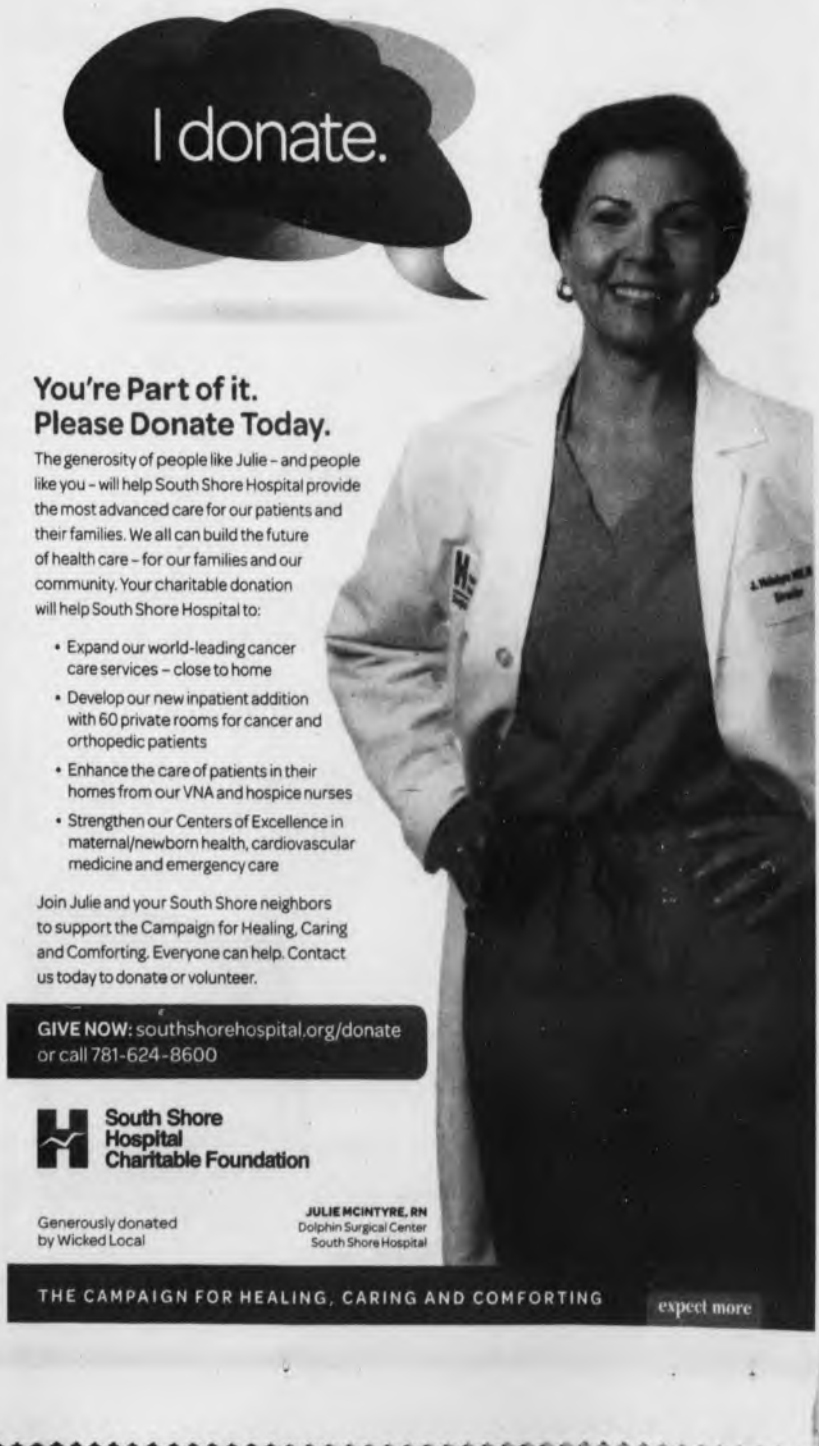
P.S. We'd love to be in the newspaper.

To the Editor:

Are you looking for something fun to do this summer? Why not visit some of-the preserved areas of Cohasset. It might have been raining, but my class and I went to Great Brewster Woods, Rocky Beach, and a Dormitzer Marsh.

My class and I had an amazing time hiking and learning about our surroundings in the wilderness. The Great Brewster Woods might have been deep and wet, but we experienced the hike of our lives.

D.S.M gave a beautiful view for us -to see the animals in there habitats. So go there this summer.



Did you know that Rocky Beach is a preserved area? I didn't. I thought it was tusk another beach in Cohasset! The CCT has protected it for people to visit.

Well, I guess I gave you quite a few places to visit this summer. Hope you have fun at the variety of CCT properties!

Sincerely,

Sydney Childs

GIMME SHELTER

Duchess is considered a senior citizen who is full of fun and has lots of love to share.
COURTESY PHOTO

Duchess is a warm, friendly senior

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to feature Duchess who is six years young, but is still considered a senior cat and if a senior citizen decides to adopt her, he or she will be eligible for the 50 percent senior discount.

Duchess is a medium hair, jet-black cat. She absolute adores people and would make the greatest companion. She loves being brushed. Duchess is petite and is sweet and gentle and would be great with a senior and would get along well with grandchildren.

Duchess is also available for adoption by anyone who meets and falls in love with her. Please visit HSAR and meet this delightful feline.

If you're interested in Duchess, please call 781-534-4902 for further information.

You can visit her at the shelter where you can also meet all of our very adoptable cats.

Duchess is a medium hair, jet-black cat. She absolute adores people and would make the greatest companion.

HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org. HSAR sends out a huge thank you to its many supporters.

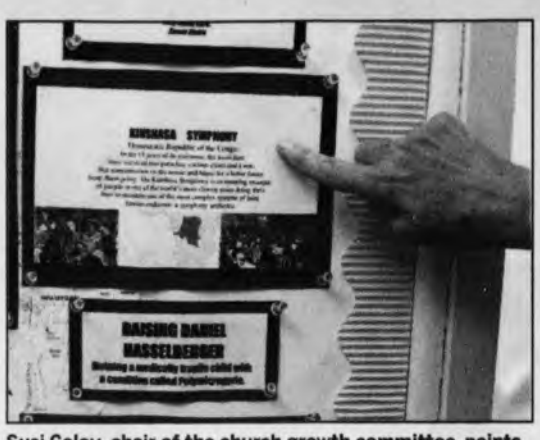
IT'S A MIRACLE!

Second Congo event sparks global giving



By Laura DeSisto
Special to the Mariner

Easter Sunday dawned cool but comfortable. Rain had been in the forecast, but none fell as the first group of parishioners gathered on the shores of Sandy Beach for the traditional Sonrise Service. It seemed like the perfect day for a miracle.

The service proceeded as usual. Songs were sung. Prayers were said. But before it was over, Reverend Gary Ritts did something never before done in the nearly 200-year history of Cohasset's Second Congregational Church. He turned the tables on the congregation by distributing money to everyone present.

The idea for this groundbreaking event had begun simply enough. This past March, a small group of parishioners took part in the church's annual Lenten book study. This year's selection was "Be the Miracle: 50 Lessons for Making the Impossible Possible" by Regina Brett. In one chapter, Ms. Brett recounts the story of a priest who, instead of taking a collection one Sunday, actually gives out money to members of his congregation and asks them to "go and do something creative for God."

Inspired by this concept, the Lenten group decided to support its own "Be the Miracle" campaign. A plan was hatched to raise and distribute funds within the church. The hope was that parishioners would in turn use the money to support causes that resonated with each one personally. Susi Coley, chair of the church growth committee says, "It was the opportunity for people to feel more deeply involved in the church's giving, coupled with the idea that families could work together in a multi-generational way that really appealed to me."

Susi Coley, chair of the church growth committee, points to one of the two organizations that she and her husband, Ralph, donated to during their 6 week challenge that started on Easter.

Susi Coley, chair of the church growth committee, holds up a $10 dollar bill that each parishioner was given on Easter by their pastor at Second Congregational Church to donate to a cause. She and her husband combined to raise $560 and they donated to the Kinshasha Symphony and to the Discovery Concert Series that is hosted by the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra. STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

"I couldn't believe how contagious the campaign was right from the start. I knew we were on to something and had made the right choice."
The Rev. Gary Ritts

At first, Rev. Ritts felt a little uncomfortable with the idea. "I was concerned that it was a bit forward, and I recognized the concern of some that the church needed to keep a tight budget this year," Ritts says.

Despite these reservations, the group was able to move forward. Word was spread that a "Miracle" fund had been started and donations began rolling in. "I couldn't believe how contagious the campaign was right from the start," says Ritts. "I knew we were on to something and had made the right choice."

On Easter Sunday, with the funds in place, the church gave each of the nearly 400 attendees an envelope containing a $10 bill with a note encouraging them to "Spread the wealth and be a Kingdom builder."

Just days later, stories began flooding into the church website about how the money was being distributed. As expected, most recipients had given the funds to outreach and mission causes such as the Muscular Dystrophy Association, the ALS Clinic at Mass General and Operation Smile. What came as a surprise, however, was just how far and wide the funds were spreading. One choir member and her husband, after watching a "60 Minutes" piece about how musicians walk 90 miles each way to practice for the Kinshana Symphony in the Democratic Republic of Congo, chose to send their money all the way to Africa. Even more amazing was the fact that the majority of recipients seem to have multiplied the money many times over before sending it off, either through their own personal donations or by creating email campaigns. Monies sent to the Kinshasa Symphony alone totaled over $350.

The church does not have an estimate of how much the original money was multiplied, but Coley notes, "This initiative definitely had a 'loaves and fishes' effect which was wonderful and quite remarkable. There were many letters of 10x$10 donations being made to worthy causes."

Rev. Ritts agrees. "This has been the kind of message a preachers dreams about," he says. "The kind that just keeps rippling outward. People doing good works that are still being talked about. The 'Be the Miracle' campaign has truly been a miracle for our church."

Those wishing to read more can visit the "Be the Miracle" page of the church's website at www.2ndcc.org.

The pastor gave $10 to each parishioner at the Easter service and challenged them to do something good with it.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 23, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're wise to let your Arian skepticism question a former adversary's request to let bygones be bygones. Time will tell if he or she is trying to pull the wool over the Lamb's eyes.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Congratulations. Your hard work soon pays off with some well-deserved recognition. Meanwhile, that important personal relationship needs more attention from you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) That new person in your life seems trustworthy, but don't turn him or her into a confidant just yet. Remember: The secret you don't reveal is the one you won't lose sleep over.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your kindness makes a difference in someone's life. But by week's end, a touch of Cancerian envy could create a problem with a colleague. Take care to keep it under control.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A new spurt of energy sends you roaring back into that challenging work situation. But be careful not to overdo it, or your sizzle could fizzle before your task is completed.

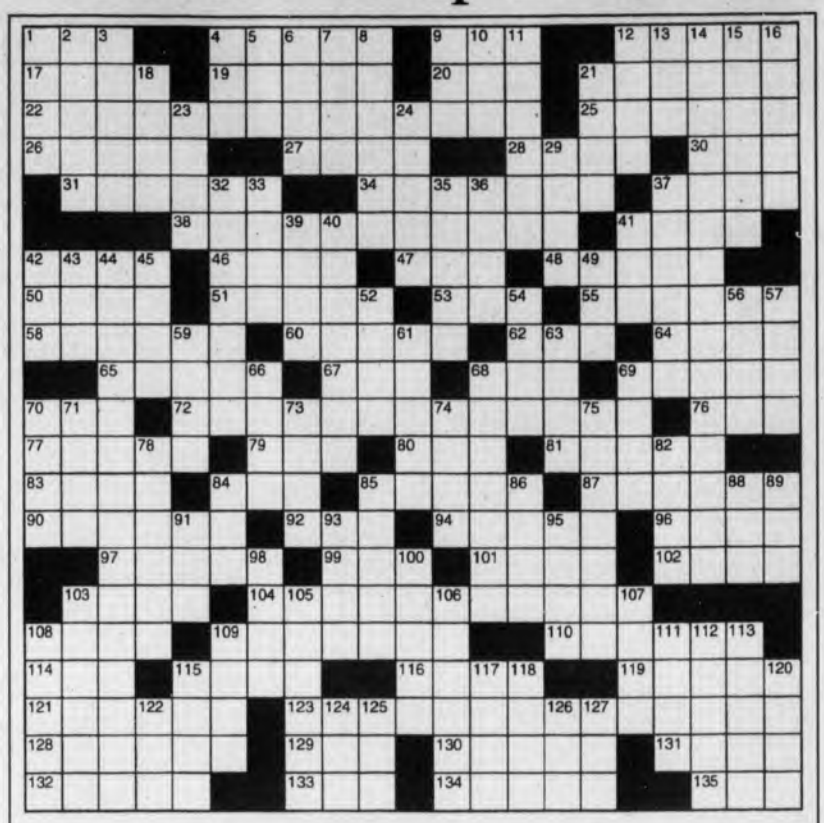
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your practical sense helps you see the logic of being a bit more flexible with a workplace colleague. But you still have a ways to go before there's a true meeting of the minds.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A surprise situation could cause you to spend more money than you feel you can afford. But careful budget adjustments will help. Your fiscal picture soon brightens.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) That decision you made might still have its detractors, but your supporters are growing. Meanwhile, your personal life takes on some welcome new developments.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Matters of the mind intrigue the sage Sagittarian through week's end. By then, you should feel more than ready to make room for pursuits of the heart.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The canny Capricorn can offer good counsel to others. But how about taking some advice yourself from a close friend or family member who is able and ready to help?



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new workplace opportunity offers a variety of challenges that you might find intriguing. Best advice: Take things one step at a time so that you don't feel overwhelmed.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A bid to revive a relationship that ended on a bitter note needs to be carefully thought out before you can even begin to consider plunging into a new emotional commitment.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy being with people, and people love being with you. You would probably do very well in politics.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Challenging

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Beechwood Church offers children's program

A summer kids' event called Sky will be hosted at Beechwood Congregational Church from Monday, Aug. 13 to Friday, Aug. 17. At Sky, faith and imagination soar as kids discover that everything is possible with God. Kids participate in memorable Bible-learning activities, sing catchy songs, play teamwork-building games, make and dig into yummy treats, experience electrifying Bible adventures, collect Bible Memory Buddies to remind them to trust God, and test out Sciency-Fun Gizmos they'll take home and play with all summer long. Plus, kids will learn to look for evidence of God all around them through something called God Sightings. Each day concludes with Fly Away Finale—a celebration that gets everyone involved in living what they've learned.

Sky is for children entering grades one through five and will run from 9 a.m. to noon each day. To register log onto www.beechwoodcc.org or call Sue at 781-383-6836.

ARIZONA DETENTION CENTER

Local ministers concerned about conditions in Tent City

The gathering of lay people and ministers for this vigil intended to shine a light on the human rights abuses inflicted upon those being held at Tent City.

The Rev. Dr. Anita Farber-Robertson, outgoing Interim Minister of First Parish in Cohasset, and the Rev. Jill Cowie, incoming settled Minister of First Parish attended the General Assembly of the Unitarian Universalist Association, held in Phoenix.

As an expression of concern about immigrant rights and well-being, and about reported conditions in the Tent City detention center in Phoenix, Reverends Anita and Jill joined thousands of other Unitarian Universalists along with immigrant rights groups, in a candlelight nighttime vigil outside of Tent City.

The Rev. Peter Morales, President of the Unitarian Universalist Association, and the Rev. Geoffrey A. Black, General Minister and President of the United Church of Christ, issued this joint statement in response to Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio's decision to prohibit visitation in Tent City and five other Maricopa County jails in advance of the vigil:

"This action by Sheriff Joe Arpaio is irresponsible and mean-spirited. He is using our peaceful religious demonstration at Tent City as a pretext to punish inmates and their families there and at the five other county jails. Instead of shutting down the jails for one day, Arpaio should shut them down for good," said Rev. Morales.

"The inhumane treatment of persons incarcerated at tent city is appalling," said Rev. Black. "These are indeed our brothers and sisters. I am sure that anyone seeing these conditions first hand would be as repulsed as I am. I hope and pray that our visit will shed additional light on this immoral abuse of power."

The gathering of lay people and ministers for this vigil intended to shine a light on the human rights abuses inflicted upon those being held at Tent City, including overcrowding, inedible food, and dangerously high temperatures. Unitarian Universalists had been invited by partner groups including Puente Arizona, NDLON, and Somos America to hold our General Assembly in Phoenix to stand on the side of love for social justice, including migrant rights and human immigration reform.

The Unitarian Universalist Association is a faith community of more than 1,000 self-governing congregations that bring to the world a vision of religious freedom, tolerance and social justice. For more information visit www.firstparishincohasset.org, call the church office 781-383-1100, or visit Sunday mornings for summer services which begin at 9 a.m. For more information about the UUA or Rev. Morales, visit the online press room at http://www.uua.org/news/pressroom/index.shtml.

Robert C. Kingsland

Robert C. Kingsland

SCITUATE – Robert Carey Kingsland, 65, of Scituate, passed away June 22, 2012.

The son of Dr. Lawrence Kingsland and Margaret Fitz, Bob grew up in Cohasset, graduated from Brown, and later worked at the Boston University Scientific Instruments Facility, where he also pioneered its Student Training Center.

He inspired many with his dream of building a 50' steel sailboat, a functional work of art which he named Restless and launched in Scituate Harbor in June 2007 after 30 years of creation.

His commitment to his family, loyal friendship, and student mentorship were as meaningful to him as his art.

Bob is survived by his wife Sandy; daughters, Haley of San Francisco and Brooke of Boston. Bob also leaves behind his four fond siblings, Margaret, Larry, Richard, and Holly.

A celebration of life was held Wednesday, July 11, 2012, at 3 p.m. at the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church, 330 First Parish Road, Scituate , followed by a reception at the Lightkeeper's House, 15 Lighthouse Lane, Cohasset.

Donations in Bob's name may be made to the Scituate Library Foundation, 85 Branch St., Scituate, MA 02066, and the New England Wildlife Center, 500 Columbian St., South Weymouth, MA 02190.

Phyllis Moran

Phyllis Moran

UPTON – Phyllis M. (Gardner) Moran, 90, of Upton, MA died Sunday morning, July 1st after a period of declining health resulting from a stroke she suffered September 2011. She went peacefully at the home of her daughter Allison Gold.

Phyllis was married to the late Terence "Ted" Moran of Montreal for 47 good years. Phyllis was born July 19, 1921 in Montreal, Canada. She was married to Ted there in May of 1949. Early in her marriage she moved to California for employment and to start a family, eventually settling in Milford, MA in 1968. Phyllis was a loyal and loving wife who helped Ted start his collection agency, Gardner-Moran Inc., out of the basement of their West Pine St. home. She was a devoted and involved mother who knew all the important details of her children's, and later her grandchildren's activities. A diminutive women in size, she made up for it in enthusiasm and verve, easily heard cheering wholeheartedly from the sidelines of swimming meets, dance recitals and soccer games. Phyllis, ever youthful, had fashion sense extraordinaire, and was famous for wearing leather pants and wild jewelry. She loved her time summering in Ocean Park, Maine or at her farmhouse in the Eastern Townships of Quebec ; she enjoyed the company of her close friends and relations, her Bridge games, attending concerts, reading and especially visiting family.

She is survived by her two children, Terence Moran and his wife Anne of Exeter, NH, and Allison Gold and her husband Howard of Cohasset, MA; and her five grandchildren Greta Moran, Hannah Moran, Olivia Moran, Dylan Gold and Wyatt Gold.

Services will be held at the Buma-Sargeant Funeral Home in Milford on July 14th at 3PM, with a reception following at the Community Covenant Church in Hopkinton. Her remains will be interred in her family plot at Mount Royal Cemetery in Montreal.

Helen T. Sullivan

Helen T. Sullivan

KEARSARGE, NH – Helen T. Sullivan, "Dusty", also lovingly known as "Mor Mor", passed away on June 25, 2012 at her winter home in Kearsarge, NH.

She resided in Cohasset since 1948 and is survived by her loving children, her daughter, Lesley G. Chamberlain of Scituate, MA and her husband, Thomas Paul and their three children, Christy, Toby and Tim, her son Richard A. Sullivan, Jr., of Wellington, Florida and his wife Sandy and their four children, Lisa, Betsey, Wendy and Rick, and her son Lawrence M. Sullivan of Kearsarge, NH and his wife, Charlotte and their five children, Debra, Jeffrey, Michael, Mark and Susan. Also survived by Dusty, her 19 great grandchildren and 4 great great grandchildren.

Dusty was the MVP and Captain of the 1928 Massachusetts Basketball High School Champions, Malden High School. She was a 210 National Champion sailor, aboard Typhoon, helmed by her late husband of 70 plus years, the late Richard A. Sullivan. Dusty was also an award-winning artist and gardener. She was an avid skier, traveler and wonderful cook! Her strength and resolve guided us all through an amazing 101 years of life! Dusty was our burning torch that will be carried by all of us for future generations.

The funeral mass was held on July 11, 2012 at Saint Anthony's Parish, Cohasset, MA. In lieu of flowers gifts may be sent to the American Heart Association.

Ayla Brown joins Josh Turner at Music Circus

By R. Scott Reedy
Correspondent

On the telephone from Washington, D.C., one early morning last week, Josh Turner's distinctive bass baritone voice was clearly tired, with good reason. The night before, the country singer had performed "The Star Spangled Banner" on the live PBS-TV special "A Capitol Fourth."

"It's one of the most nerve-wracking things I will ever do," explained Turner, who returns to the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis on July 13 and South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset on July 15. "I've always been one to try and channel Francis Scott Key. I've sung the national anthem a lot, but it's never just a fun experience. It's always very challenging. That's especially true when you're singing it at the Capitol on the Fourth of July in front of such a huge audience."

Singing the national anthem may make Turner, 33, nervous, but he's probably used to big audiences by now, having sold four million albums and had four number-one hits to date, including "Why Don't We Just Dance," the most played country song of 2010. Just last month, "Punching Bag," the fifth studio album from the South Carolina-born singer/songwriter, debuted at number one. The first single from the new album, "Time Is Love," is in the top 10 and rising on country radio. The singer, who signed with MCA Nashville Records in 2003, knows first-hand that increasing fame means a more intense spotlight.

"Success forces me to think about every aspect of every song. When you decide to record a particular song, you have to think about how it will sound on stage, how it will translate into a music video, and the ways that it can be merchandised. My current single, 'Time Is Love,' by Tony Martin, Mark Nesler, and Tom Shapiro, had all the necessary commercial components. I would probably never write a song like that, but it works because it showcases my voice and it incorporates some very nice acoustic sound, too. The lyric gives advice about just spending quality time with the one you love and the one you care about because that's when you really develop a relationship," says Turner, married to Jennifer Ford, who plays keyboards and sings back-up in her husband's touring band, since 2003. The couple has three sons, Hampton, 5, Colby, 3, and 18-month-old Marion.

"For us, we try to spend time together no matter what we're doing. We just work better together. Like anybody else, we have to take a break from each other from time to time, so we can enjoy the times that we are together. We've always been friends, however, and Jennifer is my biggest cheerleader."

Jennifer is also a trusted advisor when it comes to helping songwriter Turner decide what life experiences might make a song, as was the case with, "Punching Bag," the new album's title song.

Ayla Brown, former American Idol contestant

"I came home after a rough day, when I felt like life was just beating me up, and I was telling my wife about it when I knew I had come up with the title for a song. So I put it in my phone and waited for the right opportunity. I ended up co-writing the song with Pat McLaughlin and it became the central idea for this entire album. We really captured the emotions that I was feeling on that bad day. I wanted to really convey the fact that even though life throws you a punch, that doesn't mean you have to take it or be knocked down by it. Life is a series of punches. It presents a lot of challenges and hardship, but the people who are able to take those punches and able to move forward are the ones who really do have a lot of success and have a lot of joy in their life, and have a lot of stories to tell, too. It is very motivational and uplifting."

Turner also found inspiration in his other collaborators, including his family, who join him on "Find Me a Baby," and special guests like Ricky Skaggs, who appears on "For the Love of God," and Marty Stuart and Iris DeMent, who can be heard on "Pallbearer."

Country star, Josh Tuner COURTESY PHOTOS

"It was a dream come true for me when Marty came in on this," Turner says of Stuart's mandolin playing. "Iris DeMent is a great fit for the song, too, because of the wonderful lonesome kind of twang she has to her voice."

One thing Turner is not these days is lonesome. He has his whole family on the road with him.

"We have a family tour bus. We travel as a family, because we're better together. It wouldn't work for everybody, but it works for us. We wouldn't have it any other way."

On Sunday, July 15, Josh Turner, with Ayla Brown, will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier S., Cohasset. For tickets and information, call 1-800-745-3000 or go online at themusiccircus.org.

BORDER STREET

Bridge jumpers undeterred

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Despite last week's near fatal accident at the Border Street bridge, and the fact that bridge jumping is illegal in Cohasset, those looking for relief from the staggering temperatures are still taking the leap.

On Sunday, July 8, a 19-year-old Roxbury male jumped off the bridge but did not know how to swim. Several jumped in after him to aid in his rescue, including the assistant harbormaster and former Cohasset lifeguard Dan McCarthy, 24.

Since then, there were over 20 more bridge jumping occurrences reported in the police log from July 9 through July 16 alone. And that's just the jumpers who were approached by police and asked to vacate the premises.

This, along with the discovery of a Facebook page dedicated to the activity titled "I Jumped Off the Cohasset Bridge," reveals that bridge jumping is more popular than ever.

"I want to jump again," wrote one user. "I'm having withdrawals and haven't jumped since last summer."

Other members of the online club proudly post photos of themselves and their children taking the leap.

In Cohasset, many describe bridge jumping as a rite of passage, but a town bylaw passed in 1992 made it illegal and punishable with a $25 fine. Officials said last week that the young age of the jumpers, and the fact that they are in swim suits and don't carry identification,

Spanish-style tapas take over Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

When locals crave a night of al fresco dining featuring fresh Spanish cuisine, they no longer need to hop a plane to Spain or find similar fare on Newbury Street. Not when Spanish-style food featuring local ingredients is right around the corner.

This summer, Cohasset got its very own tapas restaurant.

What are tapas? Tapa is simply the Spanish word for "food," but "tapas" are more accurately described as appetizers or snacks. Since dinner is traditionally served late at night in Spain, tapas are served in the interim between work and dinner. In European and American cities, going tapas bar-hopping is a popular practice. Now, the trend is catching on in Cohasset.

Enter Brisa Tapas & Wine, the new outdoor restaurant on the patio of the Cohasset Harbor Inn. Brisa is Spanish for "breeze," and with its prime waterfront location, no other name could more aptly describe the new eatery.

For Cohasset Harbor Inn's managing partner Joe Campbell, opening a tapas restaurant has been a dream come true. But no dream can be fulfilled without good old-fashioned hard work. Campbell said that he and his team spent all winter planning and renovating the inn (all 15 guest rooms, plus the suites and lobby, underwent a redesign along with the kitchen and patio) while testing out tapas dishes during tastings at nearby sister restaurant, the Atlantica.

"We knew we wanted to use the [inn's] outdoor [area] for more than just a private space," Campbell

Solar option fuels debate

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Alternative Energy Committee has been hard at work to bring solar power to town. But have they paid equal attention to other alternative energy sources?

A question raised by selectman Martha Gjesteby during a recent presentation by the Alternative Energy Committee has been answered in a letter to the editor (see Your View commentary on page 10).

Last week, the AEC went before the Board of Selectmen and presented plans to bring solar energy to Cohasset by installing an array on the Middle-High School roof and the town's capped landfill on 81-91 Cedar Street. The committee shared a Power Point presentation that showcased their work of the past six months, requested the hiring of special counsel to assist with the RFP (request for proposals) process, and outlined potential costs. Many of the costs, such as the need to upgrade the school roof to allow for an array, are unknown, according to the committee.

Gjesteby wanted to know if the committee had looked

WHAT'S THE PROBLEM?

Watch out for mosquitoes

WHAT:
Nothing says summer quite like a swarm of mosquitoes. In Cohasset, there is additional concern because of the stagnant water in the algae-filled pond on the town common. When mosquitoes carry Arboviruses (viruses transmitted by arthropods, like mosquitoes) such as Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) and West Nile Virus (WNV), it's time to slather on the bug spray.

WHY:
The Mass. Department of Public Health (MDPH) and the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Program are performing ongoing surveillance of mosquitoes for incidence of EEE and WNV throughout the state as part of the Mass. Arbovirus Surveillance and Response Plan. While Cohasset has been identified as a low-risk area for these viruses, that doesn't make the town risk-free.

HOW:
Cohasset's Board of Health stresses taking the following precautions:
- Repair screens in windows and doors to keep the insects out
- Avoid standing water, which mosquitoes are drawn to
- Apply mosquito repellent when outdoors
- Limit outdoor time from dusk to dawn, when mosquitoes are most prevalent
- Wear long sleeves and long pants when outdoors during peak mosquito hours
- Use mosquito netting on infant carriages and outdoor play areas

Name: Dibley Critchfield

Occupation: Dog

Best day of your life: April 25, 2011— the day my sister, Alice, and I arrived in Cohasset.

Best vacation: Jackson, New Hampshire last Thanksgiving: It was my first time in the snow— very cool!

Favorite season: Autumn, because then I'm allowed on the beach anytime!

Favorite holiday: Labor Day (see above)

Favorite junk food, meal or dessert: Yes, please.

Best book: I've ingested multiple copies of both the Christopher Hitchens' memoir "Hitch-22" and the Anglican classic, "Prayers Ancient and Modern," but if you mean to read, I'll go with "The Art of Racing in the Rain."

Best movie: Christopher Guest's "Best in Show." Very funny, lots of dogs, and my good friend Donna was one of the production managers!

Best TV show: "The Vicar of Dibley!" I'm also kind of a news hound, and I like the weirdness of "Wilfred" a lot, too.

Best music, group, or artist: Snoop Dogg, duh.

Pet peeve: Really? Don't you think that's kind of insensitive?

Most embarrassing moment: The day I tried to jump into the back of a friend's Toyota Highlander in the Town Hall parking lot...only the hatch wasn't open yet. I did a "Road-runner" in broad daylight. Mortifying.

Person you would most like to meet: The next one I see, and then the next one, and the next one... Also, writer-director Richard Curtis. If it weren't for him, I might have been named "Fido" (not that there's anything wrong with that).

Goal: To be cast in a movie that's shot in Cohasset.

Biggest worry: Squirrels. They're evil little critters plotting to take over the world.

Best part of Cohasset: All the wonderful people who make a fuss over me!

Aquarion Water Company calls for mandatory outdoor water restrictions

Aquarion Water Company of Massachusetts today initiated mandatory outdoor water restrictions for customers in Hingham, Hull, and North Cohasset. This action is being taken because recent hot, dry weather has resulted in a high demand for water.

Under these restrictions, water usage for irrigation systems and sprinklers is allowed on an odd/even basis from 6 p.m. to 10 a.m. as follows. Homes with even house number addresses can water between 6 p.m. to 10 a.m. on even numbered days; and homes with odd numbered addresses can water between 6 p.m. and 10 a.m. on odd numbered days. Hand-held hoses are allowed at any time.

Under Aquarion's Rules and Regulations approved by the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities, failure to comply with the mandatory restrictions will first result in a written warning. Subsequent violations can result in the discontinuance of water service with termination and restoration fees ranging from $49.00 to $294.00 depending on the day of the week, time of day and holidays.

The lack of rainfall since July 5th, along with recent high temperatures, has prompted more outside water usage. In an effort to conserve the water supply and protect the environment, we are asking that our customers restrict their outside water usage.

Aquarion recommends several ways to use water wisely to help in the water conservation effort:

- Allow grass to grow longer — taller grass shades itself, is healthier and requires less water.
- Be careful not to allow irrigation water to fall on paved areas.
- Use brooms or blowers, instead of water, to clean decks, driveways and sidewalks.
- Repair all leaks in plumbing and fixtures.
- Install water-saving shower heads and low-flow faucet aerators.

Officers save woman using CPR, AED

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The swift response of Cohasset police officers helped save a woman's life last month.

On Friday, June 22, at 11:30 a.m. officers responded to a 911 call for medical aid on Nichols Road. An elderly woman was unresponsive and had stopped breathing.

Officer Patrick Kenney was returning from court in his own car at that time and was the first to respond to the call. Both he and officer Paul Wilson arrived within minutes of receiving the call.

Wilson arrived to find Kenney administrating cardiopulmonary resuscitation; Kenney said he keeps a CPR mask in his own vehicle. Wilson, meanwhile, prepared to use an AED (automatic external defibrillator) on the woman. The officers took pause when they noticed a change in the woman's condition; her pupils, which were dilated and fixed when Kenney arrive, had started to go back to normal, indicating that the CPR was effective enough to allow blood flow the brain, said Kenney.

The officers checked her for a pulse and had the AED analyze her for a shock. While the machine was analyzing, paramedics from the fire department arrived on the scene. The AED indicated need for a shock; shock was administered and the woman was transported to South Shore Hospital.

"She made it," said Kenney, adding, "Unless there's a good responder there to start CPR right away, the typical save rates [for AEDs] are pretty low."

Deputy Chief William Quigley said he is proud of his department's lifesaving achievement.

"This type of act of dedication is exactly what we've come to expect from our officers. They do a great job every day. One of our residents was lucky enough that they were on duty that day; they were in the right place at the right time."

Wilson attributed the save to teamwork. "Everyone from us to the fire department did an awesome job working together and helping each other."

All of the officers are trained as first responders and carry both adult and pediatric AEDs, said Wilson.

"It's very important to have AEDs in the cruiser to be able to help a person and give them the chance for survival." Just as important? Citizens getting CPR-trained themselves. "It makes a world of difference with the chance of survival with somebody," said Wilson, "if there are more people trained out there who know what to do."

POLICE BEAT

Woman hits another car then walks home

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

At midnight on July 14, a 66-year-old Oak Street resident called to report a vehicle striking her own car, a 1999 black Ford Escort, which was parked in front of her house. The vehicle also struck a stone wall outside the residence. The vehicle that struck hers was a 2012 white Ford Fiesta operated by 21-year-old Kelsey Coughlin, who gave her information to the Escort owner/Oak Street Resident before leaving the scene. Coughlin said she needed to get home, and proceeded to walk through the Oak Street resident's yard to her address on nearby Ash Street, leaving her car behind.

The Escort sustained damage across the passenger side; the Fiesta was damaged on the passenger side and front end.

Officers on the scene were provided with this information; the witness also stated that Coughlin smelled like she had been drinking. Officers went to the Ash Street address provided and were able to identify Coughlin based on the witness' description. Coughlin was evaluated by Cohasset fire paramedics and was determined to be under the influence of alcohol. She was placed under arrest for operating under the influence of liquor, negligent operation of a vehicle and marked lanes violation. Officers photographed the scene and towed the vehicles. Coughlin was brought to the police station and placed in a female cell. She was brought to court the next morning to be arraigned.

Hit and run

On Monday, July 9, between 5 and 6 p.m., an 18-year-old man operating a 2003 Ford struck a 1979 Chevrolet driven by a 29-year-old man. Both drivers were from Cohasset.

Vehicle one, the Chevrolet, was stopped at a red light at the intersection of 3A and Pond Street headed north; vehicle two, the Ford, was also traveling northbound and approaching the intersection. When the light changed to green, vehicle one began traveling northbound and vehicle two rear-ended vehicle one. The operator of vehicle two did not slow down for traffic as the light was changing from red to green; she was cited for failure to use care and stop.

Erratic driving

A 22-year-old Cohasset man was reported driving a 2001 Dodge Ram van erratically northbound on Route 3A. Officers found the van parked and unoccupied at Stop & Shop. The operator came out of the grocery store a short time later; officers determined that the driver was not under the influence, and he was sent on his way.

A caller reported a silver BMW with Florida plates crossing over the double yellow line several times on Route 3A. An officer was able to stop the vehicle at Cohasset Mobile Mart. The operator, a 58-year-old Florida male, did not appear to be under the influence and was allowed to resume driving.

Possession

Scituate authorities had an arrest warrant for a 33-year-old Cohasset male who resides on Marion Way. On July 13, between 10:30 and 11 p.m., Cohasset detectives assisted Scituate police on the arrest and search warrant on the dwelling; Cohasset assisted with securing the premises and executing the search warrant while Scituate PD made the arrest. The arrestee was charged with possession of Class A and Class E drugs. The matter is currently under investigation.

Vending machine break-in

On July 14 at 2 p.m., a 44-year-old female employee of Cohasset Golf Club called to report a break-in and theft. One of the snack sheds that abuts the Cedar Street club was broken into; the shed contains two Coca-Cola vending machines for soda and water and one snack machine. The door lock and frame had been pried off and all three vending machines had been tampered with, their locks broken off. The money inside each machine was stolen, approximately $40 per machine. Detectives responded and took photographs and prints from the scene; they also discovered one of the locks in the rear of the shed, which was seized as evidence. The scene was cleared at 4:40 p.m.

Cohasset Board of Health monitoring mosquito movement

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) and the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Program are performing ongoing surveillance of mosquitoes for incidence of Arboviruses (such as Eastern Equine Encephalitis [EEE] and West Nile Virus [WNV]) throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as part of the Massachusetts Arbovirus Surveillance and Response Plan. In addition to receiving weekly surveillance updates from MDPH, the Cohasset Board of Health regularly participates in conference calls with MDPH and other municipalities throughout Southeastern Massachusetts and the state.

According to data published on the MDPH website (http://www.mass.gov/dph/wnv), "multiple cases of human disease caused by EEE or WNV are considered unlikely at this time." Although the Town of Cohasset is currently assigned the risk category of low, this does not mean that the area is risk-free, as infection may occur anywhere. Mosquitoes infected with EEE have been trapped in the towns of Easton and Carver, and the surrounding areas are currently assigned "high" or "moderate" risk levels.

The Cohasset Board of Health recommends that residents take the following personal precautions in order to avoid mosquito bites and the illnesses that they may cause, including:

- Repairing screens in windows and doors. Mosquitoes may enter a dwelling or commercial establishment if doors are left open and if screens are defective. Chapter II of the Massachusetts State Sanitary Code requires that all windows below the fifth floor of a dwelling must have screens that are at least 16 mesh per square inch and that all doors opening directly inside the dwelling unit have doors with similar screens installed from April 1 through October 30, both inclusive;
- Avoid standing water. Mosquitoes are attracted to areas containing standing water, and lay their eggs in the standing water. Bird baths, rain gutters, drains, flower pots, wading pools and other sources of standing water should be drained twice weekly;
- Apply mosquito repellant when outdoors – especially from dusk to dawn. MDPH recommends using a repellant with DEET or IR3535 as the active ingredient.
- Wear long sleeves and long pants when performing outdoor activities during mosquito peak hours.
- Use mosquito netting on infant carriages and outdoor play areas.

More information can be found on the MDPH Arbovirus Surveillance Information web page at http://www.mass.gov/dph/wnv, by calling the MDPH recorded information line at 866-MASS-WNV (866-627-7968), or by calling the MDPH Epidemiology Program at 617-983-6800. As always, residents may also contact the Cohasset Board of Health at 781-383-4116 or by email at fzemel@cohassetma.org.

MEETINGHOUSE POND

Pondering the algae problem

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A rubber alligator was placed at Meetinghouse Pond, perhaps to monitor the algae situation. Do alligators eat algae? PHOTO SUBMITTED BY TARA TRADD

Strolling around the town common, the gem that is the Meetinghouse Pond is looking green – and not in a good way.

Many residents have expressed concern that the Meetinghouse Pond, the epicenter of Cohasset's common, has gone from icon to eyesore. Over the past few months, residents have observed a troubling amount of algae growth. Officials are still attempting to come up with solutions.

In the meantime, the stagnant water at the pond is a breeding ground for mosquitoes, potentially putting folks at risk for mosquito-transmitted Arboviruses Easter Equine Encephalitis (EEE) and the West Nile Virus.

The new health agent for Cohasset's Board of Health, Felix Zemel, officially begins his new position next Tuesday, but provided information on the Arboviruses to the Mariner.

To anyone taking a stroll along the pond, Zemel urged that they avoid doing so in the early morning or early evening.

"Avoid stagnant water from dusk to dawn, wear long sleeves and long pants to prevent mosquito bites as well, and use insect repellent with DEET," Zemel suggested.

When a Mariner photographer came across a dead animal in the pond last Tuesday, which passersby surmised had been there for days, the Mariner reporter called animal control officer Paul Murphy. Murphy said he would check it out but could not be reached again before press time.

Last week, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said he planned to contact CSCR to test the water's pH; some town officials believe the concrete is leaching lime into the water. Selectman Martha Gjesteby said that she would like to see goldfish reintroduced to the pond to eat up the algae; Merle Brown, a citizen who proposed the pond restoration project that wrapped up last spring, mentioned that goldfish had lived in the pond before.

Meanwhile, the water department has shut off the pond's fountain because the town has yet to pay its $60,000 water bill. The matter of which town departments should pay for water consumption was a point of contention between the water commission and former town manager Michael Coughlin last fall; the issue has yet to be resolved between the town officials, but Milanoski and water commission chair Peter DeCaprio said they are meeting to discuss this and other important matters.

Selectmen vice chair Diane Kennedy told the Mariner that solving the problem with the pond is her chief priority this summer.

Kennedy shared the following in an email statement to the Mariner:

"Resolving the issues with the pond must be and is a priority for the town. It has been a source of frustration for me and many since last fall. I know that people in the community value the aesthetics of the entire town and the historic common and the pond are the centerpieces Cohasset. When Town Meeting approved CPC [Community Preservation Commission] funding for the pond, we envisioned a revitalized, clean, environmentally sound pond with a re-circulating pump and fountain— sparkling water and a healthy appearance. I know that those involved in resolving the current problems are also looking at some of the decisions that were made on this project so that in the future, and with other engineering projects, we don't repeat the same mistakes: ultimately spending time and money troubleshooting something that was supposed to enhance the town's Meetinghouse Pond."

Rising deer population a cause for concern

By Jenny Magruder
jmagruder@wickedlocal.com

In the past few years, Cohasset and Hingham residents have noticed an increase in deer population. At first, complaints were mostly about the damage they had been doing to people's yards and gardens, but more recently residents are concerned about the rising threat of deer-vehicle collisions.

The increase in the number of deer-vehicle collisions is typically seen during the mating season, which lasts from October to January. Last year, Hingham experienced 17 accidents during this time, and 18 the previous year. There have been a few accidents this spring, but those have been more sporadic.

Cohasset, though, has experienced more problems with deer.

"We have seen a dramatic increase in deer sightings and deer versus car accidents," Cohasset Deputy Police Chief William Quigley stated. "We have even had two police cars hit deer in the past 18 months. There were no injuries to humans in either accident, but it creates a troubling problem when deer are running in the streets."

Although most drivers have been lucky in the deer-vehicle collisions, having come away with only a scratch, there is the threat that such a large animal could cause further damage that could prove fatal.

Hingham Police Chief Michael Peraino cited a more serious accident where a man's car was totaled. "A deer went through the windshield, and if there had been a person in the passenger seat, they would have been killed," Peraino said.

What can towns do to control the rising deer population?

Dave Stainbrook, the Deer and Moose Project Leader for the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, says it is up to the individual towns to control the deer population.

"We generally see an increase in deer in any town that limits hunting," said Stainbrook. "They are so developed that you cannot use firearms, thus there are continually growing deer numbers."

Stainbrook said towns would have to make changes to their own bylaws in order to control the rising deer populations. He said the only way to see an immediate decrease is by allowing hunting or opening an extended season.

Stainbrook said he has seen fewer complaints in towns that have opened up archery hunting. He also suggests allocating antlerless deer permits. Another issue, though, is the lack of hunter access in the towns, and that makes it difficult to manage the deer population.

In both Cohasset and Hingham, authorized locations have been opened in the fall for archery hunting, but firearms are not prohibited due to the hunting land being so close to residential areas.

There have been some ethical questions raised regarding archery hunting and whether it causes the deer to suffer. Stainbrook said that this is certainly not the case, adding that out of 30 deer recently shot from archery hunting, only one was not recovered. "As far as humaneness goes," he said, "archery hunting is far better than suffering for days from a vehicle accident."

Along with car-vehicle collisions, deer cause numerous other problems. They play a large role in Lyme disease, as they are major carriers of ticks. To avoid Lyme disease, Stainbrook suggests using bug spray, and to make sure that vegetation is cut low.

Deer can also cause a lot of damage to the landscape. They eat the undergrowth, and thus can ruin the forests. They have also begun feeding in people's gardens. This becomes a larger problem because as deer move closer to residential areas, coyotes follow them and create another threat to the community. Peraino attributes this problem to people feeding the deer, and he encourages Hingham residents to stop.

Unless an extended archery hunting season is opened in Cohasset and Hingham, there is not much that can be done about the deer population. For now, though, residents can lessen complaints and ensure their safety by not feeding the deer and taking more caution when driving through wooded areas where the deer are more likely to run into the street.

NEWS UPDATE

Chief's lawyer scheduled to meet with investigator

Counsel for suspended Police Chief Mark DeLuca was scheduled to meet with an investigator from the firm of Richard A. Sjoberg & Associates as of press time Thursday (July 19).

DeLuca's attorney, Edward McNeeley, said he had been given a list of allegations against his client filed by Cohasset's police union, but he could not comment further at the time. He added that he was planning to meet with the investigator on Thursday, June 19 (after press deadline) and would know more later that day.

DeLuca was placed on paid administrative leave on Friday, May 25, following union allegations reported to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. The town manager announced last week that Town Counsel contacted McNeeley on June 28 and shared 11 allegations against the chief, as reported by the union.

PARKER AVE CUT

CSCR seeks volunteers for clearing project, cookout

On Wednesday, Aug. 1, students and staff of the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) will be clearing a dozen choke points in the critical wetland habitat known as the Parker Ave Cut.

The Border Street culvert that connects the Cut to the Gulf River and Cohasset Harbor was recently rebuilt with local, state, and federal participation. The purpose of this investment was to improve tidal flow between the river and the harbor in order to improve the health of the salt water wetland habitat. In order to ensure that tidal flushing continues to improve the wetland habitat, rocks and debris that create choke points in the creek must be removed. Under the direction of CZM's Jason Burtner, the CSCR is in the process of seeking local approval for this maintenance project.

In anticipation of the "green light," CSCR scheduled the cleanup for Aug. 1, beginning in the morning when the tide is low (easier access to the rocks) and continuing through the afternoon when the tide floods the creek at 11:30 (to make debris removal at the culvert end a bit easier to move to higher ground).

A cookout will follow the clean up, and will also serve as an opportunity to meet CSCR students and learn about the exciting projects with which they are involved. It will be an opportunity to celebrate a common interest in preserving and improving the overall health of our coastal habitat. If you are able to help, CSCR needs the following:

Supplies:
- Steel rakes
- Wheelbarrows
- Pry bars
- Shovels
- Hoes
- Pitchforks
- Gloves
- Water

Cookout help:
- Donations of burgers, dogs, rolls, etc.
- Salads
- Water
- Cooks who love to grill

Stickers, trash bags are on sale

Cohasset Historical Society museums open

Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., downtown Cohasset, are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th Century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum. The museums tell of the early history of Cohasset. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s. The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses. Both buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The museums are open 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays. For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

Preparing food and eating it too

By Jon Belber

On the last day, we spent some time splitting wood and starting the fire in our mud oven for some herb flatbreads and pizzas. Additional sessions (with openings) are planned for the weeks of July 30 and Aug. 13.

Everybody eats, or so I presume. During the first week of our inaugural program, Kids Eat!, participants did just that. Each day found the kids walking the fields of Holly Hill Farm, with scissors and buckets in hand, looking at what crops are ready for harvest and which ones could use more time. These hardy kids, ages 9 and 10, discovered an early bumper crop of wild black raspberries and practically dove into the prickly vines to gently coax the ripe fruit. There were yet more berries to pursue, as the blueberry patch is having a grand season, with one of its highest yields in its 10 year old history. The rewards were a terrific multi-berry crisp.

One day, an arugula, lettuce and sugar snap pea salad was enjoyed, even though a parent of one of the kids mentioned salad is a difficult sell at home. The salad day was also greeted with an exclamation, "This was the best day ever!" Pasta with herbs, tabbouleh and both hard boiled and scrambled eggs were other successful snacks the kids made, thank to the gardens and the chickens.

On the last day, we spent some time splitting wood and starting the fire in our mud oven for some herb flatbreads and pizzas. As the summer continues and the plants produce more fruits and veggies, the variety of meals and recipe sharing can only grow more interesting and diverse.

Additional sessions (with openings) are planned for the weeks of July 30 and Aug. 13.

As one of the participants mentioned, "I wish this camp program could go for the whole day," (rather than just the three hours in the morning. So do I, but for now we will just have to parse out our eating, grow more edibles and plan for more programs.

For more information on the Kids Eat! Program and any other program at the farm this summer, please check the website, www.hollyhillfarm.org. Hope to see you at the farm.

Jon Belber is the education director of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm. The Friends of Holly Hill Farm, Inc. is a non-profit 501(c)(3) that uses the resources of Holly Hill Farm as its outdoor classroom. Holly Hill Farm is a certified organic vegetable, fruit, and herb farm located at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

Carillon summer recital series continues Sunday, July 22

The 88th Annual Summer Recital Series on the Cohasset Carillon continues July 22 at 6 p.m. On eight consecutive Sundays this summer, hear carillon players from all over the world play St. Stephen's treasured instrument. The Recital Series is the longest running continuous carillon concerts in the North America, dating back to the carillon's installation in 1924.

The best place to listen to the carillon is on the grounds of the Cohasset Common. So plan on a picnic with the family ever Sunday at 6 p.m. from now until Aug. 12. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower is offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

The Cohasset Carillon (speaking in superlatives) is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England.

Celebrating 50 years of Winiker music

ELAINE SORRENTINO

Director of Performance Beth MacLeod Largent chose the Winiker Band for Evenings Under the Stars because of that reputation and the fact that their music speaks to all audiences. COURTESY PHOTO

Ever notice how music connects us through the years? Parents sing the same lullabies to their children that their own parents sang to them. The way in which you sing "Sweet Caroline" identifies you as a Red Sox fan. Couples dance to Frank Sinatra at their weddings and their 50th anniversaries. The Bill and Bo Winiker Band has perfected this art of uniting generations through music, and they're sharing their gifts here at South Shore Conservatory this weekend.

I recently spoke with Christine Puzo who fondly remembers seeing the band with her husband, Michael, years ago. Christine told me, "Michael and I used to listen to the Winiker Band back in the '70s when they played at the Parker House at The Last Hurrah. We loved their music, the big band sound and the warm personality of the band members. Listening to them was just great fun!"

It was no surprise that, when their oldest daughter, Mary Elizabeth (M.E.), was getting married, Christine and Michael suggested asking the Winikers to play at the reception. "Once M.E. heard them play, she needed no further convincing that they would make their wedding a fabulous celebration all would enjoy. Their music is timeless."

This year, the Bill and Bo Winiker Band celebrates their 50th year of performing. When their dad, Ed Winiker, handed 9-year-old Bo a trumpet and 12-year-old Bill a set of drums to start a family band, I wonder if he knew he was handing them a lifetime of enjoyment and employment? Imagine 50 years of fabulous music making. What a feat! After a lifetime in the music business, their reputation precedes them.

Director of Performance Beth MacLeod Largent chose the Winiker Band for Evenings Under the Stars because of that reputation and the fact that their music speaks to all audiences. "I wanted to program something that our audience would be familiar with and enjoy. The Bill and Bo Winiker Band came up several times, so I began asking our loyal patrons if they knew of them, and what did they think? The response was unanimously positive. Everyone was very enthusiastic about having them aboard the series. It was a perfect fit."

The Winiker's upcoming show at the Conservatory includes everything from Louis Armstrong to the great swing bands of the 1930s, from exciting late 1940s bebop to the birth of cool jazz in the 1950s, right up to more modern jazz styles of the present day. It's all very recognizable music, and I'm sure there'll be lots of toe-tapping that evening! My mother asked me to get her a ticket to the concert because, as she put it, "I'm excited to hear the orchestra because I like the music they play. I'm interested in all kinds of music, but this music seemed to be the songs I grew up with. If I want I can sing along."

The bonus with this concert is that we'll have a beautiful covered dance floor for patrons who wish to glide across the floor to this very danceable music. The covered floor will provide a safer place to dance – not that dancing in the aisles isn't encouraged as well!

So take advantage of a golden opportunity to hear these Boston institutions in person at SSC – and bring your dancing shoes!

SSC's Evenings Under the Stars presents Jazz Meets Broadway! with Bill and Bo Winiker Band on Saturday, July 21, at 7 p.m. For more information on the entire EUS concert series, visit http://www.sscmusic.org/evenings_under_the_stars.html, or call 781-749-7565, ext. 22.

OUR VIEW

Watch your water use

It's been hot. There's no getting around that fact. Hopefully by the time you're reading this, the heat wave has rolled on by and we're back in a more favorable summer weather pattern.

With hot usually comes dry.

If you have a lawn, garden or flowerbed you know how dry it's been and how difficult it is keeping it watered.

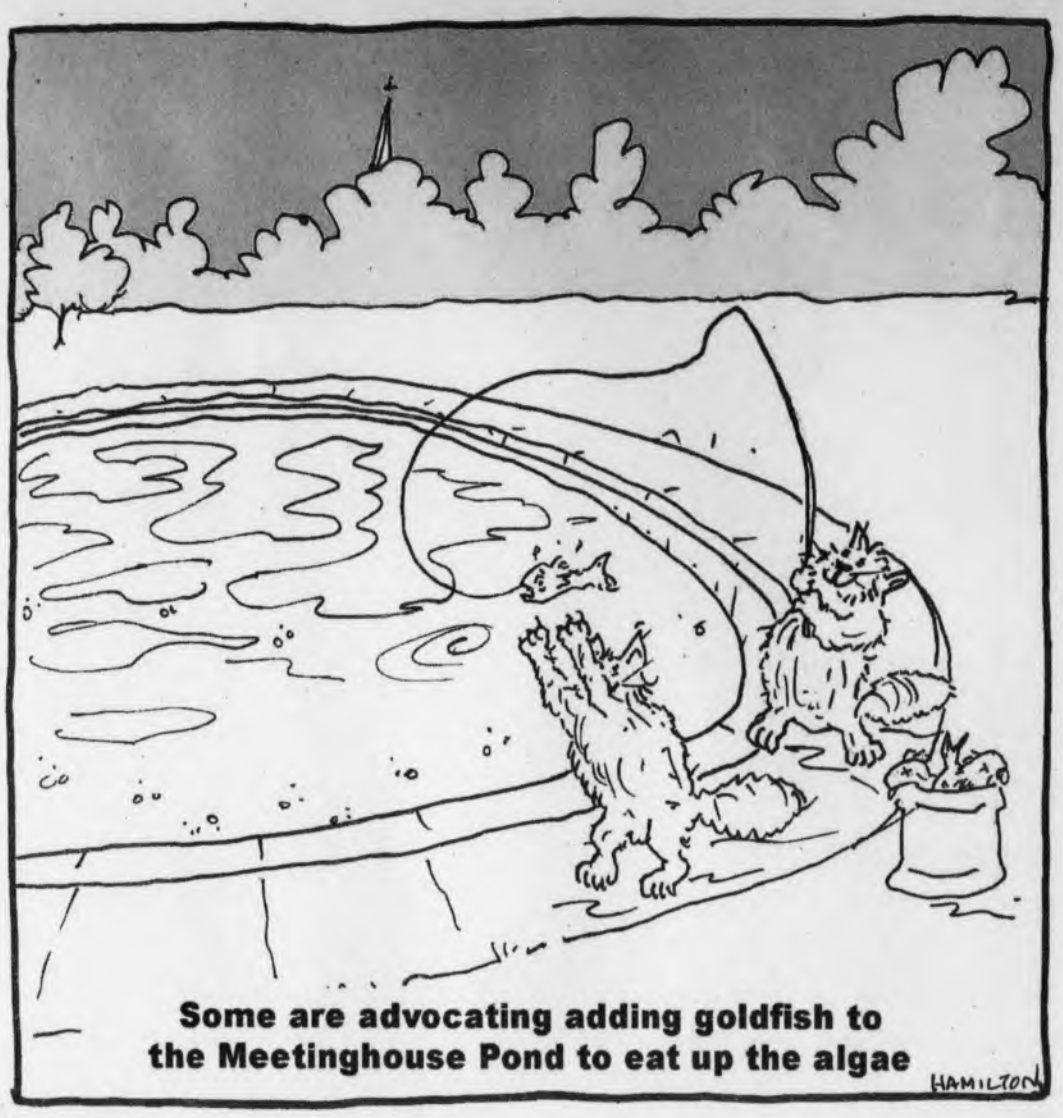
The hot, dry weather has forced Aquarion Water Company, the private water utility that serves Hingham, Hull and north Cohasset, to issue a mandatory water ban on Monday (July 16), just days after leaving an automated telephone message on customers' phones Friday (July 13) suggesting voluntary restrictions.

The following statement was issued from the company Monday: "The lack of rainfall since July 5th, along with recent high temperatures, has prompted more outside water usage. In an effort to conserve the water supply and protect the environment, we are asking that our customers restrict their outside water usage."

The mandatory water ban that was put in place Monday appears less restrictive than the voluntary ban.

Initially Aquarion asked customers to limit outdoor water use to two days per week from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m., but weather conditions deteriorated over the hot and humid weekend forcing the mandatory ban.

Ironically, under the mandatory restrictions, irrigation systems and sprinklers are allowed on an odd/even basis from 6 p.m. to 10 a.m., allowing more days a week to water and for a longer period of time.



According to the statement from Aquarion, homes with even house number addresses can water between 6 p.m. to 10 a.m. on even numbered days; and homes with odd numbered addresses can water between 6 p.m. and 10 a.m. on odd numbered days. Hand-held hoses are allowed at any time.

Doesn't sound like much of a watering ban. Not that we want lawns to go brown, but allowing the use of irrigation systems is not going to help conserve water.

Mandatory restrictions are usually put in place because water supplies get dangerously low. Let's not put green lawns ahead of public safety and welfare as it relates to this valuable natural resource.

In addition to abiding by the restrictions for outdoor water usage, Aquarion suggests allowing your grass to grow longer as taller grass shades itself and requires less water. If you do need to use your irrigation system, don't allow the water to fall on paved areas.

But most of all, use common sense and don't get into hot water by ignoring the mandatory restrictions. Not only could Aquarion turn your water off if you continue to disobey, they could also charge you up to $294 to turn it back on.

Why solar? Why now?

TANYA BODELL

Last week, while presenting as co-chair of the Alternative Energy Committee on the status of two potential solar arrays to be developed on town land, a selectman inquired as to whether the committee had performed a study of all potential renewable resources in the town. We have not. If we were to perform such a study, however, I expect that it would conclude that solar is the only renewable resource likely to be technically, socially, and economically feasible for Cohasset at this time.

Solar arrays: The Town of Cohasset has at least two technically feasible sites for development – the town landfill and the school roofs. The profile of a solar array on these sites will be unobtrusive yet educational, realizing additional value from town property without imposing on the view or property values of neighboring properties. Municipal solar arrays in Massachusetts remain eligible for numerous state and federal tax credits and incentives such as the federal Investment Tax Credit (ITC), state solar renewable energy credits (SRECs), net metering credits (NMCs), and potentially preferred property tax treatment. Taking advantage of these incentives, the town could receive an immediate discount on its electricity costs from operational solar arrays of up to $100,000 per year in exchange for an up-front investment cost of $21,000. Although the details will be determined through the upcoming competitive request for proposal process, solar panels are most likely to be technically, socially, and economically feasible.

On-shore wind: The town already has explored the potential for wind turbines and town bylaws place considerable restrictions on what can and cannot be built. Since the bylaw was passed, most of the federal tax credits supporting wind, including investment grants and Production Tax Credits (PTC) under the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 have expired. The pending state energy bill would place electric utilities in a better position than municipalities to procure wind energy and pass the above-market costs through to its consumers. Although technically feasible, the town's recent experience indicates that on-shore wind would face significant community challenges.

Off-shore wind: Off-shore wind is likely to be contentious and economically costly. Setting aside an anticipated debate over the aesthetics and safety of off-shore wind turbines, the Town of Cohasset is not likely to assume the purchase price for energy at the rate required to support off-shore wind. Cape Wind and National Grid agreed to a price of $187 per megawatt-hour in 2013, with a 3.5 percent escalation rate. Higher than the current price Cohasset pays for delivered energy, off-shore wind is not likely to be economically or socially feasible under current conditions.

Hydro power: Harnessing the power of the tides at the Border Street Bridge and Little Harbor Inlet with an advanced micro hydro turbine systems seems tempting. However, costs could be prohibitive at this time as well as socially controversial given recreational access these waterways enable.

Biomass: Potentially viable if a sufficiently low-cost fuel source can be found, the state has challenged biomass as a clean energy resource, imposing emissions standards that make it technically, socially, and economically infeasible.

Geothermal: Far away from the ring of fire, geothermal power is not technically feasible in Cohasset for purposes of producing electricity, although geothermal heating systems could be considered for new town buildings.

Given the combination of existing federal and state incentives, solar arrays on otherwise unused town property have the potential to lower the town's energy costs. The Alternative Energy Committee is undertaking a process to confirm that such savings can be realized.

Please feel free to contact the members of the committee with questions and suggestions at our new email address: AEC@cohassetma.org

GROWING ON THE FARM

Sweet tastes of summer

JON BELBER

Are the tomatoes and corn ready yet?

This commonly and frequently asked question from summer program participants, their parents and many a customer at the farm stand and farmers market makes an organic farmer reply, "no, not yet."

There are several reasons as to why not just yet. One is that Holly Hill Farm does not grow corn (primarily sweet corn is the sought after) though we have grown ornamental corn in previous years for dried wreath bouquets. Corn takes a long while to produce those delightful ears that summer folks love to dip into boiling water and then roll onto sticks of butter. At its peak, I like to eat it raw off the cob, as it seems to hold more of its sweet flavor.

To grow corn organically takes a lot of space and a lot of understanding, as the porous fruit is prone to many a worm and disease, so one has to sacrifice a great deal to corn's predators, in order to have a healthy yield. At Holly Hill, with about three and a half to four acres under cultivation, we tend to focus more on a variety of crops, rather than focusing on one or two main crops. And though in July, some songs seem to sing that it should be as high as an elephant's eye, organic corn is not really ready in Massachusetts until August. The signs I see along the roadside and at markets for native corn intrigue me, as it is a clever marketing scheme to promote corn, as it was 'native' to somewhere when it grew, though most likely this early with the aid of genetically modified treatment and the application of a chemical fertilizer. But, like an ice cream sundae on a Friday afternoon, in this oppressive heat, sweet corn is hard to beat. My father raves about Jersey corn and Jersey tomatoes, but alas, the Garden State does geographically lie in the mid-Atlantic.

As for tomatoes at Holly Hill, or the ones you may see these days at a farmers market, it is also about timing. Started as seed in early April at Holly Hill, the young tomato seedling takes a month and a half to establish its sturdy structure and does not go into the ground until early June. Then the plant needs trellising, staking and the chance to produce flowers, fruit and ripen.

So, no, the tomatoes at Holly Hill are not quite ready yet. Since we have had heat and sun – two of their favorite elements – the currently green fruit on the vine might ripen before Aug. 1, with smaller cherry tomatoes coming even sooner. Some devout eaters of this fruit do patiently wait for organic tomatoes, especially those of the heirloom variety. After the waiting, there is always the opportunity to can and freeze these summer treats to hold one over until the season begins anew.

And even though there is a yen to slightly hurry up the season, some good, juicy, sustainably raised crops may well be worth the wait. BLT, a tomato sauce or on a stick, a fresh tomato, without the worry of traveling or wonder about the applied spray from a far away field may have to suffice for the upcoming short season.

Look toward beets, carrots and summer squash, before asking about corn and tomatoes, as they too are great New England July crops. Organic farming takes time, as we are not in New Jersey and some wish to support local endeavors, native to a farm near you.

HEALTH NOTES

Surviving in the heat

STEVE BOBO

Air-conditioning is the number one protective factor against heat-related illness and death.

What with the spate of summer competitive events going on in town, we are bound to need to know the effect of heat on runners, cyclists, etc. one can only go back a few years to 2002, the hottest August on record, when the Center for Disease Control told us what happened and what we did to avoid the effects of the summer heat. Over the last 20 years, excessive heat exposure caused 8,015 deaths in the United States. During this period, more people in this country died from extreme heat than from hurricanes, lightning, tornadoes, floods, and earthquakes combined. Even young and healthy individuals can succumb to heat, so we should reduce our participation in strenuous physical activities during hot weather. Air-conditioning is the number one protective factor against heat-related illness and death. If a home is not air-conditioned, people can reduce their risk for heat-related illness by spending time in public facilities that are air-conditioned. We are also helping prevent heat-related illness by frequently drinking water or nonalcoholic fluids; wearing lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing; or doing our exercising during cooler parts of the day. Periodically checking on neighbors who do not have air conditioning is recommended or bringing them along when you check on neighbors who do have air conditioning is probably good too.

The most serious complication of overheating is heat stroke. Heat stroke occurs when the body is unable to regulate its temperature. The body's temperature rises rapidly, the sweating mechanism fails, and the body is unable to cool down. Body temperature may rise to 106°F or higher within 10 to 15 minutes. Heat stroke can cause death or permanent disability if emergency treatment is not provided.

Warning signs of heat stroke vary but may include the following:

- An extremely high body temperature (above 103°F, orally)
- Red, hot, and dry skin (no sweating)
- Rapid, strong pulse
- Throbbing headache
- Dizziness, Nausea and/or Confusion
- Unconsciousness

If you see any of these signs, you may be dealing with a life-threatening emergency. Have someone call for immediate medical assistance while you begin cooling the victim. Do the following:

- Get the victim to a shady area and cool him rapidly using whatever methods you can. For example, immerse the victim in a tub of cool water; place the person in a cool shower; spray the victim with cool water from a garden hose; sponge the person with cool water; or if the humidity is low, wrap the victim in a cool, wet sheet and fan him or her vigorously.
- Monitor body temperature, and continue cooling efforts until it drops to 101-102°F.
- If medical personnel are delayed, call a hospital emergency room for instructions.
- Do not give the victim alcohol to drink, and get medical assistance as soon as possible.

Sometimes a victim's muscles will begin to twitch uncontrollably as a result of heat stroke. If this happens, keep the victim from injuring himself, but do not place any object in the mouth and do not give fluids. Keep his air passages clear.

Other heat related illnesses such as heat exhaustion, heat rash, and sunburn are less life threatening.

Dress sensibly for any outside tasks you may be planning. Just remember, you can always put on more clothes, but there's a limit to how much you can take off.

POLITICALLY SPEAKING

Brown and Warren clash over Obamacare, jobs

MATT GREGORY

The decision made by the U.S. Supreme Court on June 28 to uphold the constitutionality of the Affordable Care Act, or Obamacare, has immense implications for President Obama's legacy, the upcoming Presidential election, and especially the U.S. Senate contest between candidates Senator Scott Brown and Elizabeth Warren, both of whom hold distinct views on the controversial topic. In what is likely to be the second-most important race for the nation this fall, as the Massachusetts Senate seat could provide the decisive vote against Obamacare, the Brown-Warren competition will assuredly focus on the issue of nationwide healthcare as well as the related areas of job creation and federal spending. The candidate best able to gain the Commonwealth's support on these issues will likely represent Massachusetts in Washington after November.

Brown and Warren take distinctly divergent stances on national healthcare legislation. Warren has pledged to fight to retain an Obamacare law that she feels should not be challenged again after it was ruled constitutional by the Supreme Court, stating on her website her determination to protect provisions such as ending the denial of insurance to people with preexisting conditions, lowering the cost of prescription medication for seniors, and allowing people up to age 26 to retain use of their parents' insurance policies. On the other hand, Brown has voted to repeal Obamacare and has stated on multiple occasions his support for state-based healthcare systems as opposed to federally implemented coverage. Moreover, Brown is determined to protect industries such as medical device production corporations, who will see a tax increase beginning in 2013 should Obamacare be retained.

While the debate between Brown and Warren over the merits of Obamacare is rooted in the traditional split between Republicans and Democrats over the role of the federal government in providing benefits that could be given by individual states, it also is intertwined with the controversial questions facing the government regarding taxes, spending, and job creation. Beginning in 2013, taxes on medical device manufacturers and on individuals earning more than $200,000 per year will increase, in addition to the penalty Obamacare imposes upon those without health coverage. Senator Brown has decried the taxes levied by Obamacare, stating that they constitute a "wet blanket over the industry," and act as a "job killer."

Brown's attacks against Obamacare have largely stemmed from his desire to restrain federal spending and minimize taxes while at the same time ensuring job creation. As fears of a loss of jobs due to Obamacare taxes constitute a major reason for his rejection of nationwide healthcare, Brown has taken this rhetoric to another level by stating that Obamacare supporter Warren, who "is in favor of higher taxes and more spending," is a "jobs destroyer." However, Brown's record on promoting job creation in Massachusetts and around the nation is inconsistent; in 2011, Brown, along with other Senate Republicans, voted to block the Rebuild America Jobs Act, Teachers and First Responders Back to Work Act, and American Jobs Act, the combination of which would have created millions of jobs across America and over 40,000 new jobs in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. While Brown has organized programs such as jobs fairs to increase employment in the Bay State, he has strictly adhered to his principles of minimizing federal spending and taxes, highlighting the divergence in view between Brown and the pro-spending Warren that exists even in the realm of job creation.

In addition to outlining their diverging economic philosophies through action and rhetoric, both candidates have also attempted to gain support by inflaming the sentiments of the Massachusetts populace, with Warren sarcastically asking Brown to personally notify senior citizens who would have to pay more for prescription medication should Obamacare be repealed and Brown accusing Warren of misleading voters. Ultimately, however, the debate over Obamacare has come down to money; while both candidates state their desire for all Americans to receive health insurance, differences in economic ideology will determine who is elected in November and, upon election, what he or she will accomplish in Washington. While the polls may be "too close to call" at this point, it is certain that as Nov. 3 approaches, the candidates' rhetoric will intensify and healthcare and job creation will remain essential issues of contention.

ONE-DAY ADVENTURES

Taylor made for Tanglewood

Since moving to the South Shore in 2007, I have established two Independence Day traditions. Tradition number 1 is waking up ridiculously early for a non-work day to run the annual Hingham Road Race with over 2,000 other weekend warriors. Barreling down historic Main Street into the flag-waving crowd will always get my patriotic juices flowing. Tradition number 2 is driving 153 miles west through the beautiful Berkshire Mountains to see the great singer/songwriter James Taylor perform at Tanglewood.

Tanglewood is nestled in the picturesque town of Lenox, population 5,077, and has been the 210-acre summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1937. In 1938 a 5,100-seat fan shaped shed was constructed and, with just some minor modifications, it still stands today. While the shed is a unique venue with outstanding acoustics, the expansive perfectly manicured lawn is where you want to be. The gates open a few hours prior to every performance so attendees can bring in a picnic blanket, a Frisbee, a bottle of wine and enjoy the one of a kind setting. Kids under the age of 5 are not allowed inside the music shed itself, but they are allowed on the lawn. It is not uncommon to see three generations picnicking together prior to a show.

Lenox, is a small town with a definite artistic aura. Usually we will arrive in town around lunchtime on the day of the show and try to score a table on the porch at Alta Restaurant & Wine Bar Church Street for a Vegetarian Sandwich, really good local and organic ingredients. After popping in and out of a few local shops, we will head to "The Bookstore" on Housatonic Street for some browsing and then purchase a pre-show children's book for our daughter Amanda. Finally, just prior to heading into the venue, we will stop at Nejaime's Wine Cellar for a bottle of wine, a couple of gourmet cheeses and some homemade hummus.

James Taylor has been one of the most celebrated singer/songwriters for over 40 years. With hits like "Fire & Rain" and "Something in the Way She Moves" he has sold more than 40 million albums during his Rock & Roll Hall of Fame career. James Taylor's July 2 to 4 performances marked his twenty-first summer at Tanglewood since his first appearance in 1974. For two hours, 25 songs plus priceless storytelling in between, his iconic deep baritone voice meshes perfectly with the natural surroundings of Tanglewood. Of course, the mostly New England crowd cheers the loudest for the lyrics " . . . so was the Turnpike from Stockbridge to Boston . . " in the song Sweet Baby James." The 20-minute big time fireworks display at the end is the whipped cream of top of an already delicious Fourth of July apple pie.

After an epic Fourth of July celebration with friends and/or family, wake up the next morning and head to Spoon for their Farmer's breakfast risotto or amazing chocolate chip pancakes. If you are not ready for the adventure to end, you can catch a Pittsfield Colonials baseball game at Wahonah Park, built in 1919, one of the last remaining wood grandstands in the U.S., or head to the top of Mt. Greylock, the highest peak in Massachusetts, either on foot on in your car. Also, leave time to shop for some funky eclectic vintage collectibles at the Retro Pop Shop on Route 20 heading back to the Mass Pike. I purchased a sweet bowl made out of "Chicago 17" vinyl on our most recent trip.

While Independence Day 2013 is roughly 350 days away, there are several other great all-ages shows at Tanglewood this season including Laureate Conductor John Williams 80th Birthday Celebration featuring his most popular works from film and concert stage on Aug. 18, Wynton Marsalis on Aug. 20 and Grammy winning rockers Train on Aug. 31. Last I checked tickets were still available for all three shows.

A couple of additional quick tips for whenever you go...

Assuming you are on a budget like us, the Best Western in Pittsfield is a pretty affordable option. Renovated in July 2011 and less than nine miles on the back roads to Tanglewood parking, and might save you an hour plus on post show traffic.

Leave the clumsy-to-carry chairs at home; it is easier to rent them for $5 at the venue. Can even pre-book via Symphony Charge.

James Taylor 2013 will sell out. Check on line in mid-January for on sale dates.

John McMahon would love to hear from you, whether you have questions, comments or maybe even ideas for one-day adventures. He can be reached via e-mail at jmcmahon131@gmail.com

FOR THE RECORD

Turning up the political heat

GREGORY MATHIS

We're still very much in the lazy, hazy humid days of summer, with thoughts of political primaries and general elections buried deep beneath the sand we're digging our toes in at the beach.

Most folks are focused on summer vacation plans and keeping the kids busy with days camps and other activities and paying very little attention to the political chatter coming from local and national politicians.

But that isn't stopping the chatter, even though the Sept. 6 primary election is still in the distance beyond heading back to school and Labor Day. Truth be told, there isn't a lot of buzz heading into the primary, with only a handful of party races to be determined by maybe a couple of handful of voters just getting back into a regular routine.

Not to diminish those squaring off in a primary for the local state representative and state senator seats up for grabs, but the real excitement will build heading into the Nov. 6 Presidential Election.

There's no doubt much is at stake politically Nov. 6. Obama and Romney are slugging it out on the biggest stage, Scott Brown continues to duke it out with Elizabeth Warren for the privilege of representing Massachusetts in the U.S. Senate, and Congressmen and women are getting ready to reshuffle the decks after losing a Congressional seat following the most recent U.S. Census.

But before we get to that point we need to focus on the races closer to home, meaning the state rep and senate contests.

Even with most of us in summer mode, local candidates have been clamoring for attention and looking to get word out through our newspapers and websites to potential voters (without having to pay for ads just yet).

So, between now and the primary election, we'll be providing candidates with the opportunity to address issues and inform the public about their campaigns through various political columns, which may differ in name depending on what town you live in, but will include basically the same type of information.

Candidates will have the option to announce dates for coffees and meet and greets, as well as fundraisers and will also be able to submit position statements on issues of relevance in the race, with the statements focusing on the candidate's position and not attacking an opponent's position.

Both opportunities come with word limits that will be set by individual editors, so if you're running for office and would like more specifics, please contact the local editor listed on the masthead on the Opinion page.

During election season we don't accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters attacking particular candidates. We'll gladly publish letters from citizens not seeking election concerning political issues, but keep the discussion civil. Our goal is to give residents a forum for expressing their opinion and encouraging community conversation, but we don't want to turn the pages of our newspaper or our website into a free-for-all with negative attacks and twisted facts. We'll get plenty of that from the national campaigns over the next four months.

Send your thoughts on the 2012 political season to gmathis@wickedlocal.com and I'll include some of them in an upcoming column.

Gregory Mathis is editor-in-chief of GateHouse Media New England's South and Cape Cod units.

BRIDGE

makes the penalties difficult to enforce.

Officials also took a stance at last week's Board of Selectmen meeting stating that bridge jumping is dangerous and against the law in Cohasset. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski called last week's accident a "near fatality," adding that while the Roxbury youth was lucky to be alive, the incident "creates a public safety issue."

The police department recently hired a summer patrolmen whose chief duties involve bridge and parking enforcement. James Hudson, a senior criminal justice major at Westfield State, will patrol the area on a mountain bike and the recently obtained All Terrain Utility Vehicle (called a "mule"), which was provided to the department by a grant from Kawasaki. The town has free use of the mule until Sept. 30, 2012, after which it will be returned to Kawasaki; the only cost to the town is fuel.

Online readers weigh in

Some residents expressed on the Mariner's Facebook page and Wicked Local website that the local government's stance on bridge jumping puts a damper on the fun. Most seemed to concur that jumpers do so at their own risk, and anyone taking part, from children to adults, should already know how to swim.

"I've seen jumpers as young as seven or eight, but they were all people who knew how to swim," one Facebook user wrote. "And usually accompanied by their parents or elder siblings who knew how to swim. What should be done to stop the jumping is nothing."

Another Facebooker chimed in, "I started jumping there way younger than 12. I grew up on the harbor and, as most of the kids in Cohasset, took swimming lessons from the start. Kids are gonna [sic] jump. It's all part of the rite of passage and the thrill."

Some argued that if jumping is outlawed, the town should also outlaw swimming. Still, others said that they agreed with town officials on the dangers of jumping and the need for better monitoring of the bridges.

One user noted that while jumping is a local rite of passage, "even if you can swim, you can drown... It only takes one person to jump without knowing how to swim to cause a tragedy."

Those who attempt to rescue a flailing jumper are also at risk of getting injured or drowning.

"I am told it is fun, but the risks are too great," another Facebooker said.

The Mariner posed this question as an online poll:

"What should the town do to curb jumping off the Border Street bridge?"

The majority of voters (27 percent) said they were in favor of installing special fencing to prevent jumping; 23 percent believe that with frequent patrols, Cohasset is already doing enough. 11 percent were in favor of having the jumpers arrested or ticketed. The option of hiring a full-time summer officer to patrol the bridges, meanwhile, did not garner any votes.

SOLAR

into other alternative energies, such as hydro or wind, and was told no; she then wanted to know why not. Capital Budget Committee member Jack Keniley, in the audience, said that Gjesteby had made a good point. Gjesteby said after the meeting that she was dissatisfied with the AEC members' answers at the meeting.

AEC co-chair Tanya Bodell said she and her fellow committee members were unable to tackle all of the questions during their brief presentation and did not have all the information up front. However, Bodell took to writing her own commentary for the Mariner, in which she explains why the committee is looking into solar power, and why now, over options like hydro or wind.

Bodell further explained in a phone call that the AEC is trying to find alternative energy projects that are "technically, economically and socially feasible."

Solar, explained Bodell, is one of the few types of alternative energy that meets all three of these criteria. Hydro is too expensive, she said, while wind is too politically contentious. Cohasset's AEC tried to bring a wind turbine to town for over five years and ultimately failed to do so, Bodell said.

"I think the AEC did an incredible job before," she said. "There were just forces outside of their control that prevented wind from being realized."

Bodell explained that current state and federal incentives, along with low wholesale prices for electricity, make solar an economically attractive energy option for towns.

"Solar makes the most sense and we're going to pursue it," Bodell said. "If it turns out it doesn't make sense we're going to make a decision, but it will be an informed decision."

The selectmen voted 4-1 to allow the AEC to hire special counsel to assist on the RFP to bid for a solar energy vendor; Gjesteby was the dissenting vote. In a phone call to the Mariner, she explained that she is against the committee getting private counsel when she believes Town Counsel could be utilized.

"I thought we have people in the [town's] law firm that could handle it," said Gjesteby. "They lean towards environmental [law]."

BUTTONWOOD BOOKS & TOYS

Find Waldo in Cohasset

Where's Waldo? in Cohasset, of course. Waldo is turning 25 this year, and to celebrate, the famous fellow in the striped shirt and black-rimmed specs is visiting 20 different Cohasset businesses all through the month of July. Those who spot him can win prizes, including buttons, books and more. From Buttonwood Books & Toys, 747 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., to 5 South Main, 5 South Main St. to Atlantic Bagel & Deli, 47 South Main St. to Bumble Bee Landing, 24 South Main St. to Darilynn's, 64 South Main St. to Del's Lemonade, Jonathan Livingston Square to Mr. Dooley's Olde Irish Village Pub, 9 Depot Court to Good Sport, 166 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. to Hingham Lumber, 165 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. to JJs Junction, 2 Pleasant St. to King Jewelers, 812 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. (closed July 1 through 9) to Paperscapes, 47 S. Anyone who wishes to participate can pick up a Find Waldo in Cohasset search list with the names of all the businesses, and collect an "I Found Waldo at _____" card for each Waldo they spot. Collecting cards in 16 or more businesses and turning them in at Buttonwood Books & Toys will win a Waldo button or a prize and an entry for other, larger prizes to be drawn at a Waldo party on July 31. The grand prize is a complete six-volume set of Waldo books. People who prefer a shorter version of the hunt can collect the cards from eight businesses and pick up a Waldo button or a prize at Buttonwood Books & Toys. There is no charge to participate, and the game lasts until July 30, with the grand celebration party taking place on Tuesday, July 31 at Buttonwood Books & Toys.

Volume 38 - Report No. 28 July 9-13, 2012

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 313C

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on three roll calls and local senators on one roll call from the week of July 9-13.

	Y	Y
KEEP TAUNTON STATE HOSPITAL OPEN (H 4000)
House 152-0, Senate 39-0, overrode Gov. Patrick's veto of $5.1 million in funding for the Taunton State Hospital to keep the psychiatric facility open to serve patients with mental illnesses at a diminished, 45-bed capacity, down from 169 beds.
Override supporters said that closing the facility would leave many Southeastern Massachusetts residents with mental health problems with no local facility to which they can go. They argued that moving patients to a facility in Worcester would be disruptive to those who might not be able to visit their family member at a more distant location.
The Patrick administration said the antiquated 150-year-old Taunton facility is not cost-effective. They noted the new Worcester Recovery Center and Hospital has more of a residential and neighborhood feel to it compared to older facilities that are set in a more institutionalized and cold environment.
(A "Yes" vote is for the $5.1 million.)
WELFARE EBT CARDS (H 4237)	*	N
House 1-152, Senate on a voice vote without a roll call, rejected Gov. Deval Patrick's version of a proposal, already approved by the Legislature, restricting the use of electronic benefit transfer (EBT) cards by welfare recipients. The governor's version would delete several of the Legislature-approved restrictions and allow the cards to be used for vacation services, body piercings, jewelry, rent-to-own stores and bail.
The governor left many of the Legislature's other restrictions intact including strip clubs, adult bookstores, adult paraphernalia stores, firearms dealers, ammunitions dealers and cruise ships. Current law already bans the purchase of alcoholic beverages, lottery tickets and tobacco products.
The governor said some of the restrictions set by the Legislature were opposed by the special commission that researched and evaluated the illegal use of EBT cards. He noted he agreed with the commission's recommendation that the prohibitions be on usage in particular establishments, rather than prohibitions on particular items.
Opponents of Patrick's version said it is time to crack down on the abuse of EBT cards and ensure that taxpayers' hard-earned dollars are used only for necessities like food. They noted the purchase of non-essentials is outrageous.
(A "Yes" vote is for the governor's limited restrictions. A "No" vote is against the limited restrictions.)
REQUIRE PROOF OF LEGAL OR ILLEGAL RESIDENCE (H 4238	*	N
House 12-140, Senate on a voice vote without a roll call, rejected Gov. Patrick's version of a proposal, already approved by the Legislature, that would require applicants to provide proof of "legal residence" in order to register their car. The governor's version would require proof of "residence," legal or illegal.
Gov. Patrick said allowing an illegal alien to own a vehicle in Massachusetts does not jeopardize the public's safety. He argued that on the contrary, it serves the public's safety interests to know the name and location of the owner of every vehicle on the road.
Opponents of the governor's version said it is too weak and will still allow illegal aliens to drive on the roadways. They argued it is time to allow only legal residents to register a car in Massachusetts.
(A ""Yes" vote is for the governor's proposal requiring proof of residence, illegal or legal. A "No" vote is against it.)

ORDER OF THE THREE NOVEMBER 2012 BALLOT QUESTIONS - Secretary of State William Galvin announced the order in which the three certified ballot questions will appear on the 2012 ballot. Question 1 would require auto manufacturers to sell to non-dealer repair shops complete repair information and diagnostic tools. Question 2 would allow terminally ill patients with fewer than six months to live to obtain medication they can self-administer to commit suicide. Question 3 would allow medical use of marijuana.

EMERGENCY RESPONSE IN SCHOOLS (S 2132) - A law that would require every school in Massachusetts to have a written medical emergency response plan takes effect on July 17. The measure is designed to "reduce the incidence of life-threatening emergencies and promote efficient responses to such emergencies." It is called "Michael's Law" in memory of 16-year-old Michael Ellsessar of Sutton, who died suddenly of cardiac arrest during a high school football game.

Provisions include requiring establishment of a rapid communication system linking all inside and outside parts of the school campus to the emergency medical service system; a determination of emergency medical service response time to any location on campus; and a method of providing access to training in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and first aid for teachers, coaches and other school staff.

EASIER HIV TESTING (S 2158) - A new law that would allow doctors to test for the HIV virus with only verbal consent of the patient is scheduled to take effect on July 27. Massachusetts was one of only two states that still require written permission from patients.

Supporters said the change would reduce the transmission of the virus from mother to child, which is almost totally preventable if the mother is tested. They argued there are an estimated 5,000 people in the state who don't know they have HIV because they have never been tested. They noted the change will result in more people getting tested and receiving life-extending treatment.

STANDARDS FOR DEMENTIA UNITS (H 3947) - The governor signed into law legislation requiring the state Department of Public Health to establish minimum standards for dementia special care units in long-term care facilities in order to ensure the safety and quality of services.

The regulations must include dementia training for all direct care workers and guidelines for the physical design of dementia units, including taking into consideration the best design that would help prevent dangerous wandering by patients.

explained, adding that the patio was typically used only for private functions, such as wedding receptions. "During the week it was underutilized. We wanted to take advantage of what is probably the best view anywhere," he said.

Campbell worked with design consultant Moriah Garrett on an all-new look. Meanwhile, Atlantica executive chef Garry Payne went to work dreaming up a tapas menu.

The tapas concept was inspired by Campbell's travels in New York, Colorado and Las Vegas. "There's nothing like that around here," he said.

Campbell figured the concept would work well in the Harbor Inn, which has a small kitchen, because tapas dishes are small. "You can make a lot of items in small quantities," he said.

While Payne had experience cooking up Spanish cuisine, the Inn brought in another chef with commensurate expertise. Liz Samatis, who had traveled in Spain, was brought onboard as Brisa's chef de cuisine in February. "Liz does a terrific job," said Campbell.

Recipes tried out on locals

The chefs spent the winter months concocting the menu, hoping for a spring opening. They tried their recipes out on the locals during Thursday night tapas tastings at the Atlantica; by June, they had tested out the menu in its entirety.

And while Brisa wasn't ready for prime time in the spring, its June 17 opening went off without a hitch.

"We opened in time for summer," said Campbell. "The minute we opened, people came. We've been getting high reviews and return visitors."

"It's been so busy every night," said Brisa manager Tracy Remillard. "We already have regulars."

The manager believes the social atmosphere is a big part of the tapas appeal. "The food is meant to be shared," she said. "It promotes fun and celebration, and people love that."

While big groups can order and share appetizers, Remillard added that tapas are ideal for couples as well; sharing dishes "is more intimate," she said. "It's great for date night."

Despite the romantic setting, complete with mood lighting, the manager said that so far, Brisa's has proven to be the destination for book clubs and girls' night out. Groups of women are our biggest clientele," Remillard said.

Perhaps it's because eating tapas is supposed to be a communal experience. "It's very interactive, passing plates from one end of the table to the other, sampling everything," said Payne. "When you go out to dinner, it should be fun; tapas can be fun with food."

Tapas are not only fun, said Garrett — they're filling. "People are so much more satisfied by a variety of tastes and flavors," the design consultant said.

"The experience is even more fun for the palette," added Payne. "And we've got funky-cool chairs."

When redesigning the outdoor space, Garrett said she wanted to go for style and comfort. Chairs at the bar were painted a bright turquoise, practically reflecting the sea they overlook. A couch, with coordinating turquoise and gold pillows, was added for laid back, living room style dining. Garrett said this is Brisa's most coveted perch; due to popular demand, a second couch will be added soon. "People line up to sit there," Remillard said.

Rave reviews

The food is getting rave reviews so far, but the Harbor Inn managing partner acknowledged, "Location has a lot to do with it. . . . Obviously, it's a beautiful spot."

"This is the perfect setting for tapas," said Remillard. "It's like being in your own backyard, but on the harbor."

Adding to that backyard feel is the garden landscape lined with herbs and edible flowers. In keeping with the local, organic feel, Payne and Samatis bring fresh herbs and produce from their own gardens to Brisa's kitchen. Payne said that he reaches for seasonal, local, organic, pesticide-free produce whenever possible.

But for a Spanish-style restaurant, using local Cohasset crops has upped the culinary ante.

"We really wanted to focus on Spanish cuisine while staying true to local ingredients," said Samatis. So Brisa serves up local flavors of New England "with a Spanish twist."

The Spanish-style, Cohassetized dishes include paella made with chicken, shrimp, pork and mussels in saffron rice; a roasted beet and fennel salad; and crabcakes with white beans, tomato orange salsa and lemon.

Among the most popular dishes are the pulled pork empanadas, gambas al ajillo (sizzling garlic shrimp) and cocas (grilled flatbread). Patrons also go loco for the house-made sangria, which Payne said he and Samatis "worked on all winter long."

"People say it's phenomenal," said Remillard. Brisa also offers an extensive beer and wine list.

Although the restaurant has only been in business for a month, Remillard said that regulars are already asking for new dishes. Campbell explained that in the first month, only 80 percent of the menu was unveiled; now, Brisa is ready to debut six new dishes. Patrons can check the newly launched website and its correlating Facebook page for daily updates and specials. Regulars should anticipate a few surprises. "What's on the menu now might not be here this weekend," said Payne.

The chef added that Brisa "is very vegetarian/vegan-friendly," and also accommodates food-allergic customers. A key on the menu denotes which items are gluten-free.

If the harborside location, variety of dining options for any and all dietary needs, and casual outdoor setting still isn't enough of an appeal, there's always the price. Few items on the menu exceed $10.

"Tapas are value-driven," said Samatis. "We're serving small plates, but we want people to feel they've gotten a good value."

Spanish-style cuisine with local flavorings, here on the South Shore? Now there's a value.

Brisa Tapas & Wine is open for dinner Tuesday through Thursday and Sunday from 5 to 9 p.m., and on Friday and Saturday from 5 to 10 p.m. The restaurant will sometimes be closed for private functions.

SPORTS NOTES

LITTLE LEAGUE

Great season

Congratulations to the Cohasset Little League Williamsport Tournament team for a great tournament in the Little League District 8 Tournament.

After wins over Scituate and Hingham, Cohasset was eliminated by Hanover in a 4-1 loss in the next round.

Hanover went on to win the title with an 8-7 victory over Braintree in the championship game.

Braintree was the other team to beat Cohasset in the tournament.

YOUTH SOFTBALL

U14 Girls return to Freedom Field

The CYBSA is proud to announce that they will be fielding a U14 softball team in the competitive South Shore Summer Softball League this summer.

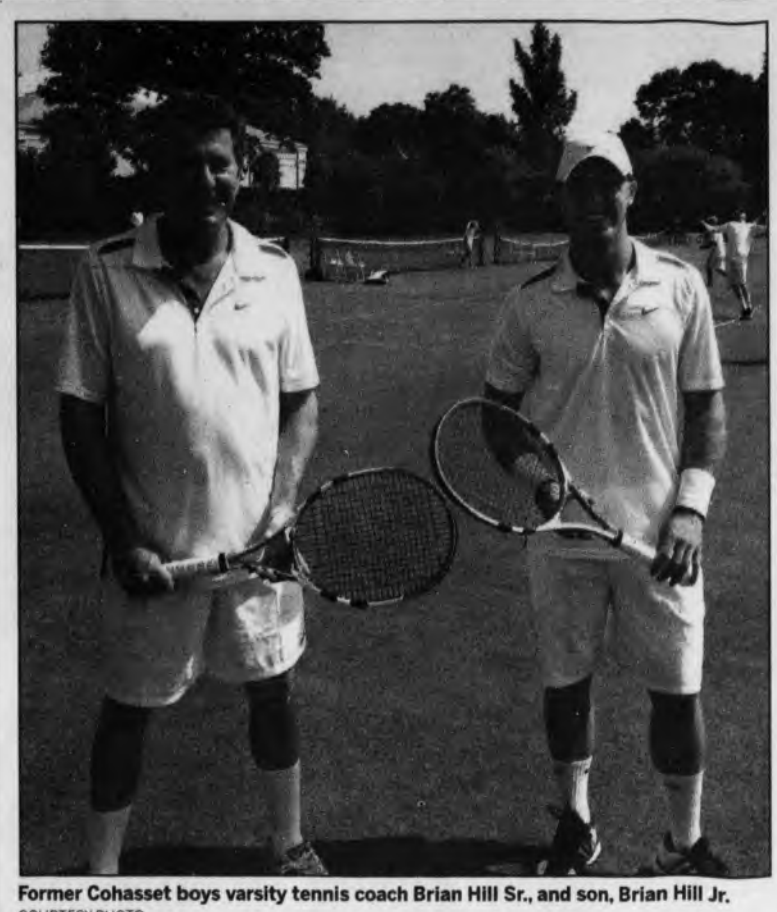
This is a local travel team that plays against teams from all over the South Shore. The league is competitive, but the team is seasoned, returning from playing in the league last summer. The girls will be led by the dedicated coaching team of Amy Brash, Jill Lawlor, Lee Stone, Tony Talacci and Peter Vitello.

Come out and watch the girls at Freedom Field in their final home game, Tuesday July 24.

FOOTBALL

Coastal Chiefs opener

The Coastal Chiefs football team of the New England Football League will play their first game in team history on Saturday night, July 21 at Hanover High School at 7 p.m. as they host the Whaling City Clippers.



The Chiefs, led by former Norwell High School varsity coach Jim Sullivan, and owned by Hanover alum Steve Santacroce, feature players from all over, including former Hanover players.

The plan for the team is to play football and use the sport to promote community and community service, giving back to the area in as many ways as possible.

Admission is $5

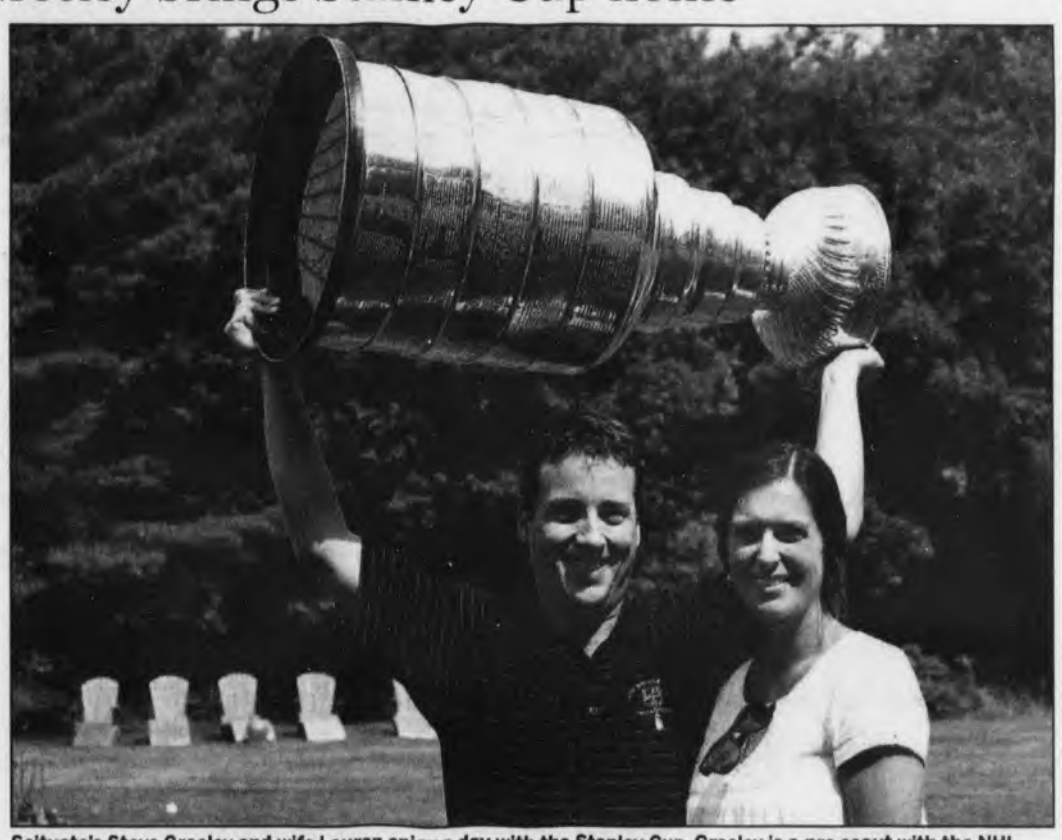
King for the day

Scituate's Greeley brings Stanley Cup home

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

For any hockey fan, the ultimate thrill of the sport can be summed up with one name – The Stanley Cup.

The Stanley Cup is the one trophy in all of professional sports that members of winning teams can take home for a day and share the glory with family, friends, fans and even celebrities.



Scituate's Steve Greeley had the opportunity to bring Lord Stanley's Cup home last week, and made the most of his day with the iconic trophy.

Greeley, who grew up in Scituate, is a now a pro-scout with the NHL champion Los Angeles Kings, and when his turn came up, he quickly made plans for a small gathering at his parents, Steve and Jan's Scituate home, and at Hatherly Country Club where he played tennis and golf as a youngster.

Greeley also played for the South Shore Seahawks, Milton Academy, Thayer Academy and Boston University (2000-2004) before spending a year (2004-05) in the minors with the Charlotte Checkers and Mississippi Sea Wolves.

Not long after that stint, which was also the lockout year in the NHL, Greeley found himself with the Kings.

"I got lucky," Greeley said. "I had hand written letters to every American born GM. Mike O'Connell had been fired from the Bruins. He's from Cohasset. He interviewed me at his house and 48 hours later I had a job (in the NHL). I was working as an investment banker at the time."

Greeley said that his current position is what he dreamed about.

"I got to live the dream of playing in the Beanpot Tournament, playing at BU," he said. "But I always aspired to work for an NHL team."

Greeley knew O'Connell, who is now the Kings Director of Pro Player Development before that fateful interview.

"Our families knew each other a little bit," Greeley said. "I caddied for him. I'd ask him a lot of questions. I'm a hockey rat. The fact that he would sit down and talk to me was great. Now I consider him a close friend. He's a great guy. As a mentor, I couldn't ask for a better guy to be around."

In his position, Greeley was a big factor in the Kings success. As a pro scout, Greeley's job keeps him busy during the season watching and keeping tabs on the entire NHL landscape.

"Part of my job is to feel the pulse of the team," he said. "I'm watching everything on the pro sides, trades free agency, waivers. It can be a

Fast break baseball

Quick paced play keeps Post 118 in playoff race

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

You might have to call it fast break baseball.

Cohasset/Scituate American Legion Baseball Post 118 coach Bob Barrows has his team playing at a quicker tempo and the results are speaking for themselves.

Post 118, which is in the middle of the Zone 6 East pennant race to determine which teams will finish in the top five and face the top five teams in Zone 6 West, had a productive week by playing a quicker tempo as they avenged an earlier 4-1 loss to Morrissette with a 7-4 win.

They then knocked off Milton, 5-1 and Weymouth, 3-1 to get them a step closer to a potential playoff spot.

"We are lettting our fielders do the work," said Barrows. "We have been able to keep our pitch counts down. Also, our pitchers have to work fast. They have to move it around and we have had success in our last couple of games. They get on the mound and throw strikes. The pitchers have done that. We have fielded the ball very well."

Cohasset, which concludes the regular season with a game at home with Braintree and are at Stoughton, has got solid pitching performances.

Chase Michaud turned in a complete game gem against Weymouth after Connor Gibbons came through with a strong outing against Milton. Both pitchers outdueled their opponent's pitching ace in the wins.

"This year, we have a great core group and we have put

TALKIN' GOLF

A special week for Brockton CC

PAUL HARBER

Brockton Country Club is a special nine-hole course that has been around for more than a century. COURTESY PHOTO

They celebrated into the night at Brockton Country Club last week and not because middle round of the traditional Brockton Four-Ball was played there on Saturday.

One of their own, Mike Calef, 33, a native of West Bridgewater, won the 104th State Amateur on Friday at Tedesco Country Club in Marblehead, a world away, both geographically and socially from Brockton.

And on Sunday, head professional Rob Bradley teamed with Ryan Riley to capture the City Four-Ball Championship, which has been dominated for many years by Thorny Lea players.

Calef, 33, came to the club as a junior and later became the director of golf, gave the pro golf tours a whirl before having his amateur status reinstated. Calef cut his teeth playing this nifty little nine-holer, where you have to hit it straight because you can go out of bounds on just about every hole.

Brockton Country Club is one of the oldest golf courses in the region, dating back to 1900 when the Keith family, a wealthy shoe manufacturer in these parts, had Alex Findlay walk off a nine-hole course.

Findlay was an eclectic course architect. He was from Scotland, came to America and became a cowboy in Wyoming for a while before he returned to the East Coast, worked at George Wright's sporting goods store in Boston and on Sundays, he would lay out golf courses.

And Brockton Country Club is one of his lasting monuments.

It is an out-of-the-ordinary golf course. There are three par-3s, three par-4s and three par-5s.

Some of the top players in the region, who come here for the City Four-Ball and City Open, which is held in September, say the best par-4s are its par-5s.

Some holes are quite unique.

The fifth hole is a sub-250 yard par-4 with an elevated green. Most long hitters hope to drive it. Before they expanded the green a few years back, it was the size of a picnic table.

Stoughton native Bruce Douglass, who played on the PGA Tour before becoming a Wall Street stockbroker, called it a 3-6 hole. You either make birdie or a double-bogey. Out of bounds straddles the right side of the hole and branches of meandering trees lurk out toward the fairway.

Another interesting hole is the eighth, a 450-yard par-5. Danny Neary, the teaching professional at Crosswinds Country Club in Plymouth, played at BCC when he was an amateur and once made a double-eagle-2, the rarest of shots on this hole. He used an iron for his approach.

All three par-3s can send you to the loony bin. The second is only 120 yards, but the green is concaved and if the pin is tucked, you can three-putt quicker than you can blink. The seventh for many years was a dogleg par-3 because you can to maneuver your tee shot around a row of overgrown trees that were invading the left side of the fairway. And the ninth is a blind shot. You won't know how good it is until you walk halfway up the fairway.

The membership is as eclectic as the golf course. They come from all walks of life and over the years they have been a true cast of characters.

For five years, we played at BCC and have enough memories to last a lifetime.

There was Hoops, who didn't feel well one day walking down the first fairway. He felt like he was having a heart attack. His concerned playing partners took him back to the clubhouse. He was about to put his shoes away and said the heck with it and went out and played 18; and stayed at the 19th hole late into the evening reminiscing about his round.

And there was Creature, a hulking sort with a booming voice. After everyone had played and returned to the 19th hole, he would organize a three-hole one-club scramble. Teams would be made up, everyone would put in $5 and they stagger to their assigned tees and play. Of course it would finish in darkness and all the money won would be left on the bar so everyone could have a free drink.

There was Cookie, who never bought anyone a drink, and Alex the Greek, who loved to play Forty-Five, a unique card game that is only played in this neighborhood of the world. There was Joe the Loop who could start his drive out of bounds right and when his ball finally landed, it could be just in-bounds left. There was Mike, who had his leg amputated and still maintained a single-digit handicap with or without his prosthesis.

They talk about Ponkapoag Golf Course having a cast of characters; Brockton could match it man for man.

There were so many great guys and gals.

Oh, the 19th hole is perfectly situated at the first tee, sixth green, seventh tee, eighth fairway and ninth green so golfers would have plenty of opportunities to quench their thirst.

It has always been a fun-loving golf course with a jovial membership, which has good reason to celebrate this week. One of their native sons won the 104th State Amateur and the City Four-Ball is theirs.

Quite a golf vacation

Notes and quotes from around the region

Mike Calef putts off fringe in the final round of the State Amateur.
COURTESY PHOTO FROM MASSACHUSETTS GOLF ASSOCIATION AND DAVID COLT

It was a great weekend for golf in the Brockton area.

First Mike Calef wins the State Open and then Ryan Riley of Easton and Rob Bradley of Brockton capture the Brockton Four-Ball Championship.

Calef, who moved to Texas last fall, returned to New England to visit and play some golf and it couldn't have turned out better.

The West Bridgewater native and former director of golf at Brockton Country Club won the 104th Massachusetts Amateur Championship at Tedesco Country Club last Friday.

He defeated Mark Souliotis of Haverhill CC, 3 and 1, in a 36-hole match-play final on to be crowned the best amateur golfer in the state.

"This is huge," the 33-year-old Calef told reporters. "It's my No. 1 (tournament). Every year, I've always geared myself to play in the Mass. Amateur, even when I moved to Texas. I would have never thought I would have a trophy at the end of the week. It was fantastic, and much of it was completely unexpected."

Calef was exempt into the Mass. Amateur as a non-state resident because he still maintains his handicap at Brockton CC and he is also the reigning Mass. Mid-Amateur champion.

He had some unexpected help, too. Calef was one of the few competitors who had been carrying his own golf bag for the first three days. In Wednesday afternoon's Round of 16 match, Calef faced his good friend, Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich GC in Plymouth, whom he had practiced with last week and was to have paired with for this weekend's Brockton City Four-Ball.

That didn't happen. Instead, Calef edged Clapp on the 18th hole for a 1-up win, and then Clapp turned around and offered to be Calef's caddie for the duration of the Mass. Am.

"I had no interest in facing him so early on in match play," said Calef. "We butted heads, and I was fortunate enough to win. Then he turns around and says he would be more than happy to carry my bag. That's special. I owe him a lot, too.

"As the week went on, I realized that, without Doug, I would have lost with the bag on my own shoulders. It was a grind. This tournament is mentally exhausting. The course was getting tougher and the weather was getting hotter. I wouldn't be holding this trophy without Doug's support. That was a game-changer."

In the small world department, it turned out that Calef's final-match opponent, Souliotis, works for the same company (Raytheon) as Calef's wife, Alicia, and they know many of the same co-workers.

Back home, Calef's name was already up in lights by early Friday evening. Artie Yannone, a Brockton CC member and the owner of the Elm Court Hotel on Main Street in downtown Brockton, had his flashing message board read: "Congrats – Mike Calef – 2012 Mass. Amateur Golf Champ."

Riley, Bradley capture 4-Ball

Ryan Riley rode the emotional roller coaster last week. In the first couple of days, the defending State Amateur champion did not make it into the match-play portion of the tournament.

So he came home and teamed up with Hanover native Rob Bradley, the head pro at Brockton CC, to win the Brockton City Four-Ball.

And they did it in amazing fashion. Riley and Bradley erased a five-stroke deficit on the third and final day by fashioning a splendid 9-under-par 61 at Thorny Lea Golf Club for a three-day, 17-under 195 (66-68-61) and a one-stroke victory over George and Nick Zolotas of Thorny Lea (67-66-63-196), who finished second for the second straight year.

Three-time defending champions Steve Tasho and Matt Parziale of Thorny Lea, who led by three strokes going into the final round, finished tied for third (65-64-68-197) with LeBaron Hills head professional Tom Rooney and Ponkapoag assistant pro Mickey Folan (66-64-67-197).

In the field division, Rich Manning of Whitman and Sean Flynn of Hanson posted a 10-under 202 (67-66-69) to capture top honors and move into the seeded division next year. Dick Harris and Jim Cimini were second at 8-under 204 and Bill Butler and Brian Blanchard were third at 6-under 206.

In a bit of irony, it was Calef, the former director of golf at Brockton CC, who dethroned Riley to become the new State Amateur champion. Meanwhile, it was Bradley, who succeeded Calef as the new professional at Brockton CC, who helped make the club look good again playing with Riley to earn the Four-Ball title on Sunday.

"I love this course (Thorny Lea)," said Riley, who is also the reigning Mass. Golf Association Player of the Year in 2011. "We were behind, make that way behind, some state-caliber players, and needed to come out aggressively and make some short irons into greens. We stayed in every hole and never struggled."

Winning the City Four-Ball took some of the sting out of this year's early exit in the Mass. Amateur for Riley. Said Riley: "This summer has been humbling. My game hasn't been that sharp, so this was encouraging. This was the kind of round I had more than once last year."

First family of local golf

On July 25 the Massachusetts Golf Association will hold the Father & Daughter Championship at Bass Rocks Golf Course Club in Gloucester.

John and Mary Mulcahy of Scituate are the defending champions in the Junior Division. They also won the Senior Division championship in 2010.

The tournament began in 1981 and the first champion was another Scituate pair, the late Fordie Pitts and his daughter, Mary Lou, who is an important executive at Titleist and Footjoy.

Fordie Pitts won the championship with Mary Lou, or his other daughter, Karen, five times over the years.

For many years the Pitts family was the first family in golf. It is about time the MGA honors Fordie and it would be a nice gesture to name the championship trophy after the Pitts family.

They are all about golf and about playing it right.

We played many rounds ir the Cape Cod Pro-Am League with Fordie many years ago and we covered so many of his tournaments over the years. I think he was the first local golfer I ever interviewed and he was always a gentleman. It would be fitting to name this trophy after he and his family.

very long winter. I put in a lot of hours during the season and in the playoffs. I try to literally know every player out there.

"To me, guys at the pro level are all great players. We're always looking into trades, questions like how someone will fit into the salary cap. Is someone a good fit for a first line or a second line. We have made big moves at the trade deadline. This year we traded Jack Johnson to Columbus for Jeff Carter. Last summer we traded two great young players for Mike Richards."

Both players were instrumental in the Kings' run to the title.

Greeley was quick to praise the Kings as a whole.

"Our general manager (and team president), Dean Lombardi and Ron Hextall (vice president/asst. GM) are great," he said. "They kindly give the staff credit. It's a great organization. I feel a great part of it."

To answer the big question, Greeley was at 14 of 20 playoff games and had the opportunity to raise the cup on the ice when the Kings eliminated the Devils.

"It was thrilling, exciting," he said. "The emotion was unbelievable. To be a part of it to be so close to the wins and losses, it's unbelievable. This has just been amazing."

Greeley's mom, Jan a paraprofessional at Hatherly School, was thrilled with the visit, which moved to Hatherly, then to Charlestown Navy Yard where he shared it with his brothers and other friends.

"I'm thrilled for him," Jan said. "It's been a great year. He marries the girl of his dreams (Milton native, Lauren), they're having a first baby and won the Stanley Cup."

"There's a lot of pressure to name the baby Stanley," Steve said. "I can't believe how exciting this is. I want to share it with as many people as possible. That's what it's all about."

Steve Greeley, a scout with the LA Kings, chats with Ted Tobin of Scituate while they wait in a long line to get their picture taken with the Stanley Cup.

some stuff together to keep this group together," Barrows said. "We have things rolling with our win over Morrissette, our win over Milton, which had Willie Archibald on the mound and the win over Weymouth. Connor Gibbons pitched a great game for us against Milton."

Chris Murphy drove in two runs, while David Podurgiel, Jordan Jenkins and Rich Roche also provided key hits in the game.

"We got good hitting across the board against Milton," said Barrows.

Michaud held Weymouth to three hits in the game and got out of a couple of minor jams in his complete game win.

Post 118 took advantage of a bad hop single by Jamie Faber to start the fourth inning in a scoreless game. Faber eventually scored on a wild pitch.

Cohasset added to its lead in the fifth inning as they scored two runs.

Jenkins had a high hop single that went over a drawn in infield to drive in a run and scored on double by Faber to give Cohasset a 3-0 lead.

"The players have come together," Barrows said. "In each game the attitude is the same. They are going up to the plate and they are going for it. We started out quickly, but we slumped. I feel though we can play with anybody right now. The kids after Hyde Park clinched the top spot for National Tournament have been playing very well since then."

Cohasset is going at a high speed and they are picking up the pace to reach the Zone 6 playoffs.

Souled Out, Navy Band Northeast entertain on Cohasset Common

The Cohasset Recreation Department presents two upcoming concerts as part of its summer concert series:

Souled Out — 6 p.m. Thursday, July 26, sponsored by the McMorris family. Souled Out is a musical ensemble from Connecticut that specializes in the great Motown and Soul sounds. Featuring a three-piece vocal section, the group weaves its way through the Motown and 70s Soul eras with authentic choreographed dance routines and outstanding musicianship. Not only is Souled Out a sensational listening and dancing experience, but also an outstanding visual one as well!

Inspired by the music of the Temptations, the Four Tops. Stevie Wonder, the Spinners, the O'Jays and more, Souled Out brings the memorable music of those groups to the stage in a spirited, stylish and fun show that delivers with each performance. Fueled by a love for the music and backed by a superb band, Souled Out is the ultimate in musical nostalgia, entertaining in a way that both wows audiences and captures their hearts all over again.

U.S. Navy Band Northeast "Pops Ensemble" — Memorial Concert for Jack Worley. 6 p.m. Tuesday, July 31, sponsored by the Cohasset Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #9146, American Legion George H. Mealy Post #118, Sons of the American Legion.

Memorial Concert for Jack Worley, Cohasset Recreation Director 1976-2008, Decorated Navy Vietnam Veteran with a Marine Corp Infantry Battalion.

Navy Bands have always been an integral part of the Naval presence in Newport, dating back at least to the Civil War period. Navy Band Northeast was established in 1974, and is one of 13 official bands of the United States Navy worldwide.

Navy Band Northeast is recognized as one of the nation's finest military bands. The Cohasset Summer Concert Series is located on Cohasset Common. All performances are free, open to the public, and handicap accessible. JConcerts are funded in part through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. This program is supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency, which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency. GIMME SHELTER

Kerry is an adorable tiger cat

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to feature Kerry, who is a 1-year-old female tiger cat hoping to find someone who will share their home and loving care with her.

Kerry promises to be good and use the scratching post. She will play and purr, and with permission, sleep at the foot of your bed. She did live outside on her own for a while and it may be difficult to keep her in, though it seems as though she's settled down a bit and should do well in a home.

She would prefer to be an "only" but has learned to get along with another cat who shares a room with her. Kerry adores affection and loves to be held.

If interested in this adorable petite feline, please stop by and meet her; she can be irresistible. For more information, please call 781-534-4902.

You can visit her at the shelter where you can also meet all of our very adoptable cats.

HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org. HSAR sends out a huge thank you to its many supporters.

High School students, Transfer students, and Parents are all invited!

TRI FOR JETT

Locals inspired to compete for cause

By Laura DeSisto

Spend five minutes with Christine McSherry of the Jett Foundation and you would do a triathlon too. At least that's how Patrice Keniley of Cohasset feels. Keniley has never done anything like this before, but after meeting McSherry at a fundraiser and hearing about her cause, she joined team "Tri for Jett" which is competing in the Marsh Madness Triathlon on July 22 in support of the Jett Foundation.

"I was so impressed by Christine's passion and by what she has been able to accomplish that I felt compelled to support her cause when asked to join the triathlon team," says Keniley.

The team of 18, mostly Cohasset residents, is competing to raise funds and awareness for the foundation which Christine and her husband Stephen created in 2001 after receiving the devastating news that their then 5-year-old son Jett had Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy. Duchenne is a fatal, life-limiting form of muscular dystrophy and is the most common fatal genetic disorder diagnosed in childhood. Those who suffer from it are most often wheelchair bound by age 12 and do not live to see their 20th birthday.

During a recent conversation at the foundation's Kingston headquarters, McSherry became more animated speaking about her fight to save her son's life.

"We will not stop until we find a cure," said McSherry. "We recognize that time is of the essence for my son and all these young boys and that significant financial support for the research is needed right away."

By channeling this determination through the Jett Foundation, what McSherry has been able to accomplish in little more than a decade is nothing short of remarkable. Her first initiative was the creation of the Jett Program for Pediatric Neuromuscular Disorders at Mass General Hospital for Children. Next, she brought together nearly 40 separate like-minded foundations together to form the Duchenne Alliance.

Perhaps most notably, together with a web developer and scientist Carlo Rago PhD, founder of OpenOnward, McSherry played a critical role in helping to create an interactive, proprietary website called the "Duchenne Dashboard." The site showcases the best research studies currently underway in the fight against Duchenne. Scientists submit proposals describing their work on the site and then a handful of top-level scientific advisors critique them. Alliance members can then make well-informed decisions about which research studies they would like to fund. As a result, several very promising studies are nearly totally funded and many are partially funded – a feat that would have been virtually impossible a few years ago. This innovative funding model is beginning to attract international attention and many experts feel that once proven successful, it has the potential to rapidly increase the speed with which all diseases are cured.

Triathletes Patty Smith of Cohasset with Sarah Harvey of Hingham

Event sponsor Frank Campbell, President of Pilgrim Bank, with Todd DeSisto, triathlon participant and host of the kickoff party.

For Mark Maggi, a Boston Marathon qualifier who recently moved to Cohasset from Newton, that is what moved him to join the Tri for Jett team.

"To be able to use my skill and training to support a foundation that has this potential is so worthwhile," said Maggi.

In addition to the individual donations the team has received, several local businesses including Pilgrim Bank, Granite City Electric and BMW Gallery of Norwell have stepped up to support the cause. Fresh Feast and Local Vines and Gourmet Wine Shop of Cohasset contributed to the team's kickoff party.

Says team member Patty Smith of Cohasset, "I am always amazed by the generosity of the people and businesses on the South Shore. I feel so lucky to live here."

The Tri for Jett team is encouraging all those who are interested to learn more about the Jett Foundation and Duchenne to log onto razoo.com/story/Tri-For-Jett-2 where you may make a contribution to the team up until Aug. 1.

COHASSET MARITIME INSTITUTE

The 'Jack Hubbard' awaits its next group of rowers outside CMI. PHOTO/LINDA FECHTER

In honor of an avid rower

Hubbard Memorial Fun Run steps off Saturday

Correspondent

Cohasset is home to acres of forests and a beautiful coastline. Among those resources is a naturally integral part of any seaside New England town, a boathouse, which in this case is at the end of Parker Avenue, home to the Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI).

Tomorrow (Saturday, July 21) at 8:30 a.m. is the Hubbard Memorial Fun Run 5K that will raise funds and hopefully awareness of this little place that has served as a big inspiration to hundreds of aspiring rowers and future boat builders of all ages and abilities.

The Fun Run is named for Jack Hubbard and his wife, June. Jack was instrumental in making CMI a reality. An avid rower, conservationist and Cohasset resident, he grew up on Little Harbor. His love of the sea was shared with anyone within earshot. June Hubbard was also an active community volunteer, most notably for her active role as a Friend of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Jack, who lost his first wife, was grateful to meet June Swain at Massa Labs in 1967 where they both worked. Together they shared a love of the outdoors, wildlife and conservation. They gave back countless hours and thousands of dollars right up until their deaths, Jack's in 1997 and June's in 2011.

"I never had the pleasure of meeting Jack Hubbard personally but I have heard many stories and feel a debt of gratitude to him and his legacy," says Ed Baldry, founder and race director of the Fun Run.

Hubbard's involvement in the Cohasset Conservation Commission was his first experience in community activism. From that point on, they founded and supported many causes. One of their pet projects was the New England Wildlife Center. The garage was always filled with cans and bottles they used to finance the center's expenses. (In fact June later worried her friends who saw her salvaging for cans at the Yacht Club wondered if she was low on funds!)

"They lived on Little Harbor and were determined early on that conservation should be a concern for all those living in Cohasset," says Sarah Hubbard Krieger and sister, Jennifer Alba, Hubbard's daughters. "They taught us and our brothers Peter and John to set an example for caring and preserving natural land and wildlife."

Their sense of community extended beyond the shores of New England. After deciding to climb the highest peaks of the world, they shocked their family by setting off for Kilimanjaro, Nepal, Argentina, and other faraway regions. These were not trips planned for leisure, but for a sense of duty and environmental service. To the fascination of their kids, they would describe camping on glaciers so they could net and band birds to study their migration to the Antarctica, or planting seeds with school children in Africa, or reading Dr. Seuss to kids in Bhutan. All these travels always brought them home, to the Atlantic, and specifically for Jack Hubbard, to his love of rowing.

Jack Buckley, a Cohasset resident and part time social studies teacher at the time, was teaching at Cohasset's Alternative School. The administrator told him to "figure out what to do" in terms of what and how to teach the kids. So Buckley took the kids to a Ropes Course at the Hull Life Saving Museum. The instructor Ed McCabe suggested that Buckley take the students rowing.

"That was in November," recalls Buckley. "One month later in December 1988 I took the kids out rowing in Hull Bay, and somewhere out there, CMI was born."

The sliding seat, ocean shell world and the traditional boat world enjoyed a renaissance in the1970s. The Alden Ocean Shell, was the "go to" boat for rowers. It was the first sliding seat, single boat and was designed by yacht designer Arthur Martin, who had deep Cohasset roots. Hubbard especially liked the pleasures and the discipline of rowing and had a fondness for the Alden.

Buckley soon received a donation of a surf boat from Hull and created a curriculum of boat building and restoration. Hubbard, a Museum Board Member quickly stepped in and raised the $5,000 needed to restore the boat. He then hired Mike McNab, a local boat carpenter to be the lead instructor of the class.

"The Cohasset Yacht Club gave us a mooring so we could keep and launch the boat from there. They were extremely supportive," says Buckley. "It was a great opportunity. Parents got involved, mostly mothers. They called themselves 'Women with Big Sticks.' Jack was in favor of anything that would put kids on the water, be it boat building or learning about maritime history."

At about the same time, the newly vacant Hagerty Furniture property was bought by the Town of Cohasset. It was Hubbard, Buckley, McCabe, and a group of rowing enthusiasts who joined forces and shared vision to restore the property and provide recreational and competitive rowing for kids and instruction in boat building.

John Liffman, who coached high school kids in Hull in the mid-80s, now oversees the CMI Youth Program. Hubbard was delighted to introduce kids to boats and watch them discover how to sit as a crew and glide through the water.

"Whenever I saw Jack Hubbard, the first and only thing he ever asked me was "how are the kids doing?" says Liffman. "That's what he cared about."

June Hubbard continued her husband's legacy. Some of the instructors at CMI learned of an Alden boat at a house in Cohasset that was possibly for sale. It was at the home of a local politician who happened to live across the street from the Hubbards.

"We went to June's house to talk to her about Jack's road race planning and while we were there she let us know of arrangements she'd already made to have the Alden donated to CMI."

Behind the scenes support and quiet generosity was a Hubbard trait. He had a reputation as a quintessential volunteer and a true gentleman.

Just three days before Hubbard died he had raced in his boat on Maine's Moosehead Lake and won. Friends said he was "high as a kite" from the win. He won the race at age 71, not in an age group, but just flat out won.

"Dad's pleasure was rowing for competition," says Krieger.

A few days after his victory in the sport so important to him, Hubbard went out to do a solo row to Minot's Light as he did so many times before. He never came back. His beloved "Cohasset Comet" now hangs from the rafters of the museum in Hull.

McCabe delivered Hubbard's eulogy at June's request.

"I once thought Jack was mad at me about something," McCabe told the church full of friends and family. "It was very upsetting, so I went up to him and asked him directly, are you mad at me? He looked right at me and said, "Ed, you're a rower, I could never be mad at a rower."

Jack and June Hubbard loved the ocean and rowing and fundraisers that were truly FUN. To celebrate their lives and contributions CMI asks everyone who shares this spirit to run or walk in the Hubbard Memorial Fun Run Saturday, July 21. Registration begins at 7:30 with the race at 8:30 a.m. on Cohasset Common. All ages are welcome to this 5K course.

Alessandra Gianino, 17, of Norwell, playing "Margot,"tells "Bruiser," played by Roxy, to sit while rehearsing for the musical "Legally Blonde: The Musical" Tuesday night.

COHASSET DRAMATIC CLUB

Musical has been pet project

By R. Scott Reedy
Correspondent

Director Lisa Pratt knew she would have no trouble finding talented teen and young adult performers from the South Shore for the 20-member company of this weekend's Cohasset Dramatic Club summer drama workshop production of "Legally Blonde: The Musical." It was Pratt's pursuit of the just the right paws while casting the all-important roles of Bruiser, the charming Chihuahua, and Rufus, a larger but no less loveable dog, that gave her pause.

"We had used a local golden retriever when we did 'Annie' a few years back. The dog was great, but got distracted at one performance when it sniffed its owner in the front row," recalled Pratt by telephone during a rehearsal break last week. "When Norwell High School did 'Annie,' they brought in a dog trained by Bill Berloni."

Pratt knew Berloni as the animal trainer famed for providing the rescue dogs used on Broadway in the Tony Award-winning Best Musical of 1977 "Annie," and its subsequent revivals, as well as "Legally Blonde: The Musical," the 2007 Laurence O'Keefe and Neil Benjamin musical with book by Heather Hatch about a sorority girl who enrolls at Harvard to win back her ex-boyfriend, and many other pet-friendly productions.

"I met Bill at Norwell High School in 2007 and he could not have been nicer. He was so approachable then that when we decided to do 'Legally Blonde' this year, I gave him a call to see if he could help us with our dogs."

The Connecticut-based Berloni – winner of a special Tony Award in 2011 – recommended two dogs for the roles and assigned Karen Wells, a handler with his William Berloni Theatrical Animal Agency, to be with them in Cohasset.

"We're using Roxie, a blonde Chihuahua rescued in New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina, for the role of Bruiser, and a white-haired, blue-eyed basset hound named Paul Newman will play Rufus," said Wells by telephone last week from Cohasset. "Paul Newman is actually my dog who was rescued from an abandoned garage in New Jersey. Being a purebred basset with white fur and blue eyes makes him a real anomaly."

Rufus is most often played by an English bulldog, so Newman's Cohasset casting is also a bit of an anomaly, although it is not his first professional job.

"Paul Newman made his stage debut this spring in 'Legally Blonde' at the Westchester Broadway Theatre in Elmsford, N.Y., and he proved popular with audiences. He worked with Roxie in that production and they got along very well. They are both very social dogs and enjoy each other's company."

Roxie, an understudy in the "Legally Blonde" national tour that played the Boston Opera House in October 2008, and show business newcomer Newman were trained in the Berloni method which teaches an animal how to ignore the distraction of the audience and respond to the same cues night after night, just like his or her human co-stars.

"Three special rehearsals were held, because the dogs can only relate to the actors with whom they work most closely," according to Wells, who donates half her salary to Mid-Atlantic Basset Hound Rescue in Washington, N.J. "These dogs have been well-trained to do these jobs. It doesn't happen overnight. They are temperament tested to make sure they will be able to work with all kinds of different actors and that they are friendly and get along well with people. I'm in the wings at every performance keeping an eye on them at all times. You have to be so careful that the actors know how to keep the dogs safe."

Working alongside and watching out for Roxie in Cohasset will be Miranda Rich of Hanover, who is starring as Harvard Law student Elle Woods, and Norwell's Ale Gianino, who plays her friend, Margot, while Paul Newman will be spending most of his time on stage with Alex Kingston of Scituate and Michael Baldry of Cohasset, who portray Paulette, the lovesick hairdresser, and Kyle, the delivery man who sets her temperature rising, respectively.

"Miranda, Ale, Alex, and Michael have the most interaction with the dogs and Karen has worked very closely with them on commands," according to Pratt. "Our other young actors really love the dogs, too, and have come to watch them rehearse."

Fraternizing between cast members is being kept to a minimum, however, until Sunday's final curtain.

"We don't want the dogs to get distracted during the run of the show, so we save all the hugging and petting for after the final performance," says Wells.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present "Legally Blonde: The Musical" at Cohasset Town Hall Theater, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, through Sunday, July 22. For tickets and information, call 617-922-0280 or go online at cohassetdramaticclub.org.

Elle Woods, played by Miranda Rich, 20, of Hanover, tries to convince Winslow, the Harvard admissions director, played by Logan Pratt, of Cohasset to accept her to Law School with a dance routine.

Pilar, played by Faith Porter, 16, of Cohasset, faints in the arms of Kate, played by Colie Smigliani, 16, of Hanover, during the end of the dance sequence with the girls from Delta Nu.

Delta Nu girls Isabella Robinson, 18, Hadley Withington, 17, of Plymouth and Molly Rafferty, 16, of Scituate get ready to do their dance routine during their rehearsal.

Alex Huntington, 19, of Scituate plays Paulette who holds out the ears of Paul Newman playing the part of Rufus in the musical, 'Legally Blonde.'

Enid Hoops, played by Julia Thompson, 18, of Cohasset, sings a song during her number as a Harvard Law student while Harvard Law tour guide Andrew Lemieux of Scituate, left, listens.

Drama builds for 'Legally Blonde'

Michael Baldry of Cohasset ties his tie while getting ready to play one of his 4 parts in the musical, Legally Blonde.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 30, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A turn in a relationship upsets the amorous Arian, who is puzzled by Cupid's romantic antics. Be patient and considerate. The confusion soon will sort itself out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time for travel-loving Taureans to take off for fun-filled jaunts to new places. And don't be surprised if Cupid tags along for what could be a very eventful trip.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You appear to be of two minds about continuing a relationship that seems to be riding roughshod over your emotions. A frank talk could help you decide one way or the other.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Stepping back from a relationship problem provides a new perspective on how to deal with it. Meanwhile, watch your words. Something said in anger now could backfire later.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A changing situation makes the Big Cat uneasy. But hold on until things settle down around the 4th. Meanwhile, continue your good work on that still-unfinished project.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A decided improvement in a workplace situation results in an unexpected, but very welcome, added benefit for everyone. Personal relationships also improve.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Money matters remain a bit unsettled but soon will ease into the kind of stability you appreciate. Meanwhile, an expanding social life offers a chance to make new friends.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Use an unexpected roadblock in your monetary dealings to reassess your financial plans and make changes, if necessary. It soon will be smooth sailing again.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Aspects of love are strong for both single and paired Sagittarians. Professional dealings also thrive under the Sag's clever handling of difficult situations.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Set a realistic goal and follow it through to completion. Remember: You're more likely to impress the right people with one well-done job than with lots of jobs left undone.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You like to plan ahead. That's fine. But be prepared to make some changes because of an unsettled period that influences your aspects through the 4th.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A brief phase of instability affects your usual work cycle. Use the time to catch up on chores around the house or office. Things settle down soon after the 4th.

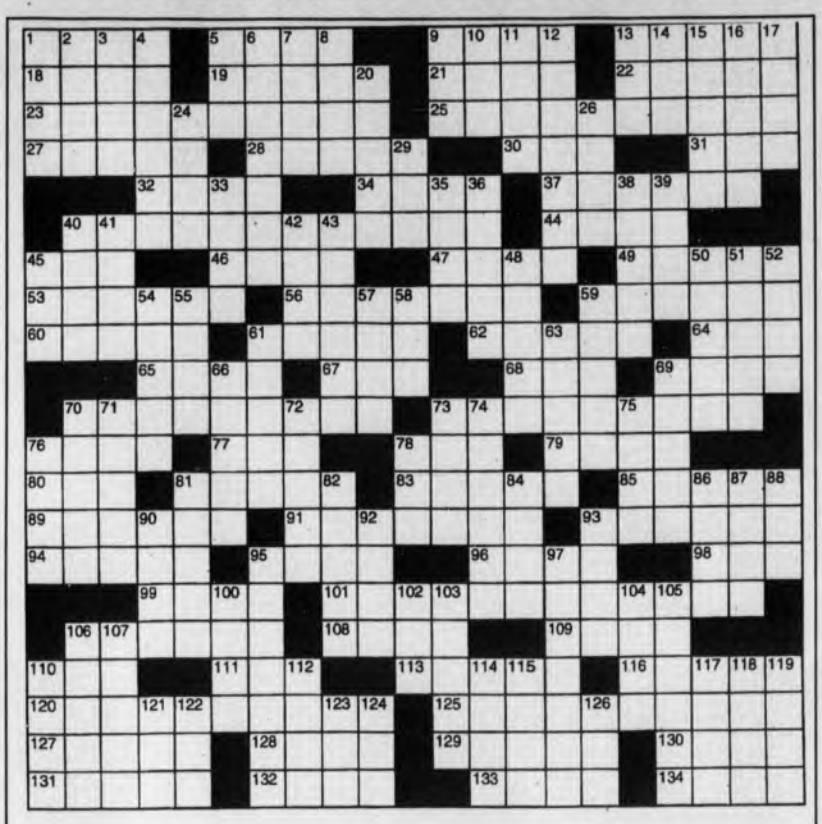
Fun By The Numbers



Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Challenging

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Priscilla D. Houghton

Priscilla D. Houghton

COHASSET – Priscilla Dewey Houghton, 87; helped children bloom via arts.

Already a playwright, lyricist, and poet, Priscilla Dewey Houghton turned her attention 40 years ago to introducing groups of children and adolescents to the joy of creativity. As director of the Charles River Creative Arts Program in Dover, she shaped an approach to arts education that became a model for programs around the world.

"We see so many kids' lives turned around in this program," she told the Globe in 1992. "They develop talents that will give them pleasure for the rest of their lives."

Thousands of children participated in the Charles River summer program during her nearly two decades as director or codirector. Uncounted others benefited when a book she wrote about crafting her program inspired similar arts camps from Alaska to Australia.

"She gave so many people the courage to go into the arts," said her daughter, Kippy Dewey of Jamaica Plain. "Since she died, people have written to say: 'She made all the difference in my life. The reason I am who I am today is because of Priscilla.' "

Mrs. Houghton, whose perseverance through personal and medical adversity was a lesson in equanimity to those closest to her, died July 6 at home in Cohasset. She was 87.

Though she never smoked, she was diagnosed about 25 years ago with lung cancer. Outliving an initial prognosis that she had only months to live, Mrs. Houghton became a prominent advocate for lung cancer research.

She was never a stranger to challenges. Her father died when she was an infant, her mother died when she was 17, and she spent a year in bed in her 30s recovering from polio.

"To me, she was a lesson in how to live life," said her son Toby Dewey of Brookline. "She had polio, she had lung cancer, and she refused to let these things slow her down. She moved on."

Her first husband, Talbot Dewey, died of cancer in 1983. Six years later, she married Amory Houghton Jr., whose family founded the Corning glass company.

"Somehow, there was this sort of a generator in her that made a bad thing good," he said. "She developed a sort of inner radiance which permeated everything. She was just endowed with a wonderful, joyous spirit."

Mrs. Houghton was a Democrat; her husband a moderate Republican. They lived for many years in Washington, D.C., where he spent 18 years as a US representative from Corning, N.Y.

In the increasingly partisan world of politics, the couple set an example in Washington's power circles of how to discuss issues and disagree without rancor.

"One of the things she did was to bring people together," he said.

"Falling in love with Amo gave her this whole resurgence," Kippy said. "They traveled everywhere and met everyone and were so loved. They had this incredible life, and their love story is so beautiful."

Named for her mother, Priscilla Badger Blackett grew up in Brookline and Wellesley, living much of the time with her grandparents in the years after her father died.

She graduated from Beaver Country Day School in Chestnut Hill, was a debutante in 1942, attended Pine Manor College in Brookline, and was a member of the Junior League when she married Talbot Dewey in 1946.

They lived for many years in Millis, where Mrs. Houghton began writing musicals that children performed in a barn in town.

Before the polio diagnosis, she had been an avid skier and rode horses. After recovering, she became more involved with writing and theater.

Her poems were published in the Globe and other publications. She wrote the book and lyrics for the musical "Two If By Sea," which premiered in New England and moved to Off-Broadway in New York City, where it was received more warmly by audiences than theater critics.

Over the years, she wrote several musicals while returning to school. She studied at the School at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, and received a master's degree in theater arts from Goddard College's branch in Cambridge.

"She was just an incredibly talented woman, but it all came down to people, how she loved people and connected with people and believed in the people," her son said.

Those connections flowered when she took over the fledgling Creative Arts Program at the Charles River School in Dover.

"She was an incredibly warm, loving, accepting, and giving person, and made everybody feel special," her daughter said. "She cared so much about what you were doing and what was going on in your life."

Inspired by a program she had worked with in Washington, Mrs. Houghton also became a driving force behind launching Urban Improv, an interactive theater program based in Jamaica Plain that teaches conflict resolution and violence prevention to youth.

In 2004, Pine Manor College awarded her an honorary doctorate for her years of work in the arts.

By then, she was many years past her cancer diagnosis, but she never feared death, her husband said.

"She always had this deep, deep faith," he said. "I was so lucky. God gave me the chance to be with Priscilla."

In addition to her husband, daughter, and son, Mrs. Houghton leaves another son, Peter Dewey of Hull; two stepsons, Amory Houghton III of New York City and Robert Houghton of Acton; two stepdaughters, Sarah Houghton of Fairfield, Conn., and Quincy Houghton of Los Angeles; a brother, William Blackett of Rhode Island; eight grandchildren; nine step-grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

A memorial service was held at 2 p.m. Saturday in Trinity Church in Boston.

The Charles River Creative Arts Program reflected the breadth of Mrs. Houghton's interests. Just as she combined athleticism with aesthetic pursuits, the program's offerings ranged from music to sports, crafts to dance and drama.

She knew, too, that the most important lesson she could offer children was how to aspire to greatness.

"A lot of them take their first risks here," Mrs. Houghton told the Globe in 1984.

"When you were in her presence, she gave you tremendous attention and devotion," her son said. "She elevated you."

Beechwood Church invites kids to SKY program

A free summer kids' event titled Sky will be hosted by Beechwood Congregational Church, Cohasset, from Monday, Aug. 13, to Friday, Aug. 17. Sky is for children entering grades one through five, and will take place from 9 a.m. to noon, each day.

At Sky, faith and imagination will soar as kids discover that everything is possible with God. Children will participate in Bible-learning activities, sing songs, play teamwork-building games, make and dig into treats, experience Bible adventures, collect Bible Memory Buddies to remind them to trust God, and test out Sciency-Fun Gizmos they'll take home and play with all summer long. Plus, kids will learn to look for evidence of God all around them through God Sightings. Each day will conclude with a Fly Away Finale – a celebration that gets everyone involved in living what they've learned.

PARAGON PARK

'Special night' added to Company Theatre show

By Mark Burridge
mburridge@wickedlocal.com

"Paragon Park" premieres July 27 at The Company Theatre in Norwell but the musical's entire run from July 27 until Aug. 19 is already sold out.

Well... except for one special night.

"We recently received a matching grant for $67,000," said Co-Artistic Director and "Paragon Park" co-playwright Zoe Bradford, of Hingham. "So we decided to add on this performance."

The grant will give the theater funds for all sorts of new things ranging from lighting to seats, but only if they can find a way to match the $67,000. So, to help with this, another special performance has been added to the schedule for Aug. 14.

The tickets to the show are more expensive ($100) but the show will feature a meet-and-greet, a raffle, desserts at intermission and a more Broadway feel. According to Bradford, there will even be a nice new playbill waiting for attendees.

Bradford said she isn't much of an amusement park person. However, the park was so important to so many people for so long that it seemed like a logical place from which to base a show.

"After it closed in the 1980s, we said it would be a great musical," she said. "After we talked to people about it, we knew we had a [show]."

The play revolves around the Stone family, who ran Paragon Park in Hull for years. The play takes the audience back in time to 1905 but also to the 1920s and even the 1960s.

"Some of it might ring a bell with some of our audience," she said. Although the show is about the park, it also features a love story between a Bostonian girl and an Italian gondolier, who used to actually be there.

According to Bradford, the show has been three years in the making. She discussed writing the play with Michael Hammond of Holbrook back then. However, it was shelved because of their busy schedules. However, Bradford said that Hammond brought the idea back up and soon the two were writing the show.

"There is a cast of 45 and 18 songs," said Bradford, adding that the songs were all composed and are original.

Bradford said that, if the theater got the grant, the funds would be spread among several needs that the theater has.

"We need new lighting. We bought everything in the '90s and we could do so much with new technology," she said, noting that the sound needs to be improved as well. "Sound [equipment] is so improved now. We have outstanding singers and musicians and we really owe it to them to get the new equipment."

She said that, although they get positive feedback about the seats in the theater, she thinks that they owe it to the audiences to replace them.

"It's supporting a great cause," she added. "We're an enigma. We're not really a community theater but we're not really a professional theater, either."

A song comes together.

The costumes and set illustrate the time and setting of the play.

JACK CONWAY

'Visionary' leaves his mark

By Ruth Thompson
rthompson@wickedlocal.com

The story goes that in the beginning, when Jack Conway was the one-man show in his fledgling real estate office in Hingham, he wanted to expand his business so he would have someone else there to talk to.

"He has always enjoyed interacting with people," said Chris Haraden, Director of Education at Jack Conway & Company. "He had a special way with people, something that not everyone has."

Whether it was his gift for connecting with people, good business sense, the determination to make it on his own, or all of the above, at the time Conway passed away from a brief battle with cancer, at age 88, on July 23, 2012, the company he began in that small office had grown to 40 offices and 600 sales agents, and is one of the largest independent real estate companies in Massachusetts.

"He was a visionary," Haraden said of the Scituate resident. "He always was the one looking for what the company was going to do next."

A man familiar to generations of homebuyers and sellers throughout eastern Massachusetts, Conway leaves a giant legacy of business success and community involvement through his 56-year-old real estate company.

Pond team

DPW, Town Hall, CSCR working together

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Meetinghouse Pond is looking a little better this week.

On Monday, July 23, the town's Department of Public Works (DPW) cleared out a substantial amount of algae from the pond. The pond has experienced excessive algae growth over the past month that was raising concern around town. While some citizens have complained about the pond's aesthetics or worried that the stagnant water had become a breeding ground for mosquitoes, several have come together to try to solve the pond's problems.

CAT DAM

Citizens asked to withdraw appeal

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

One year later, Cat Dam is back in the news.

Last summer, the Conservation Commission approved a tide-flushing schedule for Inner Little Harbor (Cat Dam) that was recommended by the Board of Selectmen. In August 2011, this notice of intent (NOI) for the harbor flushing was appealed by a group of 18 concerned citizens who asked the state's Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) for a superseding order of conditions for the operation and maintenance of Cat Dam.

A group of abutters, known as the Environmental 20 or E-20, oppose the appellants' stance and agree with the NOI that the selectmen brought forward last year, which was presented as a compromise for both groups. Now, the Conservation Commission is asking the appellants to withdraw their appeal in order to move forward.

If the appeal is not withdrawn, the DEP could order that the town revert to using the harbor's original flushing schedule, which officials say has been in place for 35 years.

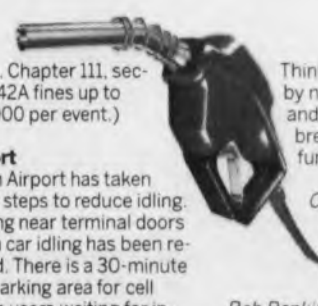
DID YOU KNOW? | By Bob Rankin

The high cost of idling



Gasoline prices going up again
GasBuddy.com shows Boston area gasoline price up about 20 cents in July.

What can you do to reduce your cost?
Do not idle your car or truck. Shut the engine off as soon as you park.
The major package delivery services require drivers to shut off at every stop, saving millions of dollars in fuel cost each year. You also can save.

There are benefits
Cleaner air for all of us to breathe due to fewer pollutants in the air.
Vehicle emissions account for an estimated 60 percent of all carbon dioxide in our atmosphere.

Fines
• Under the clean air regulations, you can be fined a minimum of $100 for idling for more than 5 minutes in Massachusetts. Some communities have set higher fines for idling on school property and other public use areas. The EPA requires all states to set standards. Connecticut set the idling time at 3 minutes. (MA General Laws, Chapter 90, 16A.)
• Fines for companies can be large. A former rental car licensee that operated shuttle buses at Logan and Bradley airports was fined $ 475,000 for repeat violations and failure to take corrective action. The company no longer does business at both airports. (MGL. Chapter 111, section 142A fines up to $25,000 per event.)

Airport
Logan Airport has taken many steps to reduce idling. Waiting near terminal doors with a car idling has been reduced. There is a 30-minute free parking area for cell phone users waiting for incoming flights. In that lot there are large signs "No Idling for more than 5 minutes". It is free.

Think. I can save money by not idling my car and don't like to breathe exhaust fumes. I'll do it.

Robert Bonnell

Name: Robert Bonnell

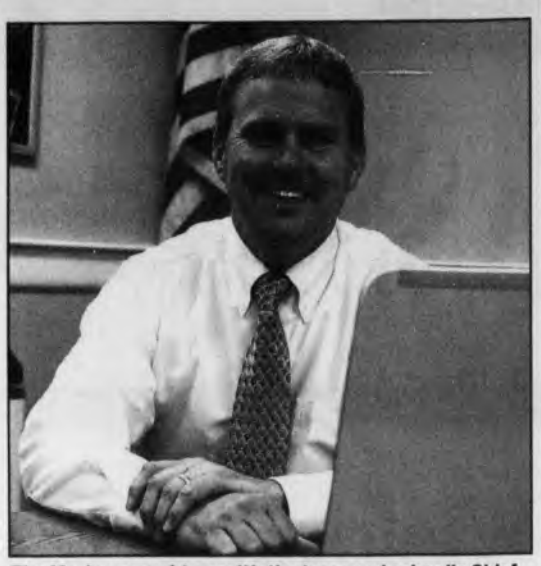
Occupation: Chief Technology Officer; Married, father of six.

Best day of your life: August 12, 2000, the day I married an angel. This day a beautiful, educated and successful woman married a single father with four children. We have since had two children together.

PRINT EXTRA

Best vacation: Las Vegas, New Year's Eve 2007 – Maybe the best fireworks on the planet on New Year's Eve.

Favorite season: It's New England and I am a New Englander. I love all the seasons and when I don't... just wait, it changes!



Favorite holiday: Halloween. We create all the costumes by hand and have so much fun with it.

Favorite junk food, meal or dessert: Yes! I am an equal opportunity consumer of food. If it is there I will eat it!

Best book: "Born Digital," a book that delves into the first generation of "Digital Natives," children who were born into and raised in the digital world and are coming of age and soon will shape our world, our economy, our politics, our culture; even the shape of our family life will be forever transformed.

Best movie or actor: I have such a huge range in movies that I will have to pick the one I can go back and watch over and over: "Amadeus." As far as actors, I have to go with the ones that moved me emotionally with their acting ability: Ed Harris or Madeline Stowe.

Best TV show: Too many right now! I love TIVO, which allows me to time shift. "Once Upon a Time," "Grimm," "Fringe," "Falling Skies," "Eureka," "Warehouse 13," "Leverage," "America's Got Talent," and "Homeland"... Really, I do work for a living!

The Mariner caught up with the town and school's Chief Technology Officer, Robert Bonnell this week. If you see Robert around town, be sure to mention that you saw him in Picture This! COURTESY PHOTO Best music, group or artist: I know, I know old news...but I keep coming back to the great music of The Moody Blues.

Pet peeve: Laziness. I have tried to bring my children up in such a manner that all good things are earned!

Fun fact: I am through and through a science fiction fan. Many people do not know that five of my six children are named after Star Trek characters (Nichelle, Deanna, James T., and Zachary), and I also had a pot belly pig named Jean-Luc Pigard. If you are a Star Trek fan, you get the connections.

Person you would most like to meet: Coming from a man not involved with organized religion I know the person I would love to meet would be Jesus.

Goal: Personally: help raise my children to be honest, hard-working, loyal, productive citizens of the United States. Professionally: see to it that Cohasset and its technology is brought to standards that allow for efficient, secure, and reliable government along with a proactive, proficient, and technologically sound school district.

Biggest worry: The financial state of the United States. I try to teach my children to live within their means and wish I could use our Federal government as an example.

Best part of Cohasset: I have only been in town for 9-plus weeks, and it has become clear to me the citizens of Cohasset are very lucky. This is such a beautiful area of Massachusetts. I hope you understand how very fortunate you are that you can call this home!

MURPHYCARTY INSURANCE AGENCY
So you're renting a car... How does coverage work?
Your auto policies 'follows you' and household members when renting a passenger car on vacation or business: coverage duplicates.
The rental must be a "replacement" to your standard vehicle; your standard vehicle cannot be in use at the same time.
BUT, realize most rental agencies require a higher value of replacement than your policy in the event of an accident: "buyback value" to "loss of use" to "diminution in value" are terms to seek out.
You could have a 'gap' in coverage with your auto policy. The LOSS DAMAGE WAIVER offered by the rental company is a good idea to purchase. It will close any gap in coverage.
It will ensure your dream vacation does not become a nightmare.

'Mule' used in off-road bike accident

The victim, who is 36 years old and from Braintree, injured himself on a trail deep inside the park when he fell off his bike.

At about 2 p.m. Wednesday (July 25), an off-road bicyclist was injured on a trail inside Wompatuck State Park. Cohasset Police and Fire responded to the scene.

The victim, who is 36 years old and from Braintree, injured himself on a trail deep inside the park when he fell off his bike. The new "Mule" was pressed into service and sent into the woods to extricate the victim. The victim was brought out to a paved road in Wompatuck by police and fire officials and transferred into the Cohasset ambulance. The bicyclist was taken to South Shore Hospital with non-life threatening injuries.

The Mule is on loan from Kawasaki to the police department until the end of the summer. It is an all terrain, 4-wheel drive utility vehicle that is available for summer patrols and special rescues like this, police said.

Scituate man charged with misleading police

On Friday (July 20), a 20-year-old Scituate man came to the Cohasset Police Station and reported that he and a friend had been robbed of cash on Thursday (July 19) in Cohasset by another man, also 20-years-old and of Scituate, who was known to them. The man, who came to the station, reported that the suspect told them that he had a firearm and then demanded their money.

Based on this information, the police department issued a bulletin to surrounding agencies that the suspect was wanted for armed robbery with a firearm while the department continued its investigation. Shortly thereafter, Scituate Police advised that they were detaining the suspect and Cohasset Police responded to Scituate and took the suspect into custody.

After the suspect was in custody, as a part of the continuing investigation, the investigating officer contacted the victim and asked him to come to the police station to clarify aspects of his previous statement. Upon his arrival, police said he retracted part of his original statement, reporting that there was no firearm mentioned by the suspect but continued to maintain that he was robbed. The investigating officer then contacted and interviewed a 19-year-old Scituate man, who was also allegedly robbed along with the reporting party, by the same suspect. This man said that neither the original nor the revised story provided by the reporting party were true and that they had, in fact, given the suspect money to purchase a quantity of marijuana on their behalf and that he absconded with the money.

Based on this new information, the suspect was immediately released from custody and will be summoned to court on one count of larceny over $250 and one count of larceny under $250. Police have not released his name because the criminal complaints against them have not yet issued at court.

The reporting party, Paul E. Kelly, 20, of 61 Collier Road, Scituate, has been charged with making a false report of a crime and misleading a police officer.

The third man (the 19-year-old) is not being charged, police said.

Deputy Chief of Police William Quigley stated: "The law considers named victims of crime presumptively reliable and our own experience has been consistent with that premise. In this case, our officers took swift action to protect the public from an alleged robber armed with a firearm based on the statements of a named 'victim.' When someone tries to manipulate the criminal justice system to their own advantage by making a false report of a crime and lying to the police as was the case here, we will take equally swift action to protect the integrity of a system designed to deliver justice for all."

Men cool off at station after roadside fight

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police responded to a report of a fight between two men near Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and lower King Street at 11:26 a.m. on Wednesday (July 18).

Police said a 22-year-old Hull man was walking along 3A when a 30-year-old Marshfield man, who was known to him, pulled over and they started to fight on the side of the road. Police responded after receiving several calls about the incident.

During the fight, the 22-year-old lost his wallet and thought the 30-year-old had stolen it. That was not the case, as the wallet was located on the side of the road. Police brought both men to the station. They decided not to press assault charges against one another. Police believe the dispute was over a girlfriend.

Two-car accident

At 3:57 p.m. on Monday (July 16), police responded to a two-car accident in front of the entrance to Avalon on King Street. Police said a 2010 Toyota Camry, operated by a 75-year-old Cohasset man, was attempting a left-hand turn out of Dunkin Donuts when the Camry collided with a black SUV that was turning left out of Avalon.

The 2009 Nissan Rogue did not stop, police said. A witness copied down a partial plate number and police were able to locate the owner of the SUV through the Registry of Motor Vehicles. Being summonsed to court for leaving the scene of an accident after causing property damage and failure to grant the right-of-way is a 43-year-old Cohasset man, who lives in Avalon, police said. There were no injuries and the Camry did not have to be towed, police said.

Pole hit

At 6:01 p.m. on Wednesday (July 18), police responded to a single-vehicle accident by Dependable Cleaners on S. Main Street. Police said an 18-year-old Boston man in a 2007 Chevrolet van that belonged to the cleaners sideswiped a utility pole as he was backing up to the back door of the business. Police contacted National Grid to check out the pole.

Off road

At 12:57 p.m. on Thursday (July 19), police responded to a single-car accident on North Main Street near the Cohasset train station. Police said a 44-year-old Rockland woman in a 2001 Toyota RAV4 was headed south on North Main Street when she struck a stop sign, another traffic sign and hit a utility pole before ending up in a ditch. Police said she told them she was not paying attention and veered off the road. She was transported to the hospital with minor injuries. Her car, which was totaled, was towed. She was cited for not staying in marked lanes, police said.

Parking lot

At 7:28 p.m. on Thursday (July 19), an accident in the Shaw's Plaza parking lot was reported. Police said a 2012 Nissan Murano was unoccupied and parked in a space when a 2010 Volkswagen Jetta, operated by a 28-year-old Cohasset woman, attempted to park. The Cohasset woman said her car suddenly accelerated and crashed into the parked Murano. There were no injuries and both cars were towed. A 36-year-old Scituate woman owns the Murano.

Blacked out

Police said a 68-year-old Cohasset man reported he had blacked out when his 2006 Dodge Caravan that was headed north on South Main Street struck a tree at about 2 p.m. on Sunday (July 22) near Castle Road. The Cohasset man was transported to the hospital and his car was towed. Police have asked the Registry of Motor Vehicles to conduct a medical evaluation to determine if the man should be driving.

Item stolen

A 49-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Tuesday (July 24) that someone had stolen her pressure washer valued at $200. The matter is under investigation.

Unlicensed operation

A 57-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation after being stopped for speeding on Wednesday (July 18) at about 9:47 a.m. An officer on radar patrol stopped the 2004 Lexus, the man was driving, for traveling 45 in a 30 mph zone on Sohier Street. A registry computer check revealed the man's driver's license was expired. He is being cited for unlicensed operation and speeding, police said.

Texts, calls

The parents of a 17-year-old Cohasset girl, who had broken up with her boyfriend but was receiving nasty text messages and calls from him, reported the matter to the police last week. Police contacted the mother of the boy and were assured that would not happen again.

Move Over Law in effect

When an emergency or maintenance vehicle is stopped on the side of the road, move over to the next lane, or slow down if changing lanes is not possible. Under the Move over Law, failure to do so could result in a fine of up to $100.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Solar plans make the rounds

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Alternative Energy Committee is proceeding with plans to bring solar power to Cohasset, recently obtaining permission by the Board of Selectmen to hire special counsel. The selectmen agreed to have the town fund half of the $21,000 it will cost to hire attorney Mark Kalpin of the Boston firm Wilmer Hale; the AEC appealed to the school committee for the rest. The two committees have collaborated on the solar initiative, looking into installing a solar array on the roof of the Middle-High School. The AEC is also considering the town-owned capped landfill at 81-91 Cedar Street.

After hearing a presentation from AEC co-chair Tanya Bodell (John Herth is the other co-chair and attended the last SC meeting), the SC voted unanimously to approve the hiring of special counsel, splitting the lawyer's fee 50-50.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said at the meeting that Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski recently brokered a better deal for town electricity, so the school could put these savings toward the $10,500 the SC agreed to pay for the attorney.

Milanoski said in a phone call that when he came onboard as interim town manager in March, the town was paying $0.76 per kilowatt-hour of electricity.

"I have since negotiated a new rate," said Milanoski. Now, the town is paying $0.614 per kWh, which is "significant savings" for electricity used by the town buildings and schools.

The AEC and SC both hope that going solar will lead to big savings in electricity as well. However, the SC is also interested in the educational component for the Middle-High School students.

"Even if it comes close to breaking even, the fact is we're not using limited resources [for electricity]," said SC member Dr. Helene Lieb. "Eventually we're going to realize savings... but our mission statement says we're a place that cares about global issues."

The AEC does not yet know how much, exactly, the town and schools could expect to save on electricity once solar power is implemented; based on numbers from nearby Scituate, the estimated amount so far is $100,000. Costs for the project are still unknown, including how much it will cost to upgrade the 10-year-old school roof to hold a solar array, or the interconnectivity costs for the town landfill. Hiring special counsel will help the AEC anticipate these costs; Kalpin will assist the AEC through the request for proposals (RFP) process as they prepare to attract solar power vendors to bid on the project.

"We won't know any of this [the costs] until we get bids," said Bodell.

The RFP process could take up to six months; the AEC hopes to publish an RFP by September. Factoring in anticipated construction time, the solar panel installation could take two years in total.

CPC to consider recreation projects

Following state legislative changes to the Community Preservation Act (CPA), town Community Preservation Committees (CPC) are now authorized to approve recreation projects that were not previously allowed under the Act.

Cohasset's CPC chairman Russ Bonetti explained these changes to the Mariner last month, and the matter was brought up at the July 10 Board of Selectmen meeting. The CPC meets Monday night (July 30) at Town Hall and will discuss these changes, and what they mean for the town.

Bonetti said the committee would also consider a project to restore fencing in Central Cemetery; they will also discuss potential recreation projects that are being submitted. Since the CPC expects an influx of requests, Bonetti said that he plans to propose cut-off dates for requests, most likely for a month before the fall Special Town Meeting.

The CPC chair joked, "We thought we were going to take the summer off, but if people are thinking of projects, we're open for business."

Look for more on this in next week's edition of the Mariner.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Contractor for floors chosen

A contractor was selected to fix the school floors, School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro announced at Wednesday's School Committee meeting. The floors in various school buildings, including the Middle-High School, were damaged last year when a vendor left a chemical cleaner on for too long, causing the tiles to come up and create a safety hazard.

The school department recovered $500,000 in restitution for the damage done, and will be using a portion of that to hire Continental Flooring Company for $137,779. Continental was determined to be the lowest bid by a responsive and responsible bidder.

DeGennaro said that Continental will begin phase one of the repair project, tackling the high priority safety issues before school reopens for the fall. Phase one is expected to be completed by August 30.

CEF grants

The Cohasset Education Foundation is contributing $34,815.61 toward eight grants. Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said during Wednesday's School Committee meeting, "We're appreciative of grants for things that we aren't able to do in our own budget."

The CEF is contributing:

$4,899.61 to complete funding the Sea Perch Underwater Robotics grant submitted by Jack Buckley on behalf of the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR)

$1,800 for Creating a Personalized Website grant submitted by Laura Swarts and Ann Marie Carmody for the Middle-High School

$3,620 for First Lego League Robotics Program grant submitted by Laura Humphrey for the Middle-High School

$896 for Math Olympiad Team grant submitted by Stephanie Wooley for the Middle-High School

$2,500 for Circus Comes to Town grant submitted by Jennifer deChiara for the Deer Hill School

$8,740 for Greg Tang, A New Approach to Teaching and Learning Math grant submitted by Kath Brooks for the Deer Hill and Osgood schools

$9,960 for Osgood Writing Project: Aligning with the Common Core grant submitted by Lynne Kenny for the Osgood school with Cohasset's Center for Student Coastal Research and the town's new Health Inspector, Felix Zemel, to forge a new partnership when it comes to the pond. So far, the group has determined that the pond's water has an unusually high pH, which they attribute to new cement added to the pond during a restoration project last year.

Another factor the group believes led to the algae growth was the pond's pumps becoming clogged.

"Once the pumps got clogged," Milanoski explained, "we had to shut them down. We had water circulating there for a while, but the pumps started to overheat and the alarm was going off... Even with the circulating pumps going on, the algae continued to grow out of control. Everything was shut down to save the system to identify how to fix it."

Renovations to the pond were completed last spring. The 2010 annual town meeting approved $250,000 of Community Preservation funds for the restoration project. The pond was given a facelift featuring a wider sidewalk with handicap accessibility, replacing the old disheveled concrete stairs. A new clay bottom was added. The renovation also created a system where water can be re-circulated through the fountain; previously, the pond was fed almost continuously with domestic water. More controls were incorporated to limit the waste of water.

Engineer John Cavanaro, who was hired to work on the pond, told the Mariner that he's "not sure" what can be done about the algae, or if there's ever been this much of it before. "I don't know what historically existed, as far as the algae goes."

Some residents believed the algae growth was related to whether the fountain was flowing, but the fountain has continued to re-circulate water through its pump. The pump does not need a constant water supply to keep circulating.

However, due to an outstanding bill that Town Hall owes the water department for filling in the pond last year, the water department shut off water to the pond. The pond was also leaking, contributing the cost of water usage. The town owes the water department $60,000 for filling in the pond last year, which was a point of contention between the water commission and the former town manager.

Acting TM Milanoski said that he is meeting with the water commission this week and plans to ask them to donate the water to the community.

"It's a community resource, enjoyed by the community," said Milanoski.

Some residents, including selectman Martha Gjesteby, have advocated reintroducing goldfish into the pond to eat up the algae. Milanoski said this would be problematic at the moment, because the pH is too high and would kill the fish. The town manager believes that the original engineering study for the pond's restoration did not include an analysis of the pond's aquaculture as part of its scope of work. There should have been an analysis, Milanoski explained, "to allow the pond to be a living pond."

As part of the renovation, the pond was given a new clay bottom; however, "There's no organic material on the bottom of pond to help balance the pH," the town manager said. "If the pH gets too high, it encourages growth of algae, and fish won't live in there. We need to build organic material up on the bottom."

The next step, after scooping algae out of the pond, will likely be draining it, according to Milanoski. The pond was drained last summer to allow for the new clay bottom to dry and compact. This time around, the town manager hopes to add a sand base on top of the clay, "then add an organic substrate to encourage the pond to become a living pond again." Once the pond is refilled and the pH is stabilized, the town will look into adding goldfish or koi fish.

In the meantime, the effort to clean up the centerpiece of Cohasset's common has created a new partnership between the student volunteers at the CSCR and the town's Board of Health.

"It's now a teaching exercise," Milanoski said of the pond clean-up efforts. "The young citizens that are part of that group are going to become more active and help solve this problem."

The town manager said that members of the CSCR plan to present their findings, so far, to the Board of Selectmen next Tuesday.

CAT DAM

the water flow for more than 100 years. The dam and tide gate structure are owned by the town, but located on privately owned property. The crux of the Cat Dam issue, which has sparked many public, heated debates between residents and abutters, is how often to flush inner Little Harbor to maintain water levels, improve or maintain water quality, and prevent the noxious odors that result when inner Little Harbor becomes a mudflat.

The Cat Dam flushing debate started four years ago, when the gates were accidentally left open for two days longer than they should have been. When the Con Com in place at the time learned of this, they required the selectmen to issue an after-the-fact Notice of Intent (NOI) for a new flushing schedule. The NOI suggested opening the gates for 50 percent more than was done over the past 35 years.

The town's proposed Cat Dam project involves changing the flushing schedule for the tide gates; these changes were the subject of an Order of Conditions issued by the Conservation Commission last July.

The Conservation Commission approved a new Notice of Intent (NOI) in late July, but that decision was appealed to the DEP by a citizen group.

The appeal, said Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, triggered a MEPA (Mass. Environmental Protection Act) review, because changing the tide gate schedule "brings up an environmental issue... If you want to open the gates more than has been done [before], you're now altering the land and have to ask the abutters' permission; that now creates more legality."

A representative from the DEP conducted a site visit in September and later issued a letter to the town stating that the project triggered the MEPA threshold, which requires the town to file an Environmental Notification Form (ENF) and a mandatory Environmental Impact Report (EIR) with the Secretary of Energy and Environmental Affairs. The ENF must include a concise but accurate description of the project and its alternatives; identify any review thresholds the project may meet or exceed and any agency action it may require; present the proponent's initial assessment of potential environmental impacts; and may include a proposed scope.

Town counsel wrote in a letter to the MEPA office that they disagreed with the DEP findings that said the proposed project would alter the wetlands as defined by the state's Wetlands Protection Act. In a letter dated Dec. 6, 2011, MEPA responded that the DEP has the final word in interpreting its own regulations. Arrangements were then made for town officials to meet with MEPA, which they did in March this year.

Milanoski, selectman Paul Carlson, conservation commissioner Jack Creighton, conservation agent Paul Shea and Town Counsel Richard Hucksam met with MEPA representatives. Milanoski said at the time that the meeting involved a productive discussion on the history of the flushing project, going over multiple reports. The MEPA office provided guidance to the Cohasset officials.

Where Cat Dam stands

The town recently received a letter from the DEP asking how Cohasset plans to proceed. According to the town manager, the letter said that if the town does not go along with MEPA, DEP will deny the NOI and deny the appeal, and the flushing schedule at Inner Little Harbor "will go back to the way it's been done for 35 years."

The DEP "would prefer the community solve its own problem with the neighbors because this is a local issue," explained Milanoski.

The group of appellants, however, initially signed the appeal because they felt the selectmen's NOI was harmful to the environment. And now, this group refuses to back down.

"We filed the appeal because the expert opinions of seven independent agencies (EPA, NOAA, US Fish and Wildlife Service, CZM, Mass. Bays National Estuary Program, MA Division of Ecological Restoration, and MA Division of Marine Fisheries), as well as the town-hired environmental engineer, state that the E-20 NOI does not meet the Wetlands Protection Act Performance Standards or the Mass. Water Quality Standards," the appellants wrote in a letter to the town manager and Con Com chair, dated Wed., July 25, 2012.

Former selectman Karen Quigley is one of the citizens who signed the appeal. She attended Thursday's Con Com meeting during which the appellants were asked to withdraw.

"We all left rather discouraged," Quigley said of the meeting, during which newly elected Con Com chair Creighton asked the citizens in both groups to come to a compromise. "It's not a compromise; that's not what it means."

Milanoski reported to the Con Com on Thursday that the Cat Dam matter has cost the town a lot of money. "Because of the appeal, we're into this project for well over $50,000 of town money," he said, adding that the town's legal budget for fiscal year 2012 was expended by January under the previous town manager. When Milanoski took the helm as interim town manager in March, he ordered an immediate spending freeze on "non-essential items." The Cat Dam matter was determined to be a non-essential legal case at the time, he said.

But Quigley argued that the appellants did not take up the town's legal budget. "We don't want to be obstructionists or cost the town money... We have never engaged an attorney and never brought one to any meeting."

In his first night as the new Con Com chair, Creighton was tasked with trying to get the two opposing citizen groups – the E-20 and the appellants – to come to some kind of agreement.

Both groups could continue fighting their side of the Cat Dam issue, said Creighton in a phone call. "Any dissatisfied property owner on Inner Little Harbor has the ability to block any change to the conditions as they presently exist."

However, Creighton stressed that he hopes the neighbors will find a way to bury the hatchet.

"If everybody doesn't agree, we can't do anything. The state had sent us a letter saying we needed to either fight the appeal, or they were going to drop it; if they dropped it, [the tide-flushing schedule] would go back to the conditions as they've been, the historic past conditions.

"The only way in which the existing compromised position approved by the Con Com can move forward," Creighton continued, "is if [the appellants] drop their appeal. If not, the town won't pay the money to challenge their appeal, in which case if the appeal is successful, it will block the compromised position."

If the tide gate schedule goes back to the way it used to be, according to Creighton, "all the progress that was made gets lost."

What will happen next? Quigley predicted that the town manager and Con Com chair could report to the selectmen, saying that due to the town's legal budget, they recommend the selectmen take no further action with the Cat Dam ENF. If the ENF is not filed, the DEP could deny the project, which would result in the tide-flushing schedule remaining exactly the same.

This might not be so bad, said Quigley: "Our understanding is that the existing conditions are better than what the new NOI will result in."

Milanoski said by way of summary, "There was a compromise made [the NOI]; that was appealed. Due to the appeal, the [tide-flushing] could go back to the old way of doing things."

While it seems that a new compromise between the opposing neighbors has yet to be reached, the Con Com chair said he did notice "markedly less personal animosity" during Thursday's meeting than he's witnessed during past discussions of Cat Dam.

"We are all neighbors," said Creighton. "I thought the various neighbors were treating one another with respect."

The appellants issued a letter to Milanoski and Creighton on Wednesday outlining why they have declined to withdraw the appeal. The letter in its entirety is available on the Mariner online at: wickedlocalcohasset.com

Changes on the Con Com

Creighton was elected as chairman during Thursday's meeting, replacing David Farrag, who served as chair for six years. Farrag was elected as vice-chair. The switch was in line with policies, procedures and bylaws on how to operate the Con Com that the committee voted to approve last fall; one of the procedures the committee decided upon was limiting the chairman position to one-year terms.

The Con Com also welcomed new associate members Patrick Kennedy, Dr. William Henry and saluted departing member Richard "Dick" Karoff, who served as an associate member, full member and chairman over his years on the commission. Karoff was not reappointed by the selectmen during their annual committee appointments and reappointments last month.

"We saluted him in absentia," said Creighton. "He served the town long and well."

GEORGE CORDES

George Cordes, Beth MacLeod Largent and Neal Harrison – aka the Three Amigos – perform Saturday night at South Shore Conservatory's EUS production of Opera Under the Stars. COURTESY PHOTO

Although I live in the Adirondacks, I've had a strong connection with the Boston area since my days at Boston Conservatory in the late 1980s, studying with Madame Iride Pilla and Bradley Pennington – whose company, Boston Bel Canto Opera, I often returned to sing with. My wife, Elizabeth, a pianist, and I have known vocalists Beth MacLeod Largent and Neal Harrelson for years. In fact, Beth, Neal and I were young artists together with Pittsburgh Opera way back in the mid-1990s under Tito Capobianco, a giant of opera directing. We still tease each other with "Tito-isms" when we get together. Once, after a program of American opera, Tito admonished us, "Dee-shone, please, DEE-shone!" It took us a while to realize he was criticizing our English "diction."

We "Three Amigos" all took different career paths after Pittsburgh. I have had the great fortune to sing at places such as Chicago Lyric, Dallas Opera, Houston Grand, New York City Opera, and the Met. When I was performing with Opera Boston in the mid-2000s, I reconnected with Beth, who was teaching at South Shore Conservatory. We decided we needed to get the "Three Amigos" together again every summer, prying Neal from singing and teaching in New York to do semi-staged productions in Hingham: "Carmen" our first year, "Die Fledermaus" the next, the revues "Some Enchanted Evening" and "Beguiled Again." Elizabeth and I love returning to and performing in the Carr Amphitheater – it's become almost a second home.

For the past two years Beth has joined us for First Night concerts at Saranac Lake in the Adirondacks, where Elizabeth and I direct High Peaks Opera. Our children have grown up together (we both have sons named Noah!), and we've watched my daughter, Annachristi, evolve from a third-grader to a young lady in the years our family has made its annual Duxbury/Hingham odyssey.

In 2008, we joined Beth for the Duxbury Music Festival, where we worked with the incredible young soprano Natalie Polito – we were impressed with her vocal fireworks and blown away by her dramatic abilities when we directed her in opera scenes. Our production of "Fledermaus" that summer proved we all had great chemistry on stage. For this year's Evenings Under the Stars production, Opera Under the Stars, we amigos are adding Natalie and the amazing baritone Andrew Garland to the mix. As usual, Elizabeth will join us as accompanying pianist.

Opera Under the Stars features some of opera's greatest hits such as "Sempre libera" from "La Traviata," the quartet and "La donna e mobile" from "Rigoletto," arias from "La Boheme" and "The Barber of Seville," the breathtakingly beautiful "Lakme and Pearlfishers" duets. It includes the devilish "Serenade from Faust," along with the uplifting final trio. And we end with a bang: selections from Gilbert and Sullivan's hilarious "Pirates of Penzance."

We love this program so much that we are performing it with High Peaks Opera at the Lake Placid Center for the Arts at the end of August! But you don't need to travel that far to hear us. We're right in your own backyard.

Join us for Opera Under the Stars on Saturday, July 28, 7 p.m., at the Jane Carr Amphitheater, One Conservatory Drive in Hingham. For tickets, visit www.sscmusic.org or call 781-749-7565, ext. 22.

Mother Nature

Hello Cohasset, how is everyone enjoying what has been a pretty good summer so far in terms of Mother Nature? Well, we have had some pretty amazing thunder and lightning storms, including some hail but the weekends overall have been pretty darn good. I am just going to throw this little, tiny reminder out there because I have to so...with this being the last copy of July, 2012, the month of August brings a lot of Back to School/College announcements and news. Please make sure to send it all in to me in a timely fashion, always no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm to aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com and I will include it in that Friday's column. Ok, that is done, now back to Summer and the news, phew!

Young tri-athlete

Wow, I received some amazing news from a very proud set of parents this week. Cohasset: stand up and give a Standing O! Congratulations go out to Miss Ava Doherty, 9-years-old, who competed this past Sunday in the New England Kids Triathlon, held at the MIT Campus in Cambridge.

The event is the largest kids tri in New England in 2012, and one of the 10 largest in the US this year. Nearly 600 kids ages 6-15 participated. The racecourse for the 'junior' division (Ava's) consisted of a 100-yard swim, 3-mile bike, and 0.5-mile run. She had a great time, and finished the race in 28:34.

Ava was also the only kid from Cohasset who participated in the event. In a couple years, look out Cohasset Tri! :)

Fun for kids

Looking for free summer fun for your children and their friends? Crafts, snacks, songs and stories are being offered to all children entering grades 1-5 at Beechwood Congregational Church, 51 Church St., on August 13-17 from 9 a.m. to noon. Spread the word, and register your kids today. Call Sue at (781) 383-6836 for more information or go to: www.groupvbspro.com/vbs/ez/beechwoodvbs.

Tabor honors

The following Cohasset students were named to the high honors, honors and commended lists at Tabor Academy for Semester 2 of the 2011-2012 academic year. High honors is earned by compiling an overall average of 90 or above. Honors is earned by compiling an overall average of 85 or above. Students earn commendation for achieving an overall average of 80 or above, with no grade below 75 and no more than one grade between 75 and 80.

High Honors – Class of 2012: Doyle Calhoun, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Calhoun.

Honors – Class of 2012: Riley Calhoun, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Calhoun. Class of 2014: Mark McKenna, son of Mr. and Mrs. James McKenna.

Commended – Class of 2012: Derick Buffum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Buffum IV.

Congratulations, all!

Where's Waldo

The "Where's Waldo in Cohasset" scavenger Hunt ends on Mon. Jul. 30. People have been roaming all over Cohasset spotting the famous fellow in the striped shirt and black-rimmed specs. There is still plenty of time! So pick up your search list at Buttonwood or go to their website at www.buttonwoodbooks.com for the complete list of participating merchants.

Tickets are being distributed at 20 local businesses. Please bring the "I Found Waldo at ___" tickets to Buttonwood. Eight tickets yield a Waldo button while 16 tickets returned earn a Waldo button and an entry into the prize drawing. Prizes include a complete six-volume set of Waldo books, and other items generously donated by some of the participating merchants. The grand celebration will be held at Buttonwood Books & Toys on Tue. July 31 at 7 p.m.. Prizewinner will be drawn from eligible participants, but there will be cake and activities for everyone. All are welcome at this festive event. Please call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 with any questions.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

Strolling through the village

Summer Stroll returns to Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

When summer is in full swing, Village businesses can count on one thing: "We're strolling," said Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's and member of Cohasset's Chamber of Commerce.

The Village Stroll, including the summertime staple and the holiday version in December, have become a Cohasset tradition for the past four years. Whether you're new to Cohasset or a long-time resident, the Summer Village Stroll is a great time to roam around town and see what's new. This year's event takes place on Thursday, August 2 from 4 to 7 p.m.

Stores like Darilynn's will be open a little later than usual so strollers can take advantage of the fun and festivities. Participating businesses will be decorated with balloons.

What do strollers do? Try scurrying through the scavenger hunt, shopping the sidewalk sale, and sampling wine, cookies and other goodies. Kids can make starfish ornaments at Darilynn's, decorate cookies at Fresh Memories, or get their faces painted.

The scavenger hunt begins at the Chamber's table in front of St. Stephen's. Once the hunt is completed, strollers can head over to the Red Lion Inn for a raffle. Debbie Hardey from 3a shop Local Vines and Gourmet will bring wines for the tasting.

Folks stroll along South Main Street during the first annual summer stroll three summers ago. PHOTO/CRAIG GOEDECKE

Strollers will also hear songs from St. Stephen's Carillon; Carillonneur Mary Kennedy will ring the bells starting at 3:45 p.m. From 4 to 4:15, the public is invited to visit Kennedy while she rings the bells in St. Stephen's tower.

Kennedy encourages folks to "walk around to the back of the church, look for the open door, and come on up!"

The weekly Farmers' Market will be going on at the same time, so strollers can pop into village shops and purchase local produce all at once. The Music Circus also has an event that Thursday night: trumpeter Chris Botti is performing at 8 p.m. The Historical Society Museums will also be open during the stroll.

The Village Stroll "ties all these things together," said Evans. "It's become a tradition, and the purpose of it was to pull together what's best about Cohasset in the summer."

If you go:

What: Summer Village Stroll; sidewalk sale, scavenger hunt, wine tasting, face painting, games, activities and more
Where: Cohasset Village: Depot Court, South Main Street, Ripley Road and Pleasant Street
When: Thursday, August 2, 4 to 7 p.m.
Why: To support local businesses and celebrate summer in Cohasset Village.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

Home and garden

ERIN DALE

Barbecues and beach trips are underway, but summer is also a great time to tackle improvement projects around the house. Our panel of local eco experts has shared some great tips this month for saving money, saving energy, and going a little bit greener.

Save time, money and resources with a paint color consultation

"Here is a truly simple tip, but one we thought was worth mentioning as it comes up for homeowners all the time: Choose paint colors wisely. How many times have you painted a room only to find that you don't like the color? This situation causes homeowners to have to repaint, using more paint, more supplies and more valuable time and resources. We have seen this so much that we began offering complimentary color consultations for all of our clients. We actually go out and meet with clients to discuss color options, let them know what works best in certain spaces and inform them on what types of paints work best on certain surfaces. If you are not using a painting service, try purchasing samples of the paints you are considering and paint a small area on the wall to see if you really like it. The small sample containers can be recycled or made into storage containers for small items like nails, screws or bolts." – James Wolfe, owner, Wolfe Painting Company, Cohasset, www.wolfepaintingco.com

Carcinogen-free cookware

"Avoid nonstick cookware. The EPA says that PFOA, a chemical employed in the manufacture of the polymer used in nonstick cookware, PTFE is likely to be carcinogenic (cancer-causing) to humans. Industry types contend very little PFOA winds up in nonstick pans, often sold under the brand name Teflon. Environmental health types contend it gets into your food via scratched pans and into your lungs if cookware is heated to high temperatures. Use cast iron, enamel coated cast iron, and stainless steel pans instead." – Paula Keif, owner/green industry expert, Green Koala & Go Green Web Director, Marshfield, www.greenkoala.net

Recycle party leftovers

"Graduations, weddings, and general party time! What to do with all of the leftovers? Re-purpose your party leftovers from florals to food with Special E, a socially responsible, environmentally friendly green business that will actually come and take many of your leftover party items and recycle them. Contact them at 888-448-1930 or at www.thespeciale.com." – Kelly Dolloff, owner/designer, Artistic Blossoms Floral Design Studio, Marshfield and Boston, www.artisticblossoms.com

Sample your soil

"Know your soil! The ideal soil pH is 6.0-7.0 to plant anew or over seed your existing lawn. By taking a small sample of soil and sending it to a certified laboratory (UMASS Amherst is a great regional facility), you can learn your soil's pH and microbial activity and then determine what is needed to amend it. Most lawns only need a small amount of additives per year and most homeowners over lime and over fertilize their lawns. This can lead to staggering amounts of runoff into local watersheds that are not necessary." – Jenifer Apazidis, Pearls Premium, Wayland, www.pearlspremium.com

Local seniors visit Marshfield Senior Center

Arne Gjesteby, Gerald Reed and Peggy Reed get ready to board the buses for the trip to Marshfield.

On Wednesday, July 18, 30-plus Cohasset seniors, as well as members of the Social Service League, the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and the Elder Affairs staff took a field trip to the Marshfield Senior Center, followed by a delicious lunch at PJ's restaurant. Sponsored by the Social Service League, the trip was arranged so interested Cohasset residents could witness the activities available at a center dedicated to a senior clientele.

Carol Hamilton, Director, Marshfield Council on Aging, gave the Cohasset seniors a guided tour of their center. Cohasset seniors stopped to look in on a French class, book group, woodworking workshop, a rug-hooking group as well as a painting class. In an expansive dining room, Marshfield seniors met for coffee and listened as a talented senior musician played the piano.

Cohasset attendees perused the gift shop, with merchandise including handmade gifts and "gently used" items for sale. After the trip, the Cohasset visitors were overwhelmingly enthusiastic, commenting on the light and spacious environment, as well as the wealth of enrichment opportunities available.

Several time during their conversations, seniors mentioned the "energy" and "sense of community" at the Marshfield Center, and how convenient and efficient it was to have all of these programs, services and activities under one roof.

THE WRECK OF THE SHIP SERAMPORE, OFF COHASSET.

The Serampore grounded on the reef at Kimball's Hook, near Atlantic Avenue. COURTESY PHOTO

The wreck of the Serampore

The following was provided by the Cohasset Historical Society.

The newspaper account of the wreck mentioned the great hospitality and kindness shown to the officers and crew by the citizens of Cohasset...

One stormy day in January 1858, the ship Serampore arrived in Massachusetts Bay near Minot's Lighthouse off the Cohasset shore. While anchored awaiting a pilot boat, the storm increased and one of the ship's anchors became unshackled. The raging sea began to toss the ship and the Serampore seemed destined to be wrecked on the dangerous Cohasset rocks beyond the reach of help. The crew, suffering from the cold, was disheartened. The gray afternoon became a black night and the Captain decided to beach the ship to save the lives of the crew. Before reaching the safety of Pleasant Beach, the ship struck bottom. Floating a cotton bale to the beach, with a line attached, the crew pulled a lifeboat to the Serampore. All got safely to shore in two trips, the sailors first and then the officers and Captain Stone.

The picture shows the Serampore grounded on the reef at Kimball's Hook, near Atlantic Avenue. Her cargo of cotton bales, flour, molasses, etc. is being discharged onto another boat which will be towed to Boston for delivery. Captain R. B. Forbes of Boston, with his little steamboat "Neptune" is supervising the salvage operations.

On a calm day following the storm a newspaper artist named Hill made a pencil sketch of the salvage operation. An engraver, Danereau, prepared the plate for printing. Hill did not show the new granite Minot's lighthouse because it had not yet been completed after the destruction of the first Minot's in 1851. Note the lightship substituting for the lighthouse at the extreme left of the engraving.

The newspaper account of the wreck mentioned the great hospitality and kindness shown to the officers and crew by the citizens of Cohasset "who are proverbial for their care of shipwrecked mariners and for their daring exertions to save life at the peril of their own."

What became of the Serampore is unknown but the carved eagle which adorned the ship's transom was saved and is now part of the collection of the Cohasset Historical Society. The eagle, along with the original salvage documents for the Serampore will be part of the fall exhibit at the Society's headquarters, 106 South Main St. The exhibit will be highlighted by an opening cocktail party on September 8th. Please call the Society at 781-383-1434 for details and tickets.

BRIEFLY

Summer Sunday Carillon concerts

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of bells (23), President Calvin Coolidge and his wife Grace stood on Cohasset Common, listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

• July 29: Trevor Workman (Birmingham, England)

• Aug 5: Lisa Lonie (St. Thomas Church, Whitemarsh, Penn.)

• Aug 12: George Matthew, Jr. (Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt.)

Cohasset Common, in the center of town, is one of the best listening places. Parking is ample and free. Bring your lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while the bells are ringing. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower is offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

The Carillon Concert Series is sponsored by St. Stephen's Church. This year's series is also supported in part by a generous donation from Alicia and John Seavey of Cohasset and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local branch of the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

AFFECTS NORTH COHASSET

Aquarion Company calls for mandatory water restrictions

Aquarion Water Company of Massachusetts today initiated mandatory outdoor water restrictions for customers in Hingham, Hull, and North Cohasset. This action is being taken because recent hot, dry weather has resulted in a high demand for water.

Under these restrictions, water usage for irrigation systems and sprinklers is allowed on an odd/even basis from 6 p.m. to 10 a.m. as follows. Homes with even house number addresses can water between 6 p.m. to 10 a.m. on even numbered days; and homes with odd numbered addresses can water between 6 p.m. and 10 a.m. on odd numbered days. Hand-held hoses are allowed at any time.

Under Aquarion's Rules and Regulations approved by the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities, failure to comply with the mandatory restrictions will first result in a written warning. Subsequent violations can result in the discontinuance of water service with termination and restoration fees ranging from $49.00 to $294.00 depending on the day of the week, time of day and holidays.

The lack of rainfall since July 5th, along with recent high temperatures, has prompted more outside water usage. In an effort to conserve the water supply and protect the environment, we are asking that our customers restrict their outside water usage.

Aquarion recommends several ways to use water wisely to help in the water conservation effort:

- Allow grass to grow longer — taller grass shades itself, is healthier and requires less water.
- Be careful not to allow irrigation water to fall on paved areas.
- Use brooms or blowers, instead of water, to clean decks, driveways and sidewalks.
- Repair all leaks in plumbing and fixtures.
- Install water-saving shower heads and low-flow faucet aerators.

Board of Health keeping eye on mosquito activity

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) and the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Program are performing ongoing surveillance of mosquitoes for incidence of Arboviruses (such as Eastern Equine Encephalitis [EEE] and West Nile Virus [WNV]) throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as part of the Massachusetts Arbovirus Surveillance and Response Plan. In addition to receiving weekly surveillance updates from MDPH, the Cohasset Board of Health regularly participates in conference calls with MDPH and other municipalities throughout Southeastern Massachusetts and the state.

According to data published on the MDPH website (http://www.mass.gov/dph/wnv), "multiple cases of human disease caused by EEE or WNV are considered unlikely at this time." Although the Town of Cohasset is currently assigned the risk category of low, this does not mean that the area is risk-free, as infection may occur anywhere. Mosquitoes infected with EEE have been trapped in the towns of Easton and Carver, and the surrounding areas are currently assigned "high" or "moderate" risk levels.

The Cohasset Board of Health recommends that residents take the following personal precautions in order to avoid mosquito bites and the illnesses that they may cause, including:

- Repairing screens in windows and doors. Mosquitoes may enter a dwelling or commercial establishment if doors are left open and if screens are defective. Chapter II of the Massachusetts State Sanitary Code requires that all windows below the fifth floor of a dwelling must have screens that are at least 16 mesh per square inch and that all doors opening directly inside the dwelling unit have doors with similar screens installed from April 1 through October 30, both inclusive;
- Avoid standing water. Mosquitoes are attracted to areas containing standing water, and lay their eggs in the standing water. Bird baths, rain gutters, drains, flower pots, wading pools and other sources of standing water should be drained twice weekly;
- Apply mosquito repellant when outdoors – especially from dusk to dawn. MDPH recommends using a repellant with DEET or IR3535 as the active ingredient. All insect repellants should only be used in accordance with the instructions on the product's label. Per MDPH, "DEET products should not be used on infants under two (2) months of age and should be used in concentrations of 30% or less on older children". For more information about mosquito repellants, please refer to the MDPH fact sheet about mosquito repellants, which can be found at http://www.mass.gov/eohhs/docs/dph/cdc/factsheets/mosquito-repellents.pdf;
- Wear long sleeves and long pants when performing outdoor activities during mosquito peak hours. In addition to using appropriate mosquito repellants, wearing proper clothing (i.e., long-sleeved shirts, long pants and socks) when outdoors will help keep mosquitoes from biting your skin; and
- Use mosquito netting on infant carriages and outdoor play areas. This netting should allow the infant and/or toddler to breathe while still block any access points for mosquitoes to enter the area and bite the child.

More information can be found on the MDPH Arbovirus Surveillance Information web page at http://www.mass.gov/dph/wnv, by calling the MDPH recorded information line at 866-MASS-WNV (866-627-7968), or by calling the MDPH Epidemiology Program at 617-983-6800. As always, residents may also contact the Cohasset Board of Health at 781-383-4116 or by email at fzemel@cohassetma.org.

IN MEMORIUM

US Navy band concert for Jack Worley

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The band plays on.

It's been eight months since beloved former Recreation Director Jack Worley passed away, and the rec. department is honoring him with a special tribute.

On Tuesday, July 31 at 6 p.m., the US Navy Band Northeast's "Pops Ensemble" will play in memory of Worley. Worley served as Recreation Director for over 30 years before retiring about four years ago, but current director Ted Carroll said that Worley remained a cherished part of the department. Even in retirement, Worley would fill in whenever Carroll needed him.

Tuesday night's concert "is all about him," said Carroll, adding that Worley was an early proponent of the rec. department's summer concert series. With the US Navy Band playing in Worley's honor, the series has come full circle.

"One of the first concerts Jack brought to town in 1977 was the US Navy Band," Carroll said.

The concert is being funded through the South Shore Playhouse Associates Inc., and is also supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council. The Cohasset posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars (9146), the American Legion (118) and the Sons of the American Legion also made donations.

The late Jack Worley is being honored Tuesday with a concert in his honor. FILE PHOTO

The assistance from the veterans' groups is fitting, said Carroll, because Worley himself was a veteran.

Worley "served 14 months in Vietnam and got a Purple Heart for that," Carroll said. "Jack never talked about his military career [at work]; none of us knew."

Worley's obituary states that he volunteered to join the Navy and served as a Navy Corpsman in the Vietnam War from 1964 to 1968, contributing in the battle of Khe-Sanh. For his service, Worley received the following honors: Navy/Marine Commendation; National Defense Service Medal; Republic of Vietnam Campaign Medal and Service Medal; Good Conduct and Purple Heart (1966).

When he returned to the U.S., he attended Northeastern University and graduated in 1973. The following year, Worley became the very first rec. director in Marshfield before moving on to Cohasset in 1976, where he worked for 33 years.

The US Navy Band is a full 36-piece band, "one of the top bands going around," said Carroll, who added that he hopes to see a good turnout.

"We're really looking forward to it," Carroll said of the rec. department, adding, "It's going to be an emotional night."

If you go:

What: US Navy Band Pops Ensemble in memory of Jack Worley
Where: Cohasset Town Common
When: Tuesday, July 31, 6 p.m.

OUR VIEW

Summer needs at food pantry

While it is wonderful to think of needy individuals and families during the holiday season – from Thanksgiving to New Year's – needs do not diminish during the rest of the year.

Cohasset residents of all ages and income levels have been a huge support to the Cohasset Food Pantry. Groups and organizations have also been extremely helpful.

But with the warm weather and family vacations, many of us are not thinking about donating to the food pantry because we are busy enjoying the summer and doing other things.

High unemployment and a shaky economy have affected some more than others.

For some people, this multi-year recession has been invisible. But for others, it is all too real.

One of the Cohasset Mariner's sister newspapers, the Pembroke Mariner & Express, recently reported about a resident who has fallen upon hard times and was living in her car.

No one can predict the future. We do not know how long the recession will last and how many more people could lose their jobs if companies do not rebound.

But we can all help by donating to our food pantry.

About the Cohasset Food Pantry

■ The Cohasset Food Pantry is located at 129 South Main St., in the rear of St. Anthony's rectory.
The telephone number is 781-383-0219 ext. 25. Please leave a message and your call will be returned.
■ The Food Pantry mailing address is: P.O. Box 297 Cohasset, MA 02025
■ The Cohasset Food Pantry serves any resident in need. Anyone seeking assistance may call and speak to a director. Applications must be completed and two forms of identification, a license and proof of residency are required.
■ The pantry is open every Tuesday morning from 8:30 to 10:30. Donations may be left at the pantry from 9 to 10:30, any Tuesday. They may also be left at any Church in Cohasset on Sunday mornings.
St. Anthony's Parish Center is open to receive donations from 9 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.
Stop & Shop and Shaw's supermarkets provide donation boxes for the Cohasset food pantry.
Monetary donations may be made out to the Cohasset Food Pantry and mailed to the P.O. Box.

Charging fee for bridge jumpers

As a former "jumper" and Sandy Beach lifeguard (50 plus years ago) I have been following with interest this year's version of the controversy over jumping off the Border Street Bridge. It was then as it is now a "rite of passage" and a real fun thing to do on a summer day. It is dangerous but so is riding a bike and I for one believe that it would be a shame to try to stop it totally, especially via barricades or netting.

Suggestion: Why not charge a fee for the right to jump off the bridge? Maybe under the auspices of the recreation commission or the harbormaster a system for selling jumping cards (eg. 10 jumps for $5) with the revenue to be used to hire some young lifeguards to monitor and protect. Times could be set when jumping is permitted (ie. incoming tides under the bridge are much safer than outgoing tides) and maybe the purchase of these passes should be limited to residents and could only be purchased by adults (for use by their kids) and would require signing of a liability waiver.

It is obvious that "policing" does not work for the reasons that the police themselves have stated and it is also obvious that educating to the danger also does not work. The fact that no one has ever drowned after over 100 years of kids jumping off this bridge suggests that while there is a degree of danger it is not so dangerous that it should be prohibited (we all understood even in the 1950s that Cunningham Bridge was a different story and seriously dangerous).

I am sure that there are some potential flaws and liabilities in such an approach but if we respect tradition and joy we should think twice before putting an end to both where this bridge is concerned.

For a poignant view of this rite of passage go to YouTube and do a search for "Ian Border Street Bridge."

Sailing Club appreciates support

The Cohasset Sailing Club wants to thank everyone who made the 2012 launch party a rousing success. We raised $6,100 from the silent auction, which goes to support the sailing program, and are especially grateful to the local businesses who donated items.

These are: Alyssa Fortin Photography, Atlantic Bagel, Atlantica/Olde Salt; Baked, Behn Basketball Camp, Bumble Bee Landing; Coastal Nissan, Cohasset Dental, Cohasset Maritime Institute, Cohasset Swim Center; Darilynn's, Descenza's; Feng Shui, Flemings, French Memories; Great Neck Grille; Hoadley Martinez Architects; Mangia Pizzeria, Mr. Dooley's Pub; Outside In; Paperscapes, Pink Tulip, Ports; Rudolph Adamo Salon; Tina Watson, Twist; Wicked Good Cupcakes, Willow Spa.

In addition, the members collectively raised $8,500 for the new clubhouse building from the flash pledge drive. Your support for the CSC is much appreciated.

Wake up, Cohasset!

I am a senior citizen who lived in town for over 75 years. While I currently live with family in Scituate, I consider myself a citizen of Cohasset, and, in fact, volunteer weekly for Cohasset Elder Affairs. On Wednesday, July 18, I was one of about 30 seniors who were hosted to a wonderful excursion by the Social Service League – a visit to the Marshfield Senior Center on Webster Street.

There were many activities going on while we toured the building. The atmosphere was a happy one. The guests there were busy with knitting, rug braiding, taking French lessons, exercising, woodworking, watercolor painting, reading in their library and partaking in many other activities.

A center like this is what Cohasset needs. With so many seniors coming along, we need to have a dedicated place to go to unwind, relax, and socialize with like members of our community. I spoke to two of the guests in Marshfield, who said, "We are never lonely. We come here every day!"

After the tour, we ate a delicious lunch at P.I's restaurant. Thank you Social Service League for a lovely meal, but most of all, for showing us what a thriving Senior Center looks like. The lack of such a center here does a disservice to our seniors.

Clarification offered on boathouse background

I would like to comment on a recent article in the Mariner about the boathouse at Mariners Park on Parker Ave.

The article says the following: "At about the same time, the newly vacant Hagerty Furniture property was bought by the Town of Cohasset. It was Hubbard, Buckley, McCabe, and a group of rowing enthusiasts who joined forces and shared vision to restore the property and provide recreational and competitive rowing for kids and instruction in boat building."

The entire property was developed by the Hagerty Committee which was formed by Al Moore, and a number of citizens. The boathouse was initially stabilized with funds that the Hagerty Ccommittee raised as part of the restoration of the entire property. Later funds were taken from the Hagerty account to re-roof the boathouse and do other improvements. $50,000 from the Community Preservation Committee was used to do extensive work on the building. Part of that money was spent to replace the roof, which was not even ten years old.

The Hagerty Committee spent more than ten years developing the entire property now known as Mariners Park. The committee received little input from any group while developing the property. Al Moore, Vee Roebuck, Paul Pattison, Ham Tewksbury, David Wadsworth, Merle Brown, Herb Jason, and many others with a long history of volunteering their time are the ones who made the property what it is today. CMI certainly did organize the rowing club, but it was the hard work and vision of the Hagerty group that is responsible for the property being what it is today. I just wanted to set the record straight.

COMMENTARY

Police station on Tuesday's agenda

PAUL CARLSON

Good news on the police station front. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, Deputy Chief William Quigley, and the patrolmen's union have collaboratively reached a tentative agreement that will not require the station to go dark. As a result of this collaboration, the station will be covered by officers who will work the two shifts from 4 p.m. to midnight and midnight to 8 a.m. There will always be two officers on patrol at all times. The desk officer will stay in the station when there is a prisoner in lock-up. Given how the station currently operates, our dispatchers are not trained as police officers therefore this joint solution will provide for enhanced public safety to the citizens of Cohasset by having an officer man the window.

However, if there is an emergency that requires the third officer to respond and no one is in lock-up, they may leave the station to respond accordingly for short durations of time. General administrative questions including gun permits, copies of police or accident reports will continue to be handled during normal business hours Monday through Friday.

In addition, there will be a secure safe haven room in the lobby of the station as well as cameras capturing the perimeter of the station. Once somebody enters the safe haven room they will be in automatic video and audio contact with the regional 911 dispatch center. This will provide improved security for people requiring emergency attention.

The Board of Selectmen will be discussing this plan with the union and police management at our meeting on July 31. If you have any questions or concerns, please come to the meeting or contact your Selectmen. You can also watch the proceedings on our public access channels.

Speaking of the public access channels, Cohasset Community Television now has a website: www.143tv.org. Please visit the website for information on broadcast schedules and other useful information. CCTV welcomes people who wish to create shows or who want to volunteer. If you have a great idea for a show, you may end up with your own program.

Paul Carlson lives at 18 Old Coach Road. He is the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen. The views expressed are the author's personal opinion and are not an official position of the Board of Selectmen.

HEALTH NOTES

Pollution has effect on lifestyle and the budget

STEVE BOBO

Federal state and town plans are well advanced to address the cleanup of non-point sources, and the dimension of the problem is becoming more widespread.

We've often closed Bassing Beach to swimming. The cause of the high readings of enterococci in the waters of the town are not known directly, but they are probably attributable to the main cause of increased pollution everywhere; increased development, increased population, ignorance of the effect of increased surface water runoff from our developed places such as parking lots and roads.

But whatever the cause, it's changing the way we have to live in our environment. We can't eat clams or mussels from our beaches. Now we can't swim in our harbor, or eat fish from our ponds without some form of remediation – re-washing; holding ponds, etc.

A scientific consensus, mostly EPA data, indicates that after cleanup of major pollution sources, the rest is from so-called "non-point sources." These are mainly surface water runoff from, non-pervious surfaces such as driveways, roads, parking lots, etc., and improperly processed septic system effluent.

Federal state and town plans are well advanced to address the cleanup of non-point sources, and the dimension of the problem is becoming more widespread.

For Cohasset, minimum Federal and state requirements call for identification and mapping of all catch basins and storm drains, the primary conduits through which surface water enters our ponds, streams, rivers and estuaries. In Cohasset, we have about 900 storm drains. Development of a plan for the town to complete the identification and mapping effort to DEP standards has been estimated to cost about $200,000. The cost of fixing the problem involves modification of those storm drains that have been determined to represent the major risk. We now have an ongoing pilot program for upgrading more storm drains. Cost of the original project when complete was about $130,000. Assuming that the town will eventually have to upgrade about 50 percent of its 900 catch basins and storm drains, the effort to clean up our water resources would be in the neighborhood of $6 million.

This is now becoming a pressing problem, unless you don't want to swim in our ponds and estuaries, or fish from our streams or perhaps, wade in a brook. The town will work this problem over time and with minimum impact on the budget. We have been successful in obtaining Federal and State money for this cleanup. The pilot catch basin upgrades referred to earlier will probably receive additional grants to complete. We just received a grant from the state to develop a program to tell us where our pollution is coming from. And over the years, we will carry out our plan and non-point pollution sources will be cleaned up.

This massive attempt to mediate the harmful effects of our present way of life goes on unnoticed and unheralded. Instead, we worry about sidewalks and lighting and fence rails. And we spend lavishly, on bigger houses, better lawns, trash haulers, and on. The cycle will continue; we will have buried electrical cables. We pay for weekly beach sampling to see if the water is still clean around our now million dollar homes.

At minimum, why shouldn't we have the same concern and level of interest in those things that are sure to affect us and our offspring? It's appropriate, maintaining our environment, and the way we treat our living space, and yes, the way we feed our kids.

THOSE FARAWAY PLACES

Falling in love with St. Petersburg

Peter's daughter, Czarina Elizabeth, was also a visionary. In 1754 she ordered the building of the Winter Palace.

MARY J. KENNEDY

I love you, city of Peter's creation. I love your stern harmonious aspect...the transparent twilight and moonless gleam of your pensive nights. (Alexander Pushkin.)

Tsar Peter's magical city of canals and bridges, spires and golden domes. If Moscow is the great heart of Russia, then St. Petersburg is its lively soul – the cultural capital of concerts, art museums, palaces and gardens. City of writers Pushkin and Dostoevsky; musicians Tchaikovsky and Rimsky-Korsakov; scientists Lomonosov and Pavlov. In the beginning, however, this city was first the dream, then the work of Tsar Peter the Great.

At 6 feet 7 inches, Tsar Peter was a giant of a man with an even greater vision: To "cut a window open to the West" to let Russia "stand firmly on the Baltic Sea." In 1703 on a hundred swampy islands of the Neva River, with tens of thousands of workers, Peter's dream of Russia belonging to Europe rather than to Asia became a reality. Only nine years later he declared it the new capital of the country.

It's a city that has known three name changes. During World War I, it became Petrograd, to reject German influence. In 1924, after Lenin's death, it was Leningrad, to honor the "greatest leader of the Proletariat." Then in 1991, 54 percent of the citizens voted to restore the city's original name as a tribute to its far-sighted founder, Peter the Great.

Peter's daughter, Czarina Elizabeth, was also a visionary. In 1754 she ordered the building of the Winter Palace. The largest structure in the city, with over 1,000 rooms, it was lavishly decorated and later filled with masterpieces of art and antiquities. It was the Empress Catherine – that great "collector or masterpieces and men" – who set aside part of the palace she called "The Hermitage" (French for secluded spot) for her growing collection. Common folk, of course, not allowed. The empress wrote impishly that "all this is admired by mice and myself." A century later, Tsar Nicholas I ordered that all other buildings, except churches, had to be at least 6 inches lower than his winter residence. Even today, the architectural harmony of the city is breathtaking. And best of all, common folk are invited to enjoy at least some of the 3 million art works. Spending just one minute admiring each piece will take about 11 years of your time.

St. Petersburg has suffered its share of revolutions and repressions, but it was the terrible Nazi siege of World War II that left the deepest scars. In June 1941 Nazi troops surrounded Leningrad, demanding surrender. When the siege ended, some 900 days later, over 650,000 men, women and children had either starved or frozen to death. So sure of victory was the megalomaniac Hitler, that he ordered engraved invitations sent out for a gala banquet to be held at the Astoria Hotel on Nov. 7, 1942, to celebrate the fall of Leningrad. The great Russian capacity to endure, however, finally triumphed, and the Hero City survived. Composer Dmitri Shostakovich wrote the Seventh Symphony while serving in the city's defense unit. It was first performed in the Philharmonic Hall on Aug. 9, 1942, in glorious defiance of Hitler's boast that he would "own" St. Petersburg by then.

Among the city's many treasures are the golden-domed St. Isaac's Cathedral, the fairytale Church on Spilled Blood, Catherine's Summer Palace in Pushkin, and the spectacular golden fountains at Petrodvorets, Peter the Great's "Russian Versailles," overlooking the Gulf of Finland. Visitors have always found it easy to fall in love with this lovely city!

FOR THE RECORD

It has been wild out there

As scary as great whites can be, there's probably greater concern about mosquitoes and the real potential for more human cases of Eastern equine encephalitis and West Nile virus this summer and fall.

GREGORY MATHIS

The wildness got off to a roaring start with the Cape Cod bear back in late May and has continued well into the summer with everything from coyotes to pythons to sharks to mosquitoes.

The bear's travels created a great deal of media buzz as the 2 1/2-year-old, 200-pounder made its way from the Middleboro area, through Plymouth, then across the Cape Cod Canal on Memorial Day weekend. With confirmed sightings in Sandwich, West Barnstable, Dennis, Brewster, Orleans and Truro, the bear's Cape adventure came to an end in Provincetown in early June.

Wildlife officials said it was the first time in recorded history that a bear was confirmed to be spotted on Cape Cod.

After being relocated off-Cape, the bear showed up in Brookline, apparently looking to start another adventure. But wildlife officials quickly brought an end to those plans and captured the bear once again and relocated it to western Massachusetts.

While bear sightings are less common in this area, we've certainly seen an increase in other wildlife and we're reporting those stories quite regularly.

Coyotes are on the prowl in Pembroke, according to the animal control officer there, as well as in many communities.

Motorists on the South Shore need to be aware and on the lookout for deer, as we've seen more deer versus car accidents being reported in police logs. And when the deer aren't being struck by motor vehicles, they're causing some serious damage in people's yards and gardens.

Fisher cats and fox sightings are also on the rise in many communities, as wildlife continues to take up residence in our neighborhoods and in our backyards.

It's unsettling on many different levels, especially if you have young children or outdoor pets.

Animal control officers will tell you humans are the main cause for many of these creatures being around our homes, especially when trash is left uncovered and food from barbecues is scattered about the deck or yard. Both of these examples draw some of the smaller critters, like raccoons, squirrels and cats, which then draw in the larger and more dangerous predators.

Speaking of predators, another wild story we covered recently featured an 11-foot Burmese python slithering its way through a downtown Plymouth neighborhood. The pet snake, named Al, escaped its confines and terrorized residents, biting one neighbor in the leg before an Environmental Police officer was able to capture it and put it in a cage.

Then there was shark week off the coast of the Cape. With summer vacation season in full swing, great white sharks have decided to make an unwelcome appearance and cause havoc with people's beach plans.

As scary as great whites can be, there's probably greater concern about mosquitoes and the real potential for more human cases of Eastern equine encephalitis and West Nile virus this summer and fall. There are already signs of a serious problem with early positive test results, and panic is starting to set in as aerial spraying has commenced for many communities.

It's easier to avoid the sharks by staying out of the waters they're swimming in. It's much harder protecting yourself against mosquitoes.

The wildness continues. Stay tuned.

July Programs at Wompatuck State Park

Junior Rangers: Preparing a Safe Campsite & Campfire — 3 to 4 p.m. Friday, July 27. This program series captures the imagination of young people through activities that grow future stewards of the environment. The Junior Rangers will learn to tie the "lifesaving knot" – the bowline; learn to pitch a tent and where. There will also be a step-by-step examination of how to build a safe and effective campfire. For children ages 8-12. Meet at the Visitor Center. Rain or shine.

Sunset Hike — 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. Friday, July 27. Take a hike in Wompatuck as the summer sun is setting and explore this serene time of day. Each week we'll discover something different as we experience dusk in the park. Meet at the Visitor Center.

Swamp Tromp! — 1 to 2 p.m. Saturday, July 28. Frogs and bugs and crayfish, oh my! Use our nets and buckets to discover what lives in the waters of Wompatuck. Follow park road down to Boundary Pond where we will meet.

Explore Nature: Caterpillar Caper — 10 to 11 a.m. Sunday, July 29. Chew, chew, chew, what do caterpillars chew? Explore the fields and gardens in search of caterpillars and chrysalises...and perhaps we will catch a glimpse of what caterpillars look like when they grow up. For children and curious adults. Meet at Visitor Center.

Stickers, trash bags are on sale

Stickers will be on sale during normal business hours at the Town Hall and the DPW garage. Stickers will not be sold on the weekend. Stickers are $65 for residents under the age of 65 and $35 for any additional vehicle registered at the same address. The sticker price for a person 65 and older is $25.

A copy of your current registration is required. If leasing your vehicle, you will need proof of residence in addition to the registration. This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, Sandy Beach, as well as, include parking at all areas in town that require a sticker.

Please be advised that all Commercial Contractors and vehicles registered in a business name should pick up their stickers at the Department of Public Works

Residents must purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. A package of 16-gallon bags is $10 and a package of the large, 33-gallon bags are $20.

These bags are available at the Department of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town.

You are encouraged to purchase your sticker through the mail by providing the appropriate fee, a copy of your current registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

VISIONARY

positive way," said Conway's daughter Carol Bulman, the CEO of Jack Conway & Company. "He will be missed by our family, our entire company and all those he helped through his lifetime of giving back to the community."

Born in the Uphams Corner section of Dorchester, Conway spent his summers in Scituate and had a special place in his heart for the community, according to Haraden.

Conway graduated from Boston College High School and then attended the University of Notre Dame. After college, he joined the Navy and served for three and a half years in the U.S. Amphibious Corps. He was honorably discharged following an injury he received while on base in Virginia.

Despite the success of his real estate business, Conway did not start out as a realtor.

According to the book, "The House That Jack Built: The story of an independent Massachusetts realtor," by Marie Fricker, Conway, one of five children and the eldest son, followed his father, John "Jack" Conway Sr. as a sports writer at the Record American Boston Sunday Advertiser (the forerunner of the Boston Herald).

The senior Conway had been the executive sports editor of the newspaper and was known as "Mr. Boston." He was famous for his in-depth interviews with such legendary sports figures as Max Baer, Babe Ruth and Jack Sharkey.

"It wasn't hard for me to get a job at the paper, my father was the boss," Conway was quoted as saying. "I started as a copy boy at 15, then worked my way up through sporting assignments, and after my dad died, I took over many of his writing responsibilities, especially boxing."

After being turned down for an $11 raise, Conway "did the only honorable thing I could do. I quit."

Married and with a young family to support, Conway needed to find a job fast.

As noted in Fricker's book, while scanning the help wanted section of the newspaper in the lobby of the Statler Hotel (now the Boston Park Plaza), he ran into an old friend, Bill Carolan, who was president of the Union Savings Bank.

Carolan offered Conway a job at the bank, which Conway accepted immediately. However, after about 10 days, Conway was back pounding the pavement, after realizing he didn't want to be a bank manager.

Pointing out that Conway had a "wonderful gift of gab," Carolan suggested Conway look into a position in sales.

A quick interview and a handshake landed Conway at a desk in Martin Creel's Natick sales office.

Conway earned his first $100 commission check at 6 p.m. on his first day of work.

After two years of selling houses, Conway figured if he could do this for someone else, he could do it for himself.

He asked his boss where he could set up shop that wouldn't compete with him.

He was told, "Go down to the South Shore. It's dead down there."

So he did.

Fricker states that Conway hung his shingle on a storefront in Hingham Square, and a 50-plus year mission to serve the homebuyers and sellers of southeastern Massachusetts began.

No matter how successful he would eventually become, those who knew him said Conway remained a people person.

He enjoyed the marketing aspect of the company so much that Haraden said Conway moved the marketing department next to his office, "so he was right there."

"He was out there creating a presence for himself early on," Haraden said. "He would just go up and introduce himself and start talking to people. At restaurants people thought he was the manager because he would be going around to all the tables. He wasn't asking for business, or anything like that, but the next time that person was thinking about buying or selling a house they would remember Jack."

Conway was the Massachusetts Association of Realtors President in 1970 and 1971 and earned the group's Realtor of the Year Award in 1971. He was also the former president of RELO, the International Relocation Network.

In 2006 he was honored by the National Association of Realtors and the Cape Cod and Islands Board of Realtors with the "Realtor Emeritus" Award.

He is a past chairman of the Plymouth County Development Council and South Shore Chamber of Commerce, and served on the board of trustees of South Shore Hospital.

Conway was not afraid to get involved in politics.

He served as state chairman of The Citizens for a Massachusetts Tax Cap, a predecessor of Citizens for Limited Taxation, in the late 1970s and led the charge to get Proposition 2-1/2, passed because he believed the combination of high property taxes and state taxes was crippling the local economy. The law took effect on July 1, 1981, has become part of the lexicon of homeowners across the state.

Conway also ran unsuccessfully against US Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Cohasset, for Congress in 1982.

Conway always emphasized the importance of charitable endeavors. MainSpring Coalition for the Homeless named its Middleboro family shelter "The Conway House" in honor of the generous support of Conway and his wife, Patricia. Brockton Area Multi-Services' Conway Children's Advocacy Center for abused children also is named in their honor.

He was also the founder of the Ambassadors of Holy Cross, a group that supports the mission work of the Congregation of Holy Cross in the poorest areas of Peru.

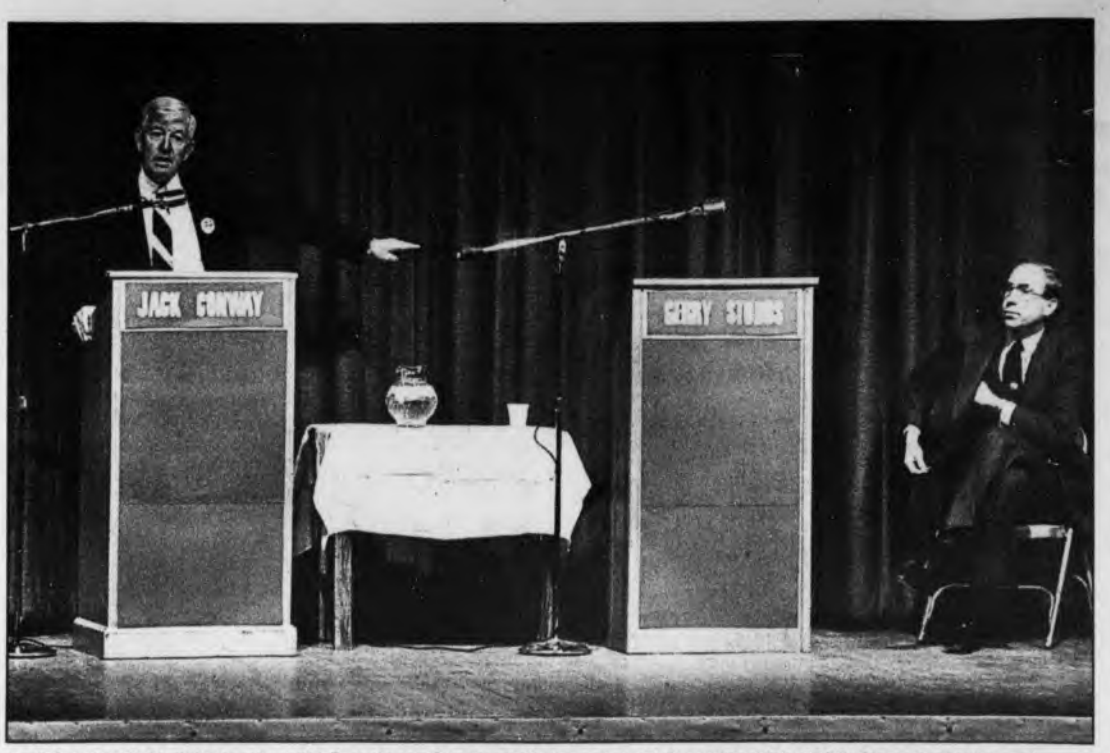
Haraden said Conway retired about three times before officially turning over the title of CEO to Bulman. "But he was never far from the company."

Haraden said the outpouring of condolences from people has been "unbelievable."

"We're all very sad here," he said. "We invited people to stop in and share their memories of Jack. It was very somber, but it was kind of nice. People were remembering how much they had learned from him, and what an impact he had on them."

Conway led the charge back in the early 1980s to get P

Conway leaves his wife, Patricia (Carroll) Conway of Scituate, a son, Jack Conway Jr. of Florida, and two daughters, Barbara Conway and Carol Bulman, both of Scituate. He was the grandfather of six and great-grandfather of four.



Visiting hours will be held from 3 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Thursday, July 26 at St. Mary's Church, One Kent Street in Scituate.

A Mass of Christian Burial will be held at 11 a.m. on Friday, July 27 at St. Mary's Church followed by burial in St. Mary's Cemetery, Scituate.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Jack's memory may be made to any of the following:

Remembering Jack Conway

By Ruth Thompson
rthompson@wickedlocal.com

Jack Conway was more than a successful businessman and devoted family man.

Many who knew him, whether professionally or personally, share a similar view of the man behind "Conway Country."

This view is, that he was a genuine, caring individual who continued to step up to the plate to be a leader and support his community when it would have been easier, and perhaps more convenient, to delegate such responsibilities to others.

His legacy, someone said, is not only in his children, grandchildren and great children, but also in the positive impact he made on those he met.

"It has been my special pleasure to be one of Jack's friends for the past 36 years," said Rob Authier, CEO, of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors. "Jack Conway often referred to others as 'That Great American,' but in fact, Jack himself embodied that label."

Authier said Conway founded and built Conway Country as one would build a New England town - with a family-orientated and strong positive culture that others model.

"Infused into that culture is the highest of Realtor principles, including impeccable ethics, engaging positive outlook and strong business sense," Authier said. "The proof of his effectiveness is that his daughter, Carol, and his entire management team carry on the spirit and culture which Jack and his wife, Patti developed."

"We hear a lot about icons, but Jack truly is a real estate icon. We all will miss the leadership that he provided to the entire New England real estate community. And I will miss my friend...the Great American."

Paul Sullivan, vice president of Sullivan Tire, said he knew Conway for many years, and first and foremost admired him not only for his entrepreneurial skills, but for his family spirit.

"That's what you're looking for today," he said. "I think ultimately it will measure the legacy of the Conway family."

Sullivan described Conway as being a giving man who always looked at the positive.

"He was never negative," Sullivan said. "He was a true leading man. In Hollywood, he would have been the leading man."

He also spoke of Conway as being "genuine."

"He had a skill that I think is missing today," Sullivan said. "He remembered people's names, and the names of their spouses and children. I think that is a skill and a great gift and it makes conversations so genuine."

Sullivan also praised Conway's family, notably daughter, Carol Conway Bulman, the CEO of Jack Conway & Company.

"She will carry his great legacy forward," Sullivan said. "The torch of Jack Conway will continue to burn."

Scituate Board of Selectmen Chairman Joseph Norton simply said that Conway "was a great guy."

"I know that's an understatement, but it's the truth."

Norton said that despite his success, Conway crossed "all sorts of social barriers" and felt that everyone was his friend.

"He was one of those people who said hello to the presidents of big companies, and also made sure to say hello to the guy who cut the grass," Norton said. "He went out of his way to be friends with everyone he met, and it showed in his work ethic and in his efforts around town. He'll be missed."

South Shore Chamber of Commerce President Peter Forman said in Conway's passing, "the entire South Shore has lost a great cheerleader and a great friend.

"I've known Jack since the early 1980s and he literally, with the brand of Conway Country, came down to the South Shore and by building up interest in the real estate market, helped to build the South Shore, and helped it to become the area that people started looking at."

Forman called Conway "a great leader who not only drove residential growth, he drove business growth and helped to support so many charities down this way.

"He is very much a prime architect for the South Shore that we now enjoy."

State Rep. Jim Cantwell, D-Marshfield, said, "Jack Conway is a larger than life figure who has made a tremendous impact on the entire South Shore, 'Conway Country,' with his innumerable acts of kindness and service.

"I loved to be in Jack's company to hear him tell stories of the Boston Herald American Days or of the many characters with whom he had befriended over a long and successful life," Cantwell said. "He would end many stories about a person with 'he was a great American.' Here in Scituate I will remember Jack as the driving force behind bringing back the Fourth of July ceremonies and, with his wife, Patti, for his charitable support for virtually every community organization.

"I will forever be proud to retell stories about Jack with a smile and to end, 'Jack Conway is truly a great American.'"

John Yazwinski, CEO of Father Bill's and MainSpring charitable organization, called Conway "one of our angels.

"Jack and Patti helped establish our mission back in the early 1980s when our brothers and sisters were struggling on the streets of Brockton," Yazwinski said. "He also saw a need for families in our community and we worked together to establish Conway House, in Middleboro, named after him that can house 12 families."

He said Conway, aware of the housing needs for veterans returning from the war, committed to helping the organization provide residences in Brockton where 15 service men and women can have housing.

"Where Jack has seen a social ill or social issue going on, he is always there to help," Yazwinski said, adding that Conway was "a person of principle."

Yazwinski said that for over three decades Conway coordinated a golf tournament that has raised more than $500,000 for MainSpring House and Conway House.

"All proceeds from the tournament went straight to support these residences," he said.

Conway is considered by Father Bill's and MainSpring as one of its founders, according to Yazwinski.

"We were blessed to have had him be a partner in support of our mission."

Ed Covell, Commander of American Legion Post 144, said he first met Conway in 1957 when the two were supporting Murray Snow, who was running for a spot on the Scituate Board of Selectmen.

"I can tell you he was like the best grandfather you could have," Covell said. "He was such a warm and caring person. There were occasions when I would be with him and he would see a sales agent who might have been with him for 25 years, or who had just joined three months ago, and either way he would know them by name and would ask about their family. He had the most amazing mind for names and faces than anyone I've ever met, and I believe that stems from the fact that he really cared about people."

Covell also know Conway from a business perspective; he had worked for Conway for 10 years.

"He was active in the business up until just a few months ago," Covell said. He pretty much worked seven days a week. He and (wife) Patti would take an afternoon drive and visit open houses, or sales offices on a Sunday afternoon. He was always very involved. The business was the second love of his life and he nurtured it. He knew everything that was going on in the company and we all knew it."

Conway was a member of the American Legion Post 144.

"He joined the Legion Post about eight years ago at my insistence," Covell said. "I don't think he thought a lot about his veteran service because he hadn't actually been deployed. But I told him his service was as dear to his country as someone who had served three tours. He had put on the uniform and was ready to go. He is a full-fledged veteran in my book."

Covell said Conway's giving nature was apparent in his generosity towards service men and women.

"He provided comfort to troops and their families for years and years and years," Covell said. "He would send care packages overseas, especially if it were for the son or daughter of one of his employees. And when they returned, he would bring them into a sales meeting and congratulate them and acknowledge their service in front of everyone."

It was Conway, according to Covell, "who got us started in celebrating the Fourth of July in Scituate after a 50-year hiatus.

"He was an absolute inspiration," he said. "He was a mentor to me on how to get projects done. He was just a wonderful, wonderful man. I can't say enough about him. He will be missed dearly."

COMMENTARY

Talking up the Senior Center

BOB ERNST

My contribution begins with a very nice blue covered booklet that anyone can obtain free, from the Town Clerk's office in the Town Hall - Cohasset Town Report 2011.

On Wednesday, July 18, two very nice ladies, one from the League of Social Services and the other from the Council of Elder Affairs took some two or three dozen Cohasset seniors on a tour to the Marshfield Senior Center. The "tour" turned out to be a lot more than that, it turned out to be a revelation! The seniors in Marshfield have, for 10 years, been enjoying a charming, warm senior center teeming, TEEMING! with life - and then they took us to PJ's in Scituate for lunch

There the two volunteers told us the facts of life - that if Cohasset seniors want anything like Marshfield, or for that matter, what Duxbury, Hingham, Hanover, etc., etc. has had, we, the seniors, are going to have to talk it up, work, and get a lot more contributions than the $1 million dollars that the Social Services League has already pledged. This is my response - my contribution.

My contribution begins with a very nice blue covered booklet that anyone can obtain free, from the Town Clerk's office in the Town Hall - Cohasset Town Report 2011. The very simple calculations that follow come from the numbers in that booklet.

At PJ's the seniors were told that about 40 percent of the Real Estate and Personal Property Tax revenue - page 86 -($28,653,809) - comes from senior homeowners; that amounts to $11,461,523. On page 33, Fiscal 2012 Operating Budget, were itemized the only funds dedicated to seniors - Elder Affairs - $184,710. (Of course, I realize that every citizen receives services like Fire and Police etc.) But limiting my letter to specific demographic groups let us look at Page 32 of the 2012 Budget) - Education -$15,477,584. Let us say there are 2,000 Cohasset seniors, which is close, and that we have 2,000 children in school, which we don't. Nevertheless, the amount dedicated to each citizen within the demographic group is ridiculously different $185,000 plus 2,000 seniors equals $92.50 per senior annually whereas $15,500,000 plus 2,000 students equals $7,750. Of course, the number is not intended to be factual but the difference should disturb one's sense of proportion.

What has happened in Cohasset for many years is that our governing bodies have kept real estate taxes lower by taking the millions contributed by seniors, dedicating little in return. A result is that Cohasset trails virtually every town on the South Shore, maybe in the state, senior center-wise and this has the effect of diminishing their quality of life. Vis a vi Marshfield for instance.

I think that instead of concentrating on contributions, welcome surely, that the town should provide funds .for the construction and operation of the senior facility and should do so right away. The Town eminent should establish this fund from real estate tax revenues, a large amount of which is provided by seniors and be sequestered until there is a sufficient amount to build, or borrow the money if that is possible. Something like that should have been done in a time frame comparable to that of our neighbors. And in order to get things started I suggest the following:

The Social Services League and the Council of Elder Affairs should invite the members of the Advisory Committee, the Board of Selectmen and the Town Manger to be their guests at the earliest coffee club at the Lightkeepers House so we, the seniors, can exchange with them, in a very relaxed and friendly atmosphere what they intend to do. Meanwhile there is nothing wrong with seeking contributions from deep and shallow pockets.

And really, fellow seniors, you ought to get that little blue booklet; it is full of interesting stuff.

PS - Sometimes for clarity or brevity the language of letters is blunt. This masks the fact that the writer knows that he may not be in possession of all the facts nor in the position of administering public office for the benefit of all. I realize my deficiency in this respect and offer this letter in what I hope is a constructive manner and with thanks and respect for those who have worked in our behalf especially the "two very nice ladies" and the miracle workers at the COEA.

POLITICS

Davis receives Johnston, Menard endorsements

Genevieve Davis, a Norwell Democrat running to represent the Plymouth and Norfolk district in the state Senate, has been endorsed by Phil Johnston and Joan Menard. Both are former chairs of the Massachusetts Democratic Party and have served for many years in the Legislature.

As a district resident, Johnston believes that Genevieve "is the best candidate to represent us in the Senate. Her knowledge of the district comes from living here for almost 30 years, and her 40 years of financial management of non-profits gives her the skills needed to help solve the problems facing us today."

In addition to his nine years of experience as a state representative, Johnston was the Massachusetts Secretary of Human Services for seven years and later served in the Clinton administration as the New England director for the US Department of Health and Human Services.

Menard served in the Legislature for over three decades. She represented her constituents faithfully for 20 years in the House and for an additional 12 years in the Senate. "Genevieve Davis is the CFO at the New England Board of Higher Education where I am a board member. Her professionalism, knowledge of financial matters and ability to work with people make her an asset to NEBHE as she will be an asset to her district and the state as senator," says Menard.

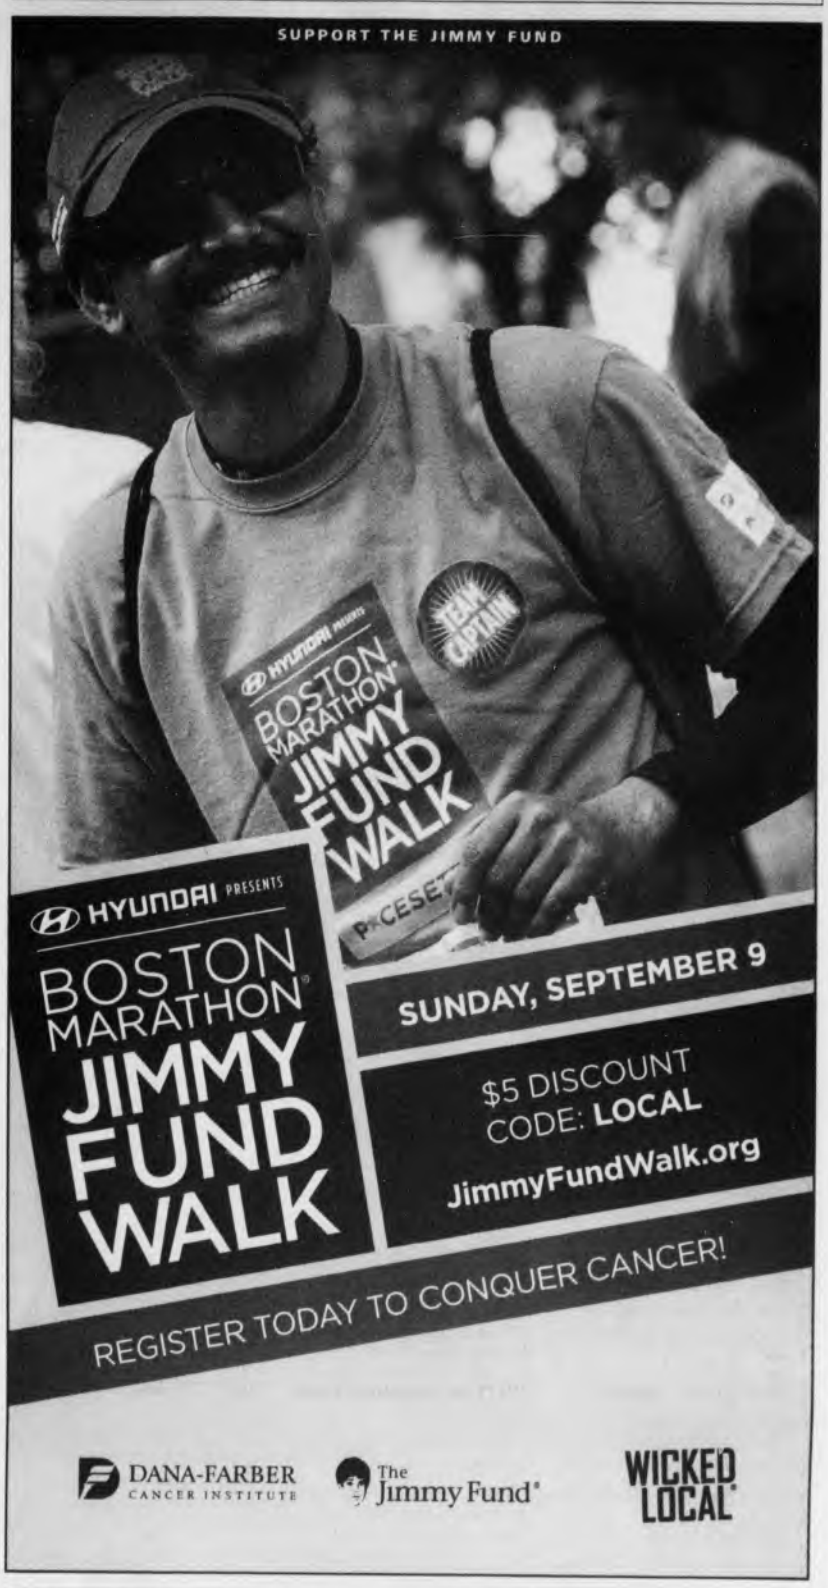
Davis is running to unseat incumbent State Senator Bob Hedlund in this year's election.

The Plymouth and Norfolk District includes the towns of Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, and Scituate in Plymouth County and the towns of Cohasset and Weymouth in Norfolk County.

Mariner election policy detailed

Between now and the primary and national elections – on a space available basis — the Cohasset Mariner will publish a weekly Candidates' Corner and Politics column based on submissions from the candidates themselves or their campaign staff.

Candidates' Corner is available for announcements such as dates for coffees and meet-and-greets, as well as fundraisers. Announcements for Candidates' Corner will be limited to no more than 150 words per week from candidates. Submissions are subject to editing and will run on a space available basis. There is no guarantee of when and where the Candidates' Corner column runs.



Politics allows candidates to submit position statements on issues of relevance in the race. Statements should focus on the candidate's position and not addressing the opponent's position. Word limit for the Politics column is 250. Submissions are subject to editing and will run on a space available basis. There is no guarantee of when and where the Politics column runs. Submissions for the Politics column will not be accepted the week before the election.

Candidates may send submissions via email to editor, Mary Ford at: mford@wickedlocal.com; or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham. Deadline for submissions is noon Wednesday for that week's publication.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election. Letters are subject to editing and may be refused for publication at the editor's discretion.

For questions about campaign advertising, call Tim Oliver at 781-837-4547.

Pan-Mass Challenge

The 33rd annual Pan Mass Challenge is set for Aug. 4 and 5. To register, and for more information about the PMC, which is presented by the Boston Red Sox Foundation and New Balance, visit www.pmc.org. The PMC is the most successful athletic fundraising event in the nation; it raises and contributes more money to charity than any other. Last August, cyclists from eight countries and 37 states rode one of 11 routes that ranged from 25 to 190 miles. Riders included seven-time Tour de France winner Lance Armstrong, Massachusetts Senators John Kerry and Scott Brown, 350 cancer survivors, and avid cyclists and weekend warriors alike. Many rode in support of loved ones being treated for cancer or in memory of those who have been lost to the disease.

GOLF MARATHON

Home for Little Wanderers Marathon

The Home for Little Wanderers' 18th Annual Generous Masters Golf Marathon returns to Black Rock Country Club, 19 Clubhouse Road, Hingham, Monday, July 30. This 36-hole tournament offers participants the option to play for a full or half day to raise money for one of New England's largest nonprofit child and family service agencies.

The fundraiser features a morning and afternoon round of golf and includes a continental breakfast, lunch, reception and awards ceremony. Through programs like The Home for Little Wanderers' Southeast Campus in Plymouth and others across eastern Massachusetts, The Home's services touch the lives of more than 7,000 children and families who are living in at-risk circumstances each year.

Many of the children who come to The Home have had devastating experiences with abuse and neglect and struggle with emotional and behavioral issues. To learn how you can support The Home as a participant or sponsor of Generous Masters, visit www.thehome.org/gmgolf or contact Jamille Benson, jbenson@thehome.org, 617-927-0682.

Cohasset Jr. Little League wins District 8 title

The Cohasset Mariner

For the first time since Cohasset's Youth Baseball and Softball Association introduced its 13/14- year old Junior Little League program in 2005, Cohasset's summer All-Star team has won the District 8 Championship.

On a beautiful night for baseball, the All-Stars squared off against the undefeated and top ranked Quincy All-Stars at Rockland Stadium last Thursday night, and claimed the title with a 5-1 victory.

With an injury to Will Broderick keeping him out of the lineup, the Cohasset squad was down to 10 players, with seven of them 13 year-olds.

Quincy and its large squad of 14 year-olds had roared through the round robin opening round without ever trailing in any game, outscoring their opponents by a combined score of 49-6. The stage was set for an upset, as on this night, the Cohasset All Stars turned in a near perfect game to walk off with the District crown.

Jake Burchill was tremendous on the hill for the Boys in Blue. Jake's curveball was working, and the combination of his bender and high heat shut down the vaunted Quincy attack.

2012 SUMMER OLYMPICS

Golden opportunity

Hassick heading to London to umpire field hockey

By Dan Podheiser
GateHouse News Service

Last October, Amy Hassick was awoken by an email on her cell phone at around 4 o'clock in the morning. The vibrating phone soon revealed the news of a lifetime.

Hassick, a Marshfield native who has been a field hockey umpire for the past 10 years, had been selected to go to the 2012 London Summer Olympics.

"I read the email, and I immediately just started shouting to my boyfriend, 'Guess where I'm going! Guess where I'm going!'" Hassick said. "Then I couldn't sleep for three days afterwards, I was so excited."

It's no fluke that Hassick – who leaves for London today (Wednesday) – is heading to the Olympics.

A former star at Northeastern University, where she was named a Third Team All-American in 1993, Hassick was steps away from heading to the 1996 Atlanta Summer Olympics as a player. She was part of the National Team Training Squad, but narrowly missed the cut for the National Team.

Hassick then began a brief career in coaching. She led the UMass Lowell team for two years (1998 and 1999), and then took an assistant coaching position at Northeastern in 2000.

But coaching wasn't in the cards for Hassick. She wanted to be around the game she loved, just not on the sidelines.

AMERICAN LEGION BASEBALL

Finishing with a flair

Post 118 fights way into playoffs

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

If you were to look at the American Legion Baseball season as a horse race, you would have to say that Cohasset/Scituate has the finishing touch.

Post 118 was able to rebound after a tough middle stretch of the season and come back with a strong finish to pull out the final playoff spot in zone 6 East by a nose.

They are playing Norwood in the best-of-three Zone 6 playoffs that started this past Tuesday with the winner going on to the state tournament. Post 118 lost the opener 14-11, but rebounded with an 8-5 win on Wednesday night to even the best-of-three series 1-1.

Jamie Faber pitched a complete game in the win and Post 118 scored four in the fifth to break open a close game.

"That was not a bad finish to the season," said Cohasset coach Bob Barrows. "We were 5-1 in our last six games and we beat some very good teams, Weymouth Morrissette and Hyde Park."

The finish was good enough for Cohasset to finish 13-9 in the regular season and tie Weymouth for the fifth and final playoff spot. Cohasset won two of its three meetings with Weymouth to win the tie-breaker including a comeback in the seventh inning with three runs in a 10-8 win in the second game between the two teams.

Post 118 used big seventh innings in its final two games of the regular season to clinch the final playoff spot.

They had to rally with three runs in the seventh to defeat Zone 6 East champion Hyde Park by a 7-5 score and they

TALKIN' GOLF

Highlands is a historic link to the past

PAUL HARBER

Watching the British Open last week always gives us the urge to travel down Route 3, negotiate the Sagamore Bridge and follow Route 6 about as far as it goes to North Truro, where I'll take a right and play one of my favorite courses in America: Highland Links.

It is one of my favorites because it is so unique. There isn't a course like it on this side of the Atlantic Ocean. It is a time machine to another era before golf carts, titanium drivers and long putters.

I would not want to play Highland Links every day of the year, but like the British Open, it is a wonderful experience once every 52 weeks.

Alistair Cooke the noted English man of letters, whose not-so-secret pleasure was playing golf, discovered Highland Links on one of his visits to America. He lauded the quaint nine-hole. He called it, "the perfect example of British or Scottish links in the United States."

The ninth hole has been called one of the finest short par-3s. Famed artist Donald Moss was commissioned by Sports Illustrated to paint the short holes in America in 1974. He submitted this one. The green on the ninth is mercilessly sloped.

It is anything but manicured, with baked fairways and unforgiving fescue lining the landing areas. Still, it is a pilgrimage every golfer should make at least once.

The parking lot is a sandy pit, and the clubhouse is no more than a summer shack. The terrain is ragged; unlike the carpet-like conditions you find at most private American courses. Only the tees and putting surfaces are green, as the fairways and rough are various hues of brown, the color of the natural flora. And no architect moved cubic tons of earth to frame these holes. Mother Nature designed the roll and pitch of the playing grounds. There is some underbrush lining a few of the holes, and the rare tree that tries to defy the elements has been beaten down, tortured by the perpetual ocean winds.

Highland Links is the most natural golf course in America.

It's also one of the oldest resort courses. And thanks to its proximity to the National Seashore Park, it is not much different today than when it opened in the 1890s.

There is an irrigation system, but like the course as a whole, it is ancient. It consists of rubber hoses and whirlybird sprinklers that must be moved around the course by workers. Also, sand greens were replaced by grass greens circa World War I and a few holes have been rerouted, but basically this place is a living golf museum.

Although it is only 5,299 yards from the tips, Highland Links plays much longer than its yardage because of the winds that constantly sweep along the rolling oceanfront terrain. You must take the wind into account on every shot. Not just your tee ball and approach irons, but chips and putts as well.

Chip with the wind behind you and you'll wonder if the ball will ever stop. And the greens are quick because the wind dries the putting surfaces.

The first hole is only 250 yards, a short par-4 because nature deemed it was a perfect play for the green. On the second hole, a 460-yard par-5, aim you drive at the Jenny Lind monument, a stone structure in the distance.

After an uphill par-3 of 160 yards, you face another par-4. On your drive, you need to clear one hill. The next two are the best back-to-back holes at Highland Links, a par-4 and a par-5. The approach shot at No. 5 is majestic, with the ocean on your left and the green on a hill. No. 6 begins on a cliff near the churning Atlantic. With the wind behind you (again), two good shots will reach the green on this 470-yarder.

The seventh hole is a disappointment. It used to be a terrific par-3, with Highland Light, the 205-year-old lighthouse, as a backdrop. However, the lighthouse was moved inland because of the eroding coast, and the new hole is incongruous to the rest. Unlike the wide, square tees on other holes, this tee has all sorts of contours, making it as out of place as an orange golf ball at the US Open. The area around the green is lush with magnificent turf, much different from the rugged natural growth around the other greens. The putting surface is elevated and obviously manmade, while the other greens at Highland Links look as though they were made by nature.

But the par-4 eighth hole is a gem, playing along a valley with a bunker deceptively placed 20 yards in front of the putting surface.

And the ninth, as we said, might be the best short par-3s on Cape Cod. The tee hugs the Highland House Museum, which served as a hotel a century ago when the course was laid out for wealthy summer guests.

Immortal legends, such as Bobby Jones and Francis Ouimet, played informal summer rounds here when they vacationed together in Chatham.

Do yourself a favor. Sneak out here one day, even if it's just for one quick nine.

The New England Section PGA of America announced that its first NEPGA Patriot Award has been given to Bob Beach, PGA Head Professional at Braintree Municipal Golf Course.

The Patriot Award is presented to a PGA Professional who personifies patriotism through the game of golf and demonstrates unwavering commitment and dedication to the men and women who have valiantly served and protected the United States of America.

Beach has worked tirelessly with veterans through the many programs he has created for them and their families. In 2011, Beach was one of the founders of the Northeast Accessible Golf Association. This association specializes in helping brave military personnel returning from active duty with their goal of giving the golfing experience to these veterans and thanking them for their service. Bob uses an adaptive golf cart that was attained when he received a PGA Growth of the Game Foundation Grant in 2005. This cart allows Bob and NEPGA Professional volunteers to help disabled veterans with golf instruction and also on course playing opportunities.

Beach continues to offer free clinics on a weekly basis at both indoor and outdoor facilities to veterans and their families.

Bob will receive this award at the NEPGA Annual Awards Dinner that is scheduled for Oct. 26 at Kernwood Country Club.

Juniors majors

Two standout juniors from the Bay State put together impressive performances at the USGA Championships last week.

On the East Coast at The Golf Club of New England in Stratham, N.H., Jake Shuman of Blue Hill CC advanced to match play and won his first match at the 2012 U.S. Junior Amateur Championship.

Out west, Megan Khang of Rockland survived the stroke-play portion of the event and then won her first match at the 2012 U.S. Girls' Junior Amateur Championship being held at Lake Merced Golf Club in Daly, Calif.

Other Bay Staters who qualified for the 2012 U.S. Junior Amateur Championship and U.S. Girls' Junior Amateur Championship but did not advance to match play include James Park of Deerfield, David Thompson of Cyprian Keyes GC, Chelso Barrett of Winchendon GC and Isabel Southard of Sharon.

Barrett drew much national attention after advancing to the finals of the 2011 U.S. Junior Amateur Championship one year ago. Earlier this season, Barrett advanced to match play at the 2012 U.S. Amateur Public Links Championship.

In Daly City, Khang came back from a first-round 81 with a 3-over 75 to qualify for match play. Southard was not as fortunate. She went 82-81—163 and missed match play by four shots.

In the opening round of match play Khang easily eliminated Kathleen Gallagher of Greenwood, Miss., 5 and 3.

However, in the second round three-time Wisconsin high school champion Casey Danielson, who won the final five holes of her first-round match in a comeback victory, took a much easier route against Khang. She carded an eagle at the par-5 ninth, along with four birdies, in her 5-and-3 victory.

The South Shore was well represented in the winners' circle at Ponkapoag Golf Course in Canton last week at the annual CYO Golf Tournament. Tyler Powers, 15, of Hanover and Pat Jenkins, 16, of Hingham each took first place in their respective age divisions. Alex Jamieson, 13, and Jared Sullivan, 15, of Duxbury went home with second-place trophies.

NE Am champ

While many were feeling the fatigue of three straight days of grueling competition at Falmouth Country Club, Christopher Swift of Great River (Conn.) GC was able to weather the storm as the final rounds wore on. In the end, his efforts were rewarded as he captured the 2012 New England Amateur Championship last Thursday.

"It is my first amateur win, so I am pumped," said Swift, who will be a sophomore at Marquette University in the fall. "I am really happy right now. It is good motivation going into my U.S. Amateur qualifier on Monday and to start in the fall for college."

He was the only player able to post an under-par score through 72 holes.

Kingston's Herbie Aikens, who plays out of Pinehills, finished tied for second, carding a 3-over 287. Colin Brennan of Indian Ridge, who has ties to Hingham, was tied for fifth at 288. Chad Stumpo of Blue Hill made the cut. He finished at 297.

Ouimet news

The 45th Ouimet Memorial Invitational Tournament is next week. It winds out on Friday at Woodland GC in Newton. Ryan Riley of Pine Oaks. Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich, John Hadges of Thorny Lea GC, Matt Montt of the Harmon Club and Andrew Danieli of Indian Pond are a few of the locals in the field.

On Aug. 8 at Stow Acres, the Ouimet Fund will host its annual Golf Marathon for the 20th consecutive year. Golfers in the marathon pledge to play at least 100 holes in one day. To register or donate, contact assistant executive director Colin McGuire at 774-430-9090, or email: colinm@ouimet.org.

Welcome to the NEFL

Hanover's Coastal Chiefs play for first time

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

Welcome to the New England Football League.

The Hanover based Coastal Chiefs have taken its next step in their history and put their first entry into the record book with a 25-0 loss to the Whaling City Clippers.

The score might not have been what they hoped for, but after the game the two teams got together at midfield and there were a number of shouts by the Clippers' players, "Welcome to the league and keep working hard and don't get down on yourself."

There were a lot of positives for the Chiefs, who feature players from all over the area, to take into their next game on Saturday (7 p.m.) at home at Hanover High against the Tri-City Charge.

A year ago, Tri-City finished its season with a 1-9 record.

"This was like a scrimmage for us," said Chiefs coach Jim Sullivan. "We had not gone 11-on-11 because of our numbers. We haven't been able to do that. I can't say enough about our players. I am proud as I can be the way that we hung in there. A lot of these players I coached in high school. Steve Farinick never played quarterback and he stepped up for us like a lot of the players."

One of the best things for the Chiefs was that they played tougher in the second half after falling behind 19-0 at halftime.

Hanover was able to slow down Whaling City in the second half.

"We changed and had some of our receivers change their jerseys to linemen numbers," said Sullivan. "The thing we need are bodies and we were playing a pretty good team."

The Chiefs were able to move the ball at times with the running of Farinick, Anthony Sargent and Tim Hajjar. Farnick was able to connect with some short passes to Brandon Rugman. Sargent had a big defensive play as he picked off a pass to stop a Clippers drive in the fourth quarter.

They had a drive stall out for them inside the Whaling City five at the end of the first half and another drive come up short at the end of the game.

"Brandon Rugman had a good game for us," said Sullivan. "He had four catches for us at key times. Jason McDonald played a heck of game on defense for us."

McDonald recovered a Whaling City fumble at his team's 40 late in the first half.

Whaling City took advantage of a short field for two of its four touchdowns in the game.

Their first touchdown came on their first possession after getting the ball at the Hanover 34 as it would lead to a Tom Periera 1-yard touchdown run on a quarterback sneak.

Periera had a big game with a 63-yard touchdown pass to Aaron Todman off a scramble from pressure in the first quarter. He added a 54-yard run to set up an 18-yard touchdown pass to Stefan Gomes.

The Whaling City touchdown in the second half was set up by a Hanover gamble on fourth down as they tried a pass on a fake punt attempt from its 35.

"My biggest thing is right now is that we need more bodies," said Sullivan. "We showed a lot of heart and Whaling City was a better team, but we need more bodies."

They will hope for more bodies as they begin the next chapter against Tri-City on Saturday.

YOUTH BASKETBALL

Championship Basketball School

Celtics beat Heat in double O.T.

The 38th year of the Championship Basketball School opened on Sunday, July 15th at the Massachusetts Maritime Academy. Kyle Burke, Lauren McManus and Tracy Fogarty had a great week.

During the week the girls participated in contests and drill stations, but the games are what they really looked forward to. Kyle was a member of the "Thunder" team and Lauren and Tracy played for the "Celtics". Coached by Chris Perron, North Attleboro's varsity boys' coach, the "Celtics "got off to a slow start with no wins, but improved with each game.

When the playoffs began, the "Celtics" upset the top-seeded "Lakers" in a double elimination contest. In the championship game the "Celtics", in a thrilling double overtime game, defeated the "Heat" .In both the semi-finals and finals Lauren and Tracy contributed key baskets along with solid rebounds.

While the Boston Celtics lost to the Miami Heat in seven games back in June, the summer camp team of the "Celtics" prevailed thanks to the excellent play of Lauren McManus and Tracey Fogarty.

CHAMPS

Burchill went 5 2/3 innings, allowing but a single run. Timmy Chase, just back to the team after a hand injury forced him to miss the round robin tourney, closed out the win with 1 1/3 innings of shutout relief. Cohasset played flawless defense behind Burchill and Chase, with Ben Rice handling the catcher's duties with aplomb for all seven innings, Liam O'Connell and Michael Cohen making the plays in the middle infield, Luke Carlyle manning first base, Alexander Schubert patrolling center and making a diving grab for the game's last out, and Alec Norton and Evan Canney making all the plays at the corner outfield positions. Joe Cavanaro, this team's Mr. Versatility (he pitched, caught, played third and outfield), made all the plays at both third and the outfield in this game.

Quincy scored its sole run in the top of the first. In the bottom of that frame, Cohasset served notice that Quincy would not roll to an easy win. Tim Chase led off with a single through the box, and Michael Cohen followed with a booming triple to left field. In an instant, Cohasset had drawn even. After a strikeout, Ben Rice plated Cohen with a sacrifice to center field. After one, Cohasset had taken a 2-1 lead. After Burchill retired the Quincy side without a run in the second, Cohasset struck again. With two outs (one of which was Quincy's terrific catch of a line drive that robbed Evan Canney of a hit), Alexander Schubert lined a double to left field. Liam O'Connell followed with a line shot over the centerfielder's head for another double, and Schubert scooted home with Cohasset's third run. After two, Cohasset led 3-1.

The pitchers took over from there, as Burchill and Quincy's ace marched through the next three innings without either squad mounting a serious threat. In the sixth, Cohasset added a couple of insurance runs, as Chase singled again, Cohen followed with a single, and after a sacrifice moved both runners along, Ben Rice delivered a key line drive base hit to right that plated Cohasset's fourth and fifth runs.

In the seventh, pitching with a 5-1 lead, Chase put the finishing touches on Burchill's masterpiece, as he snuffed out a Quincy threat with the help of Schubert's diving catch for the last out. A raucous celebration ensued, as this merry band of underdogs walked off with Cohasset's first ever District 8 Junior Little League crown.

HASSICK

"We used to run summer camps when I was a coach at Northeastern, and for some reason, I always liked umpiring the games more than coaching," Hassick said. "So when I got done coaching, I had a friend put me in contact with someone who could help me start umpiring, and I went from there."

Hassick soon started umpiring junior high and high school games in the Boston area. After two years, she got the chance to umpire at the collegiate level, and immediately got her Level II certification to move up.

Hassick's dreams went beyond the collegiate level, however. After taking a course on indoor umpiring at MIT, a friend recruited her to do umpiring in international competition.

By 2007, Hassick got the chance to umpire overseas for the first time, at the Under-21 test series in Shanghai, China. In 2008, she umpired her first official international tournament, the Four Nations in Chile.

Hassick has since umpired at the Pan American Games, the Champions Challenge, the Champions Trophy, a World Cup, and a World Cup qualifier.

To keep up with her demanding schedule, Hassick decided to quit her 10-year teaching career and got a part-time job at a local coffee shop, so she could put all of her focus on umpiring.

Since she found out about the Olympics, Hassick has done very little to change her already intense training regimen. She works out about four or five times a week, does a boot-camp style workout twice a week, and adds in some light lifting, long runs, and plyometrics.

But the hard work is nothing compared to the satisfaction of knowing she's going to be umpiring on the world's grandest stage.

"I'm still excited and shocked," Hassick added, "but I've never been more excited than I am now."

BASEBALL

used a six-run seventh inning to defeat Stoughton, 9-3. Post 118 had trailed Stoughton 3-2, but tied the game, 3-3 with an RBI single by David Podurgiel in the fifth inning.

"We imploded in our game in the fourth inning against Braintree," said Barrows. "but we had a team effort in coming back and winning the last two games. We had to bring up one of our junior league players, Brendan O'Connell and he came up with a key hit in our Stoughton game."

Jamie Faber provided some key hitting pitching for Cohasset in the final two games of the regular season.

He came on for Chase Michaud after Michaud got hurt in the first inning and pitched six scoreless innings to pick up the win in the Stoughton game.

Faber also started the six-run seventh inning with a double that scored a run. Jordan Jenkins, Podurgiel, Richie Roche and Terrence Doonan each had an RBI hit in the seventh inning.

The Hyde Park game saw Podurgiel hit a leadoff home run to tie the game,

5-5 in the seventh inning and Faber added a two-run homer to give Cohasset what proved to be the winning runs in its 7-5 win.

Cohasset had scored two runs in the fourth inning and added two more in the fifth inning as Podurgiel's RBI single was the key hit.

"We have stayed together and we finished strong," said Barrow.

It was strong enough for Cohasset to come up with finishing touch and a return trip to the post season.

GIMME SHELTER

Pumpkin is a friendly chap

Adoption fees for adults cats reduced

Pumpkin is neutered and up to date on all his shots. He deserves a loving home and will give back accordingly.
COURTESY PHOTO

Pumpkin gets along with other cats. He's not aggressive and should do well will children.

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Pumpkin, a 5-year-old, orange-and-white male. Pumpkin was abandoned, along with his older brother. He is a friendly chap and obviously had a good home prior to coming to the shelter. Pumpkin gets along with other cats. He's not aggressive and should do well will children. He would be so nice to have around the house.

Pumpkin is neutered and up to date on all his shots. He deserves a loving home and will give back accordingly.

Please stop by and meet Pumpkin. HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

You can visit him at the shelter where you can also meet all of HSAR's very adoptable cats.

HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org. HSAR sends out a huge thank you to its many supporters.

The HSAR Board has reduced the adoption donation fee of adult cats from $100, to $25 from now through the entire month of August.

HSAR has so many adoptable felines, who have resided at the shelter and are so ready for forever homes. HSAR hopes this will help in acquiring homes for many of them during the slower summer months.

Cohasset Historical Society museums open

Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., downtown Cohasset, are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th Century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum. The museums tell of the early history of Cohasset. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s. The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses. Both buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

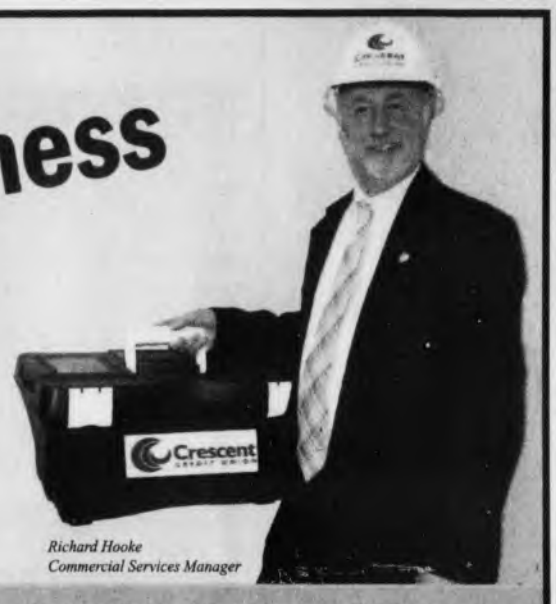
The museums are open 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays. For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

Maritime History Exhibit

The Cohasset Historical Society is celebrating Cohasset maritime history throughout the month of September. Save the date for Opening night on Saturday, Sept. 8.

Opening night will highlight a unique exhibit featuring relics of the many ships that were storm driven on the reefs off the Cohasset shores as well as artifacts from Cohasset's rich seafaring history.

Most wrecks occurred in the 19th century, when the shipping channel into Boston Harbor was narrow and passed close to many ledges. Ships were predominately powered by sail and at the mercy of the wind, which frequently blew them onto the rocks.



A cocktail party at the Society will celebrate Cohasset's worldwide shipping trade and current fishing and lobster industries.

Suffolk University offers convenient, flexible MBA

At the North Campus, students can tailor their degree with 11 concentrations

Adrienne Ciampa was working as a financial analyst in Germany when she applied to Suffolk University's MBA Program at the North Campus Riverwalk location in Lawrence, Mass. Since her work often involved international travel, Suffolk's global focus and flexible course offerings stood out as key features.

"The ability to take classes in Boston, the North Campus, online, and in intensive weekend formats gave me all the options I needed," said Ciampa, who graduated in 2011. She was even able to complete a six-month work assignment in Germany while taking classes part-time.

For current MBA student Courtney Soraghan, the program's convenient location was a major advantage. She is taking evening classes part-time while she works as a supervisor in the Health Monitoring Department at Charles River Laboratories in Wilmington, Mass.

"Because the campus is close to my work and home, I don't have to worry about rushing out of work to drive to class in traffic and then have to drive back home late at night. Plus, I still have the option to take classes in Boston or online if there is a course I really want to take," Soraghan said.

Students can also tailor their degree with one of 11 concentrations, explained Soraghan, who is studying organizational behavior.

With a background in biology, Soraghan was apprehensive about enrolling in the MBA program at first. However, she quickly discovered that her peers come from diverse backgrounds. "There are students with degrees in biology, chemistry, psychology, political science, as well as many others. They offer so many perspectives that it really helps me see things differently," she said.

Last January, Soraghan spent a week in Brazil as part of Suffolk's Global Travel Seminar. She visited companies in Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro and learned about global business first-hand. "We also had free time to sightsee and enjoy the culture. We went to the Christ the Redeemer and Copacabana beach, and learned how to samba," she said.

Suffolk University's North Campus Riverwalk location in Lawrence offers flexible MBAs that make it convenient for students to complete their degrees online and in intensive weekend formats.
CONTRIBUTED PHOTO

Soraghan plans to graduate this December and hopes the Suffolk MBA will help advance her career. "I already had the technical science background, and now I have a better understanding of the business side of it, which will open up more opportunities for me," she said.

"As much as I am excited to be done, I am sad to leave all of the friends I have made, the amazing professors that I have had, as well as Director Heather Hewitt and Program Coordinator Diane Demmer, who do so much work for the students on the North Campus," Soraghan said.

To learn more, contact the Suffolk University MBA-North Campus at 978-738-8840 or mbanorth@suffolk.edu, or visit www.suffolk.edu/ mbanorth.

Information sessions are held monthly at the North Campus location. The next information session is scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 7 at 6 p.m., Riverwalk Properties, 360 Merrimack Street, Building 9, Entry K, Floor 3, Lawrence, Mass.

ONLINE LEARNING

What is distance learning?

ARA Content

Are you someone who likes to continually learn new things for professional and personal growth? If you answered "yes," then you are likely a lifelong learner. Fitting this positive attribute into today's busy lifestyles can be challenging. Distance learning provides a flexible, affordable and economical way to achieve your educational goals.

Simply put, learning that takes place outside the confines of a typical classroom environment — where you and the source of the information are separated by time, distance or both — can be defined as distance learning. For working adults it provides flexibility that makes possible the expansion of your knowledge base regardless of income, disability or age.

While distance learning may be a new concept to many adult learners who are veterans of traditional, classroom-based education, it has been successfully practiced for centuries by internationally renowned institutions such as Oxford and Cambridge. Many colleges in the U.S. accept credit awarded through distance learning or offer such programs themselves. One of these, Excelsior College, has been an accredited leader in this field for more than 40 years and focuses on meeting the needs of adult learners.

Online courses offered by colleges and universities cover the same subject matter taught in traditional classrooms, often by the same professors, and are growing in popularity. Online courses can provide you with energizing, interactive discussions with fellow students and instructors. Like those in classroom-based courses, you pay tuition and appropriate fees and may submit written assignments and take tests in order to receive grades and college credit.

Credit-by-examination programs offer motivated, independent learners the ability to study a specific subject matter at their own pace and then demonstrate mastery of the topic by taking an exam to earn college credit. Regardless of the source, once confident in your preparation, you take an examination at one of the hundreds of secure facilities available around the country. To earn college credit for the successful completion of exams, it is important to make sure the exams have been recognized by the American Council on Education's College Credit Recommendation Service (ACE CREDIT).

Distance learning — also sometimes called online learning — can provide a flexible, affordable and economical way to achieve your educational goals.
ARA PHOTO

Portfolio assessments offer you the ability to complete a formal process called Prior Learning Assessment (PLA). The PLA approach offers you the opportunity to have your knowledge, regardless of where or how it was learned, evaluated by faculty members who will determine an equivalent level of college credit that could be awarded for knowledge demonstrated in the portfolio. One recent study conducted by the Council for Adult & Experiential Learning (CAEL), found that 56 percent of students utilizing PLA continued on to earn their associate or bachelor's degree, compared to 21 percent for their non-PLA peers.

Most adult learners combine two or more of these avenues to achieve their educational goals. Most important is that distance learning offers options that are flexible and academically challenging to meet the needs of any committed adult learner, especially those with some college but no degree.

For a successful career, Experience Matters!

"Anna & Joe" oil by Charissa Roberts, Cohasset is on exhibit in the Blue Ribbon Members Show that continues through August 26. COURTESY PHOTO

Blue Ribbon Members Show winners named

Abigail Norman, Director of the Eliot School in Jamaica Plain, awarded prizes in the Blue Ribbon Members' Show at South Shore Art Center. Winners of the four blue ribbons are: David Lang of Wayland, Jan McElhinny of Cohasset, Helen Cuccaro of Hull and Sophie Reed (age 7) of Cohasset.

All members of the Art Center, including children and teens, were invited to submit artwork to this annual Members' Show, which continues through August 26. Many of the nearly two hundred original works of art are available for sale.

Also winning honorable mention awards: Catherine Caddigan, Lynne McCauley, Ann Miller, Joe Norris, Patricia Berube, Joyce Powers, and Joanne Kaczowka.

Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday, 10-4 and Sunday, 12-4. South Shore Art Center is located at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For more information call 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org.

Polomis paintings on exhibit through Aug. 31

The South Shore Art Center presents an exhibit by artist Ted Polomis at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, through Aug. 31. Gallery hours are Mondays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays 10 a.m.-8 p.m., Wednesdays and Fridays 10 a.m.-5 p.m., and Saturdays 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Polomis is a realist painter working in the medium of oils. He attended The Rhode Island School of Design and was elected to the European Honors Program in Rome, Italy, where he spent his junior year. He visited every museum and collection he could, not only in Italy, but 13 other countries as well, so that he could study the works of the Great Masters.

He paints from his home studio in Marshfield Hills. Working exclusively in oils, he creates paintings with a sophisticated sense of balance and depth. He is captivated by the interplay between objects and their environment, and the quiet harmony that results from balancing form, color, light and shadow. His works have received numerous awards, and have been featured in many publications including American Art Collector, International Artist and The Artist's Magazine.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 6, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A strong social whirl brings a new round of good times to fun-loving Rams and Ewes. Cupid also is busy aiming arrows at single Lambs hoping for a heart-to-heart encounter.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A romantic incident could take a more serious turn if the Divine Bovine considers meeting Cupid's challenge. Meanwhile, a professional opportunity is also about to turn up.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A bit of hardheaded realism could be just what the Twins need at this emotionally challenged time. Face the facts as they are, not as you want them to be. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Many opportunities open up. But you need to be aware of their actual pros and cons. Check them all out and make your choice from those that offer more of what you seek.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A more stable situation begins, allowing you to feel more secure about making important decisions. Meanwhile, be sure to meet your project deadline so you can move on to other things.

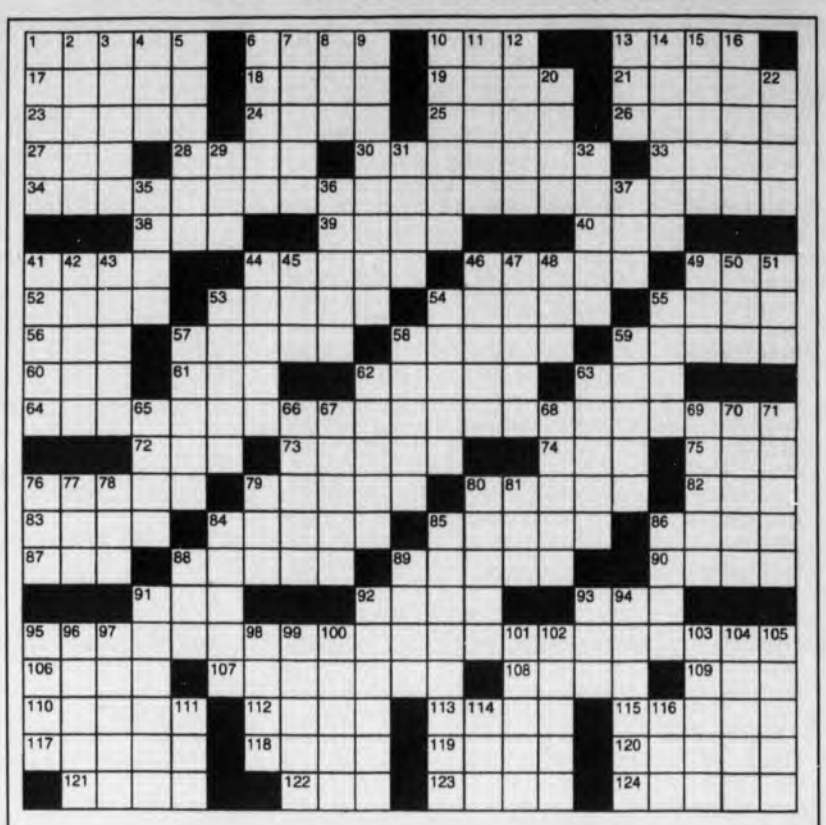
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Congratulations. A new personal relationship thrives as you learn how to make room in your busy life for this wonderfully warm and exciting emotional experience.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A new contact opens some doors. That's the good news. But there's a caution involved: Be sure you protect your rights to your work before showing it to anyone.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A former colleague might seek to resume a working partnership. Ask yourself if you need it. If yes, get more information. If no, respectfully decline the request.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Good times dominate your aspect. So why not have a party to celebrate a loved one's success? And do invite that special person you want to know better.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The shy side of the Sea Goat soon gives way to your more assertive self. This should help you when it comes time to speak up for yourself and your achievements.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new period of stability will help you deal with some recently reworked plans. Once you get your current task done, you can devote more time to personal matters.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Things are finally much more stable these days, so you can restart the process of meeting your well-planned goals with fewer chances of interruption or delay.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Beechwood Church offers children's program

A summer kids' event called Sky will be hosted at Beechwood Congregational Church from Monday, Aug. 13 to Friday, Aug. 17. At Sky, faith and imagination soar as kids discover that everything is possible with God. Kids participate in memorable Bible-learning activities, sing catchy songs, play teamwork-building games, make and dig into yummy treats, experience electrifying Bible adventures, collect Bible Memory Buddies to remind them to trust God, and test out Sciency-Fun Gizmos they'll take home and play with all summer long. Plus, kids will learn to look for evidence of God all around them through something called God Sightings. Each day concludes with Fly Away Finale—a celebration that gets everyone involved in living what they've learned.

Sky is for children entering grades one through five and will run from 9 a.m. to noon each day. To register log onto www.beechwood-cc.org or call Sue at 781-383-6836.

Duke Fakir, one of the original The Four Tops, will perform with the Temptations at South Shore Music Circus Saturday, Aug. 4. COURTESY PHOTO

MOTOWN NIGHT

Two favorites perform at Music Circus Aug. 4

By R. Scott Reedy
Correspondent

Not one, but two of the vocal groups – the Temptations and the Four Tops – that helped Motown Records achieve its groundbreaking crossover success with the label's signature sound of pop-infused soul music will be on a double bill at Cohasset's South Shore Music Circus on Aug. 4.

Like their also all-male counterparts, the Temptations, the Four Tops have been turning out hits for five decades. Founded in Detroit, the group's quartet of lead singer Levi Stubbs, Abdul "Duke" Fakir, Renaldo "Obie" Benson, and Lawrence Payton were together from 1953 to 1997, when Payton passed away. With Benson's death in 2005, and Stubbs passing in 2008, Fakir became the only surviving original member.

"There is a bittersweet part to performing today. I miss Levi, Obie, and Lawrence very much, but my new Tops – including Lawrence's son, Lawrence Payton, Jr. and Ronnie McNeir are just terrific. And, our new lead singer Spike DeLeon sounds a lot like Levi. Spike has wanted to be a Top for a long time, so he's been a great addition to the group," said Fakir by telephone from his home in Detroit not too long ago.

Fakir, 77, first came together with his original group mates under the name The Four Aims while all four were Detroit area high school students. Wanting to avoid confusion with the Ames Brothers, the quartet renamed itself The Four Tops and set about landing a recording contract.

"After we had been on Columbia, Chess, and Riverside Records, we finally felt we were good enough to come home to Motown. Berry Gordy saw us on 'The Tonight Show,' and said, 'I want the Four Tops.' We knew that for the Four Tops to have success at Motown, it would have to come through hit records. When Berry first start recording us, however, he didn't put us with any new songwriters. He just had us recording standards from the American songbook. He then put those recordings on the shelf as too non-commercial and took us to the songwriting team of Holland, Dozier and Holland who wrote "Baby, I Need Your Loving," our first big hit back in 1964."

A string of hits followed, including "I Can't Help Myself (Sugar Pie, Honey Bunch), "It's The Same Old Song," "Standing in the Shadows of Love," and "Bernadette," supported by an intense touring schedule that continues to this day.

"When Berry put us together with Holland, Dozier and Holland, we were off and running. They wrote mostly for the Supremes and the Four Tops, and did very well by both groups. And, we worked every imaginable gig from burlesque houses to Las Vegas showrooms."

Unlike so many other groups, the Tops stayed together for 43 years with changes in personnel only coming with the passing of original members.

"We learned at an early age that if we stuck together we could be as good as any other group. We had arguments and dealt with various tensions over the years, but we still always kept our pact to stay together. We had seen almost every group pull apart, usually because lead singers would leave. We always kept our vow to stay together. Levi would get offers to do things on his own, but he wouldn't accept them," recalls Fakir. "We had many differences, but we always stayed together. Our attitude was, 'No matter what, you can't mess with the Tops.' "

The Temptations & the Four Tops will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Saturday, Aug. 4. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-745-3000 or go online at themusiccircus.org.

HOLLY HILL

Hoppy Toads are learning to slow down and appreciate nature on a beautiful summer day at Holly Hill Farm. COURTESY PHOTO

Celebrate joys of the harvest

Holly Hill Farm is having a very special Farm to Table Fundraising Dinner on Saturday August 18 with chef Paul Wahlberg of Alma Nove in Hingham. Come celebrate the joys of the harvest and feast on certified organic produce that has been placed in the hands of this acclaimed chef.

Attendance at this event will benefit the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center that uses the farm as its outdoor classroom. Proceeds from this evening will help ensure funding for school field trips, growing produce with students at school farm gardens, year-round informative workshops and guided walks, and our commitment to growing and providing healthy produce for food pantries on the South Shore. The evening will include a silent auction including paintings by local artists, Jewelry by Sage, Wine and Cheese tasting for 8 in your home, and more. Cost is $175 per person for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $200 nonmembers. Space is limited so please call 781-383-6565 to reserve your spot at the table with chef Paul. Holly Hill Farm is located at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. For directions and more information, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

Camp: Holly Hill Farm still has space available in summer camp programs for children ages 3 through 18. New sessions of the popular Baby Spinach and Pea Shoots programs have been added to the schedule. Camps run through August 24. Children will have fun outside, unplugged from phones and screens, doing farm chores, exploring the diverse natural habitats of the 140 acres of the farm's property, learning about growing healthy organic food, cooking food with freshly harvested produce, growing food for Father Bills' in Quincy, and selling produce at the Cohasset Farmers market (and keeping a portion of the proceeds). A brand new program is being offered for one week – Spicy Mix is an all day (9 am to 3 pm) camp for children ages 7-12. Eat from the garden, grow plants, create art on the farm, discover beyond the barnyard and enjoy a full day at Holly Hill Farm. This new program will offer a different theme each day, as there is always something fun to do on the farm. It is a perfect time as it is the height of the harvest season and a great chance to complete a variety of tasks including tending to the animals, using the mud oven and harvesting from the fields. Cost is $300 for Friends of Holly Hill Farm members, $350 for nonmembers.

Holly Hill Farm is located at 236 Jerusalem Road in Cohasset. For complete information on all of these programs, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org or call 781-383-6565.

Picnic and Paddle in the Weir River Estuary

You are invited to the Hull Land Conservation Trust's Estuary Picnic and Paddle on Saturday, July 28, at the tip of Steamboat Wharf next to Jack's Seafood Restaurant in Hull.

The picnic cookout starts at 4:30 p.m. The menu includes hot dogs, hamburgers, cheeseburgers, veggie burgers, Newman's Own lemonade, Mt. Blue spring water, and watermelon, thanks to the Point Allerton Neighborhood Association, Riddles, Shaw's, Stop and Shop, Whole Foods and Wompatuck State Park.

Kayaking in the Estuary feels like being in an idyllic world apart. Guests will put in around 5:30 p.m. to paddle up through the narrows between World's End and the Weir River Woods, under the George Washington Boulevard Bridge and past Bass Point towards Hull Wind 2. We'll paddle with the incoming high tide and return on the outgoing tide toward the sunset. We'll be back on land in time to go watch the Harbor Illumination at 8:30 p.m.

Please call Nantasket Kayaks at (781) 962-4899 to reserve a kayak. Also check in for any changes due to weather. The requested donation is $10 for the picnic and $20 for rental of a kayak or $10 for the Paddle if you bring your own kayak. Parking on Steamboat Wharf is free after 4 p.m. Donations to the Hull Land Conservation Trust will help create a Straits Pond conservation area and continuous Waterfowl Viewing Park walk around the Pond.

Light shed on dark station

Desk to be manned by officer nights, weekends

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski had an announcement to make during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting: "The station is not going dark."

This has been a community concern since the town entered into a regional dispatch agreement with three neighboring towns: Hingham, Hull and Norwell. The agreement was made in 2009, but when the selectmen voted in favor of regionalization, no one considered the ramifications of closing the station at night and on weekends.

The "dark station" worry has been a town controversy over the past several months. At the May 12 Town Meeting, Police Chief Mark DeLuca said he was "dead set against" the station going dark. During the May 19 town election one week later, Sgt. Jeffrey Treanor posted an anti-dark station banner on a police vehicle and was asked, by the town manager and police

ICE IS NICE

Ice dispensing machine cools down Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

In the season of beach days, picnics, parties, weddings and other celebrations, Cohasseters have a new place to stop for a bag of ice to keep their coolers and beverages nice and cold. A new state-of-the-art ice dispenser, the only one of its kind in Cohasset, offers clean, "green" ice that's as convenient as it is inexpensive.

The stainless-steel machine is housed in a compact storefront and stocks, creates and distributes fresh ice. It's open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and creates 40 pounds of ice every eight minutes, storing 6,000 pounds of ice. The automated machine accepts cash, debit and credit cards. Priced at $4 for a 20-pound bag, the ice is reportedly cheaper than similar bags sold at grocery stores.

The ice is fresher than ice sold in stores and more eco-friendly, too, according to Gerry Allain, who brought the machine to town.

"The ice isn't trucked in or handled," said Allain. "It's normally on a pallet, and four or five different people have touched that ice." At Twice the Ice, however, "the only person who touches the ice is the customer."

The ice device is also "light on the carbon footprint," Allain added, "because it's not transported on trucks. There's a good green component to it. There's also very little waste or meltage [this way]; ice on loading docks for a while melts and is re-frozen."

"A lot of people are coming from Hull and Cohasset harbor. And a lot of restaurants come by it. A fairly new restaurant in Cohasset buys a new bag of ice every day."

TOWN MEETING VOTE NEEDED

Gates grant Ok'ed

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Central Cemetery Committee approached the Community Preservation Committee Monday night for funds to restore the iron gates and fences at the cemetery, some of which members say are in danger of collapse.

Rick Swanborg of the Central Cemetery Committee presented photos and data on the gates and fences in the most need of repair. The cemetery, which is off Joy Place overlooking Little Harbor, has seven family plots enclosed with ornamental fencing, much of which has deteriorated over the years. Parts that have broken off are stored in the basement of the town library.

Members of the CPC agreed that Lothrop Fence, in particular, is in need of repair and presents a possible safety hazard in its current state, due to corroding pieces. It is also the most visible from the street.

Swanborg reported to the CPC that many of the fences are 100-200 years old. The cemetery feels the age and history of the gates and fences make the restoration project a good candidate for CPA funds. Restoring the fences will add to the historic character of the cemetery, the committee wrote in a request form to the CPC.

The cost to preserve just the Lothrop Fence, according to an inspection by DeAngelis Iron Works (DIW) last August, is $10,000. Several other fences are in need of repair, while two - Pratt and Hall - require new fences altogether. The total cost to repair or replicate all of the fences would be over $100,000, according to DIW.

Deciding to focus on the areas that need the most repairs, the cemetery committee asked the CPC to allocate $20,000 of Community

Jasmine & Brutus!
If you're looking for a new face, you're in luck because we have TWO wonderful ones for you!
Meet Jasmine and Brutus, two wonderful Boxers who came to the Scituate Animal Shelter when their U.S. Marine owner was recently deployed.
They are very affectionate dogs: once they know you they will literally climb into your lap for attention or give you slobbery kisses.
A foster family stepped up to give this pair a break from shelter life while we look for their forever home.
Their foster parents report that they are two sweet, couch potatoes who love to hang out with you all day!
Call (781) 544-4533 for more information or to schedule an appointment to meet Jasmine & Brutus!
MURPHY CARTY INSURANCE AGENCY
Who Needs Flood Insurance?
Flooding can be caused by snow and ice melt, dam breach, extremely heavy rain fall or a hurricane.
Unfortunately, many homeowners do not realize their standard homeowners policy does not cover damage due to rising or standing water.
You do not need to be in a high risk zone for flood insurance - over 20% of claims are made from areas outside of mapped high risk flood zones.
For about $400 a year for full coverage, a policy can be secured for a residential property located in a low-to-moderate flood risk zone.
Maybe it's worth getting a quote?

UPDATE

Aquarion focuses on better customer service

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

Newly named Aquarion Vice President of Operations John Walsh is taking the lead in what company officials call the "new Aquarion."

This translates into a greater focus on customer service and continued collaboration with town officials and project engineers to better coordinate water main repairs with planned road repaving projects in all three communities served by Aquarion – Hingham, Hull, part of Cohasset, and a few customers in Norwell.

An emergency communications "reverse 911" or "red code" system is now in place to inform customers via a recorded telephone message when there's a water main break in a particular neighborhood and to inform and update residents about recently imposed water restrictions.

"We also notify the police and fire chiefs when fire hydrants are out of service [and also keep them apprised of other situations they need to know about]," Walsh said.

These improvements – enhanced communication, better customer service, and continued collaboration with the towns it serves on joint projects – are in response to concerns expressed by customers at various meetings and also to previous situations involving water main breaks, including the Union Street area, where there were communication gaps and other issues.

John Walsh is responsible for day-to-day operations.

"We heard those concerns and we've learned from that," Walsh said. "We are continuously trying to improve our communication, operations, and infrastructure projects."

Walsh, who replaced Harry Hibbard, has been on the job for two weeks. He has been working at the Hingham water treatment plant off Main Street since February, formerly as director of supply operations. Ronit Goldstein, recently promoted to Community Relations Manager, also works out of the Hingham office.

Since assuming the new position — with responsibility for day-to-day operations and management of the company's water systems in Massachusetts and New Hampshire — Walsh has met with Hingham town engineers and town officials, including Town Administrator Ted Alexiades and the selectmen, and plans to do the same in Hull and Cohasset. "We intend to keep the lines of communication open," he said.

"We're hoping that by the end of this year we're doing such a good job that folks in town don't feel they need to acquire the water system to get the service they want."
John Walsh, VP of Operations

Walsh worked for Aquarion in Connecticut for 12 years, from the mid-1990s to 2007, rejoining the company early this year at the Hingham location.

His time spent in Connecticut as manager of engineering and director of supply operations dealing with water quality, infrastructure programs, and customer service will hold him in good stead in his new position, Walsh said in an interview with the Hingham Journal.

The Connecticut Aquarion is a much larger system, serving 600,000 customers, whereas Aquarion serves a population of 45,000 in the communities it serves.

"In my new role, I will be able to capitalize on expertise gained from my past experience," Walsh said.

Water restrictions

With regard to current water restrictions (see sidebar), Walsh explained that Aquarion takes a "step-wise" approach that has been approved by the Department of Public Utilities.

The first step was voluntary restrictions. Then on July 16 the water company instituted restrictions on water usage for irrigation and sprinkler systems on an odd/even basis from 6 p.m. to 10 a.m. Further restrictions will be imposed if necessary. (See related sidebar.)

Feasibility study

Last April Hingham Town Meeting voters supported the town spending up to $320,000 on a feasibility study to explore the possibility of the town purchasing the water company. The town is therefore seeking information regarding the engineering, maintenance, and operation of the system; the chemical support needed to sustain water quality; and what the structure of the water company would look like if Hingham decides to pursue buying it.

"We will continue to work with the town in providing the information needed to do its evaluation," said Walsh.

That said, "We're hoping that by the end of this year we're doing such a good job that folks in town don't feel they need to acquire the water system to get the service they want," he stated.

Recent water rate increases are another concern. "The rates are impacted [to a large degree] by past actions," Walsh pointed out, including the high cost of the treatment plant when it was built a number of years ago.

"What we can do moving forward is to make sure we provide the kind of service that makes folks feel they are getting their value for the money they are paying," he said.

The main focus will continue to be improved customer service. "Aquarion Water Company in Connecticut was recognized by the rate regulator for five years in a row for providing the best customer service of any private utility in that state," Walsh said. "That didn't happen by luck. It was due to a significant and sustained focus on customer service, and that's what we want to see here in Hingham, Hull, and Cohasset."

POLICE BEAT

Three injured in car accident

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

On Wednesday (Aug. 1), at 11am, Cohasset Police and Fire units were called to the intersection of South Main Street and Summer Street for a reported motor vehicle crash with injuries.

On arrival, witnesses stated that the operator of a 2005 Hyundai Alantra, who was traveling North Bound on South Main Street (toward Hingham) turned left in front of a 1995 Olds Cierra that was being operated South Bound on South Main Street (towards Scituate). Both vehicles collided in the intersection and three people were injured.

The driver of the Hyundai was identified as a 19-year-old Scituate woman. The Scituate Fire Department transported her to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth. She has been mailed a citation for failing to yield to oncoming traffic. Her injuries are non-life threatening.

The driver of the Olds, who is identified as a 51-year-old Hingham man and his passenger, a 58-year-old Hingham woman, were both transported to South Shore Hospital by the Cohasset Fire Department ambulance. Their injuries are listed as non-life threatening as well. Both vehicles had to be towed from the scene.

Industrial accident

At 1:42 p.m. on Wednesday (July 25), police were dispatched to the intersection of Cushing and Pleasant streets on a report of an industrial accident. An employee of a construction company at the scene told police he had dropped a jackhammer onto his right foot. Although he was wearing steel-toe construction boots, the worker had a minor abrasion on his right, big toe. He was treated at the scene by Cohasset paramedics and declined transport to the hospital.

Intoxicated

On Saturday (July 28) around 7 p.m., an officer was dispatched to Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza off King Street on a report of an intoxicated man. The man, who is 43 and from Norwell, was standing outside his pickup truck that was parked in the far corner of the parking lot, police said. Police could detect a strong odor of alcohol when speaking with the Norwell man. His eyes were glassy and bloodshot. He allegedly admitted to having consumed several beers. The man was taken into protective custody and brought to the police station where he was released to the custody of his wife shortly after booking, police said.

Intoxicated

At about 3 a.m. on Sunday (July 29), an officer was dispatched to the station to speak to a mother about her son. She reported that her son, 19, had been out drinking and called for a ride home. She and her husband picked him up but he became argumentative. The mother told police that her son had not told her about the large house party. When she threatened to tell the homeowners, her son became verbally abusive and threatened to jump out of the car, police said. Her husband stood at the front door to prevent their son from leaving after they got home.

The mother was seeking advice and police told her to call them right away should her son become physical in any way or if he left the house.

Summonsed

At 5:25 p.m. on Thursday (July 26), an officer was dispatched to the station on report of a stolen car. Upon arrival, the officer spoke with a Cohasset man who said that on Monday (July 23), he allowed an acquaintance to use his pickup truck. From July 24 to 26, the truck owner was unsuccessful in contacting the man, who had borrowed his truck. Police had to contact the 42-year-old Hull man, who had the truck, to tell him to return it. Finally the man's daughter returned the truck. Because it was lent with the expectation it would be returned in a timely manner, police are summonsing the Hull man to court on the charge of using a motor vehicle without authority.

STATION

chief, to remove it. The incident kicked off an internal affairs investigation that DeLuca accused Milanoski of interfering with; on May 25, DeLuca was suspended with pay after the union brought several allegations against the chief to the town manager. An investigation is currently underway; private investigators meanwhile said that Milanoski did not interfere with the police disciplinary matter.

Until recently, the reality of the station "going dark" during evening, overnight and weekend hours — once dispatch went regional — seemed imminent. Now, the Public Safety Department has come forward with a plan.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia, who is currently overseeing the Public Safety Dept., along with Deputy Police Chief William Quigley and Sgt. Treanor, came before the selectmen to explain how their departments plan to adjust to the dispatch service moving to the regional 911 center in Hingham this month.

Once the move takes place, police will have two patrolmen on the road and one manning the desk in the building during the night shift and on weekends.

"We're not reducing officers," Milanoski said of the solution. "We're reducing the lower-paid dispatchers."

Moving dispatch to the regional center is supposed to offer a better level of service as well as cost savings to the town.

"This is good news," said Deputy Chief Quigley about the staffing plan. "It's something we've struggled with over two or three years. We had many, many meetings to be able to come up with this compromise, and I think it will work. If I didn't believe it would, I wouldn't have agreed to it. The sergeant and patrolmen's union believe it's what's best for the community."

Sgt. Treanor, the union's secretary-treasurer, said the solution is a "win-win on both counts for us, for both the townspeople and us."

Addressing what to do in the event of the station going dark was a legacy problem the acting town manager and public safety chiefs found themselves having to deal with, said Milanoski. The agreement to join the SSRECC was inked when Bill Griffin was Town Manager.

"Everybody has been working to solve a problem none of us created... This was a joint effort to solve a problem, and everybody has collaborated and come up with a solution," Milanoski said.

One of the solutions to an unmanned police station was equipping the lobby with security and technology upgrades to create a safe haven for citizen in need. The May 12 Annual Town Meeting voted to appropriate $100,000 to fund these renovations to the public safety building, which houses both the police and fire departments. The majority of the funds, $80,000, was allocated for replacing windows and doors and to mitigate flooding in the basement; the remaining $20,000 is for the security upgrades.

Grant

That amount doesn't cover all of the upgrades, however; Chief Silvia explained that the state 911 department gave the town a one-time grant of $70,000 to complete the necessary upgrades, including new security cameras and alarms.

Governor Patrick recently appointed Silvia to the state's 911 Commission. "He was elected by his peers," Milanoski said of Silvia, chosen for his abilities and integrity. "This is a big step because we're dealing with the 911 committee, and this is the newest commissioner."

Milanoski also said that a local architect has been hired to plan the renovation project, and the town's new Chief Technology Officer, Robert Bonnell, will oversee the technology upgrades. Cohasset police officer Patrick Kenney is overseeing the construction project within the department, Milanoski said, and "other volunteers are going to help with minor modifications to the building."

The decision to have two patrolmen on the road and one at the desk came from the town's police union, Milanoski said, who offered to provide an Academy-trained patrolman to "be the desk man" and oversee the station at night.

"There will always be two personnel on the street," the town manager said. In order to streamline the new schedule, all administrative work will be done during "normal office hours," 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Selectmen chair Paul Carlson suggested having one evening for administrative tasks to accommodate the schedules of the public who work during the day. Milanoski said the schedule could be consistent with Town Hall, which is open until 7 p.m. on Tuesdays. Quigley said the department was talking about doing that.

The third night officer will also be available to assist the on-the-road patrolmen if necessary, said Treanor. "As long as he's available, he'll be able to lock the building down and leave for a short period of time. It's a very fluid situation."

The minimum manning requirement for the day shift is three; the midnight shift also requires three, but due to vacancies in the PD, the department often has only two patrolmen on the road at night, with one dispatcher in the station. Now that there are three officers onboard, "there will be some potential financial impact," according to the town manager, "but on the flip side, it would've been more costly to go in a different direction."

Safety

There are those who wish the town had gone in a different direction, however; a few spoke up during the station discussion.

Ed Woods, Jerusalem Road, said he was less than impressed with the SSRECC.

"I thought it was going to save money, doing regionalization," Woods said. "It doesn't seem like it's going to save that much. My concern is safety."

Woods went on to ask how the public safety department would deal with a several motor vehicle accident on weekends, and other similar scenarios.

Quigley said that things would stay the same; people can still dial 911 for assistance, go to the pay phone at Mobil Mart if they don't have a cell phone, or call right from the station. There will be a call box at the station that will connect to 911, in the event no one is in the building, Quigley explained.

Woods said that if the deputy chief has confidence in that, "you should put it in the public press."

Quigley responded that he "very much" agreed.

Richard Abbadessa, Old Coach Road, who is a retired Cohasset police officer, and said that two officers on the road and one at the desk simply isn't enough. Abbadessa said that having only three officers on duty in the past "did not work well then, and it's not going to work well now."

Abbadessa described a few situations during which the two patrolmen on duty were diverted by phony calls for help; robberies occurred while they were detained. When the department had four patrolmen on duty, "it worked very well, safety-wise," said Abbadessa.

The retired police officer that having three men on instead of four is unwise "in this day and age."

"This town has grown on the commercial end," he explained. "We're going back 40 years instead of going forward. Technology is great, but you still have to have manpower.

"Cohasset is the fifth or sixth most affluent town" in the state, Abbadessa continued, adding that as the economy has worsened, so has the crime rate. "Criminals [will] figure out there are [only] two cars out on the night shift; the town is going to be wide open for breaks. The train is going to bring people in from other areas who will perpetrate crimes. Crime doesn't take a break... crime doesn't take a vacation. People of the town should know what's going on here."

Selectman Leland Jenkins then asked how many officers have been on duty during the night shift over the past 10 years. Treanor responded, "Two or three."

Quigley confirmed in an email that the PD currently schedules three officers from midnight to 8 a.m., but can go down to two.

It may not be a perfect solution, but it seems town officials are committed to keeping the station open — as much as possible.

"We are a safe house, the only public building open 24/7," said Treanor. "We are a resource and hope to provide the level of service people have come to expect; we hope that will continue."

RFP request is reiterated

Selectman Martha Gjesteby once again asked her fellow selectmen to issue an RFP to search for a new full-time Town Manager. Michael Milanoski has been working as Acting Town Manager since former TM Michael Coughlin was removed without cause in March.

Selectman Leland Jenkins asked Gjesteby why she has a problem with Milanoski; Gjesteby responded that while she thinks Milanoski is "doing fine," she wants to hire someone with previous town manager experience. Gjesteby said a town manager should be like a school superintendent for the town, in charge of getting grants and hiring and firing personnel. She also said that it's up to the selectmen to set rules and goals for the town manager and "sit down and talk" about those. Gjesteby added that a town manager "would communicate more efficiently" with the board; she also wondered why Milanoski issued such a robust agenda for a single meeting when the selectmen haven't met in three weeks.

"This is a very long agenda," said Gjesteby. "I don't think we need such a long agenda, that's all... We could have more meetings; we haven't had a meeting in three weeks."

Selectman Diane Kennedy spoke up to support Milanoski. "He's done a better job acting as town manager under the town manager act than the last three town managers," she said. Kennedy added that Milanoski has an 18-month contract, and the selectmen plan to conduct a performance review after his first six months.

"Then we can discuss searching for a new town manager," Kennedy continued, "if that's what we want to do. [But] we've been able to accomplish so much."

Kennedy added that over the past year, the selectmen have met every week; meeting every three weeks this summer is "something the board wanted to do."

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said the board will review Milanoski's performance at the August 21 selectmen's meeting. Under the state Open Meeting Law, the review will be conducted in a public session, without public participation.

Town hiring update noted

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced during Tuesday's selectmen meeting that three town positions - Director of Project Management Planning, Veteran's Agent, and Assistant Accountant - are in the process of being filled.

There are six candidates for the project management position and three finalists, Milanoski said. The veteran's position has been advertised, and the town manager said he is "putting together a team to advise me on that."

He is also moving forward with a new assistant accountant.

Selectman Diane Kennedy thanked Milanoski for including committee members and department heads in the hiring process.

Milanoski responded that he feels it's not only important to find a qualified candidate, "it s important to find the person who's the right fit for Cohasset."

In Memory of

NOBODY SHOULD BE HOMELESS

About the CPA

- The Community Preservation Act was signed into law 10 years ago and from that point on, some 148 cities and towns including Cohasset have adopted the legislation allowing them to obtain Community Preservation Funds to purchase open space; rehabilitate historic structures and develop affordable housing.
- The Community Preservation Committee reviews proposals and recommends appropriating money from the Community Preservation Fund on projects supporting low and moderate income housing, historical preservation, and open space acquisition and preservation. Town Meeting voters have the final say.

CPA funds

- CPA funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined from year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).
- Under the Community Preservation Act, 10 percent of the monies accumulated in a town's Community Preservation Fund must be spent or reserved for preserving open space, 10 percent toward historic preservation, and 10 percent toward community housing. The remaining 70 percent can be spent or reserved for any of the above and recreation. Any money in the fund that is not appropriated can be reserved for future years. Borrowing is also allowed with payments for interest and principal coming out of the fund.

Above, according to DeAngelis Iron Works, who examined the gates and fences at Central Cemetery, the Hall Fence pictured here was poorly designed and should be replaced.

CEMETERY

Preservation Act (CPA) funds toward the project. Central Cemetery planned to pay for $5,000 of the repairs.

After discussion, the CPC members present said they were more comfortable splitting the costs 50-50.

"There are all different variables" with CPA funds, CPC member Susan Sardina explained. "We're not wanting to spend down too far if [state CPA] funds deplete."

CPC member Alexander Koines said that $20,000 of CPA funds "isn't that much" to restore a historic part of town.

Central Cemetery, which is privately owned by its lot owners, has a $1.4 million endowment, but use that money to maintain the cemetery grounds, said Swanborg. "It's tight what we spend money on; we live off the investment of the trust money."

The cemetery is a privately-owned, 501 (c)3 organization, independent on the town. The cemetery, located on North Main Street and Joy Place, was added to the National Historic Register 10 years ago.

The cemetery fence and gate repair project will be underway this week, as the Central Cemetery committee has already gone out to bid for a contractor, Swanborg said during the CPC meeting. CPC Funding for the project still requires a Town Meeting vote, but Swanborg explained that they would like to get the work done before winter starts. Fall Town Meeting could take place as late as December, which is when it fell last year. The repair project should be complete in October.

While CPC members warned Swanborg that starting the project without Town Meeting approval for the funding is a risk, he replied that it's one he's willing to take.

"We feel confident the town will support" the project, said Swanborg. "We want to get going on it — it's going to take eight weeks and it has to be installed before winter sets in."

Swanborg added that starting the project sooner rather that later is crucial, because the cemetery board feels "we have a safety issue" with pieces of the iron fence breaking off.

The CPC also has to place a Preservation Restriction on the property, which must be approved by the Mass. Historical Society.

"The law requires that all historical projects have a Preservation Restriction," CPC Chairman Russ Bonetti explained. He added that Town Counsel is currently reviewing a restriction for the First Parish Meetinghouse Church, which this May's Annual Town Meeting voted to approve $65,000 of CPC funds to repair the church's windows.

Bonetti said at the meeting that the CPC could start the restriction without it being signed and wait until after Mass. Historical signs it.

Sardina said she would appreciate the CPC receiving regular progress reports on the project. "We would like to continue to see what you're going to do and want to be involved as it moves along."

Sardina concluded, "This is a good project; I think we all feel good about it."

The CPC voted 5-0 to fund 50 percent of the restoration project, not to exceed $12,000, with the caveat that the CPC is kept in the loop.

ICE

Allain, a Marshfield resident who installed his first ice dispenser there, is a regular "ice man."

"I personally use a lot of ice," he said, adding that he likes to be able to get fresh ice year-round. "It's fresh, clean ice, good for drinks."

Allain purchased land in Marshfield to open his first ice dispenser, dubbed the South River Ice House, located at 1790 Ocean Street. But first, the ice proprietor did his research. After finding out about similar ice dispensers in an online search, Allain trekked to Georgia, the home of the machine's manufacturer, Ice House America.

Automated ice dispensers are found in 29 states, including Hawaii, said Allain; most of the machines are located in the South. His three machines in Cohasset, Marshfield and Scituate are currently the only three north of the Carolinas, although Allain predicts that could soon change.

"There are a few more coming to the South Shore," he said. Soon, icehouses could appear in Hull, Weymouth and Plymouth.

So far, Allain has gotten a lot of positive feedback from the machines he's installed.

"People really like them," he said. "A lot of people are coming from Hull and Cohasset harbor. And a lot of restaurants come by it. A fairly new restaurant in Cohasset buys a new bag of ice every day."

Another demographic the ice machine is a bit hit with — fishermen.

"Fishermen like it a lot because it doesn't dent the fish," Allain said of the dispensed ice, which is crushed instead of cubed. "Cubed ice puts a dent; that's what they tell me."

Those who have been utilizing the "Twice the Ice" machine on 3A, located near Curtis Liquors and Starbucks, are raving over the machine that was installed last month.

"It's great!" Molly Miller Frame wrote on the Mariner's Facebook page. "Good deal too."

Heather Topor praised the machine for its value and simplicity, writing that it's "so easy to use" and offers ice for "cheaper than stores."

If the feedback from satisfied customers so far is any indication, Cohasset's "Twice the Ice" will soon be just as popular a stop as the one in Marshfield.

"The Marshfield one kills it," said Allain, adding that the South River Ice House took off during its first year in business, even in chillier months.

"In October, November and December, it did really well," Allain said. While traffic tapered off a bit in January and February, come March, the demand for freshly made ice "takes off again."

It's Allain's hope that the Cohasset icehouse will prove to be just as big a hit.
